U. S. Bombers Kill 500 As Reds Hit British At Vital Bridgehead

3 to 6 Divisions Of Chinese Reported In Korea; New Line Formed by Allies

SEOUL, (Sunday), Nov. 5 (AP).—United Nations troops, backed by swarms of diving planes, battled today to protect the keystone of their new defense line in northwest Korea against onslaughts of massing Communists.

The revitalized Red army, now reported to include from three to six Communist divisions, menaced the U. N. defense line north of the Chongchon River by striking toward the only usable bridge the Allies have across it.

British Defend It

The British Commonwealth Twenty-seventh Brigade fought to hold the bridge area near Anju, 47 miles north of the former enemy capital of Pyong-yang. Some Reds succeeded in infiltrating to the brigade's artillery positions.

United States Fifth Air Force fighter-bombers repeatedly pounded the attacking Reds, flying 60 sorties by midday.

The enemy's air force also made a brief appearance. Russian-built yak fighters strafed United States troops 5 miles west of Anju near Sinanju.

While the Reds probed at the new defense line, they massed new forces from the north.

Pilots, despite rain and clouds, spotted the Communist concentrations near Chongju, the western hinge of the new U.N. line, and at Yongbyon, 33 miles farther east. American reinforcements rushed up to plug a gap 8 miles southwest of Yongbyon.

500 Reported Slain

To the rear, a large enemy truck convoy streamed down from the Yalu River separating Korea and Manchuria, pilots said.

The bombers, who attacked near Chongju, estimated they killed 500 Reds. Jets and light bombers also struck the Yongbyon force but were unable to assess the results.

Planes also spotted the truck convoy, moving southeastward from the Suiho Reservoir on the Yalu River. There was no report of air attacks on the convoy.

Key to the new U. N. defense line, set up after withdrawals of up to 50 miles, was the bottleneck bridge across the Chongchon River at Anju. Late Saturday, United States reinforcements checked a Communist attack only 10 miles northeast of Anju.

The Eighth Army reported other Red forces had limited successes Saturday in operations south of the Chongchon in the Kunu area at a point 15 miles east and slight-

U. N. on Alert For Red Chinese Action in Korea

LAKE SUCCESS, Nov. 4 (AP).—United Nations diplomats are on the alert for any call for an emergency Security Council session to deal with Chinese Communist intervention in the Korean war.

Officials pointed out, however, that the U. N. can take no action until it has an official report from General MacArthur detailing the extent and kind of Red Cninese aid being given the North Koreans. They said such a report, if made, probably would be sent through Washington and brought to the Council by United States Delegate Warren R. Austin as a complaint of aggression against the Peiping Communist government.

American sources said the State Department and the Pentagon were making every effort to gather the facts. Until those facts are assembled and evaluated, they said, it would be impossible to say what action the United States will take.

Kitten Returned Through Post Ad

When a black kitten wearing a collar and bell crossed the path of Mrs. R. O. Harris of Arlington, Virginia, Mrs. Harris knew that it was a bit of bad luck for the person who had lost the kitten.

In an effort to find the owner rapidly and conveniently, Mrs. Harris called The Washington Post and placed a Found ad, describing the kitten.

The day the ad appeared, the owner called to claim his pet.

If you've found something, or lost something lately, see that it's returned by placing a want ad in The Washington Post, just as Mrs. Harris did. All you have to do is call NAtional 4200 and ask for classified.

Roosevelt Private Papers To Be Published in The Post

"FDR: His Personal Letters," consisting of private correspondence and papers from 1928 to 1945, will be published serially in The Washington Post in 31 daily installments, starting next Sunday, November 12.

Syndication rights for the third and fourth volumes of the Roosevelt collection, which will appear on book stands within a month, have just been acquired from United Features Syndicate, Inc., which also released to this newspaper earlier volumes in the series.

The public seldom has access to personal files such as these so soon after their author has figured preeminently in national and world affairs. The papers of some of the Presidents have not been released until decades after death.

The FDR letters in these final volumes deal with his most active political life, in the governor's office in Albany and the White House. They cover all the presidential years from the New Deal through the war, up to his death.

The Roosevelt buoyancy and optimism, in the face of all kinds of difficulty, appears repeatedly.

The prewar papers show his changing attitude on many phases of the crisis. They contain a fascinating disclosure of how FDR veered from blunt, outright opposition to any kind of old-age destroyer deal to support of the transaction with Great Britain. They show him slowly making up his mind, testing the mind of the country, sometimes resisting pressure for more vigorous action.

Politics behind a generation of American government is to be seen in these volumes. Roosevelt the politician, as his letters show, was perfectly capable of blandly disavowing presidential aspirations on one sheet of paper while urging his lieutenants to the tasks

4 Killed as Plane Crashes Near U. S. 1 Below Alexandria

Three soldiers and a civilian were killed last night when their plane crashed near a tourist court on U. S. 1 while the pilot was trying to reach Hybla Valley Airport for a landing.

Three of the dead were identified at Alexandria Hospital as Russell C. Williams, 31, of Sandston, Va.; Corpl. Richard D. Gieras, 23, of Camp Pickett, Va., and Pfc. Thomas Pontaleo, age not reported, also of Camp Pickett.

A third soldier, who was burned to death as he sat in one of the two seats behind the controls, was removed to Fort Belvoir. His name was not released pending notification by Army officials of next of kin.

Virginia State police said Williams was the pilot of the plane. He was employed by Cavalier Air-Transport, a Richmond company which charters private flights. The plane left Byrd Field in Richmond at 7:20 p. m. and was scheduled to land in Washington.

The Beechcraft Bonanza plane crashed at the foot of Snake Hill, about three miles south of Alexandria, shortly before 8 p. m. It nose-dived into the earth about 40 feet from the cabins of the Mount Vernon Lodge motor court, after skimming over the rooftops of the cabins.

The plane exploded into small pieces as it crashed and immediately became an inferno of flames, witnesses said.

All but the unidentified soldier were thrown out when it exploded, their clothes flaming. Two of them rolled over and over on the ground, trying to extinguish the flames. The third did not move.

All three were taken to Alexandria Hospital by the Penn-Daw Rescue Squad. Williams and Gieras were pronounced dead on arrival and Pontaleo died at the hospital a few minutes later.

Officials at Hybla Valley Airport said they believed the pilot was trying to land there as an emergency measure and overshot the field. They said the airport lights were not on.

Clifton G. Lanfersiek, who lives only about 30 feet from the scene of the crash said he saw the plane trying to gain altitude just a few seconds before the crash.

It skimmed over the tops of the cabins in the Mt. Vernon Lodge court, hit a tree top and nosed into the ground, Lanfersiek reported.

He said he rushed to the scene and tried to help the two men trying to put out their flaming clothes by rolling.

"They were moaning and cry-

Chinese Reds Ask Volunteers To Aid N. Korea

Air-Raid Shelters Reported Being Dug In Mukden, Manchuria

TOKYO (Sunday) Nov. 5 (U.P.).—The Communist conquerors of China pledged their full support tonight to North Korea in its war against the United Nations and appealed for Chinese volunteers to "undertake the sacred task" of resisting United States "aggression" in the Orient.

Informed quarters here feared the pledge was a prelude to an open and official declaration of intervention in the Korean war by the Chinese Communist government to defend the border areas. They said they did not expect any declaration of war against the United States.

[The Associated Press said the official Chinese Communist radio at Peiping announced that air raid shelters were being built in Mukden, leading industrial city of Manchuria.]

The New China News Agency, government-dominated news service, broadcast a declaration which it said was issued in Peiping by the "various democratic parties of China," including the Communist Party and 10 affiliated organizations.

The declaration said China's security was being seriously threatened by U. S. action in the Far East. It charged the U. S. launched the Korean war, violated China's rights by protecting Formosa with the U. S. Navy and ordered "aggression" in Indo-China.

The declaration also urged volunteers to "undertake the sacred task of resisting America, aiding Korea, protecting their homes and defending their country."

It accused the U. S. of attacking Korea as a screen, when the real motive was to invade China.

"Just as with the Japanese imperialists in the past, the main objective of U. S. aggression in Korea is not Korea itself, but China," it said.

Nation-Wide Phone Strike Seems Certain, Beirne Says

A Nation-wide telephone strike against the Bell Telephone System "seems inevitable" for 6 a. m. Thursday, Joseph A. Beirne, president of the CIO Communications Workers of America, said yesterday.

For this, Beirne blamed "the uncompromising position of telephone management" in the year-long dispute between 17,000 union employes and Western Electric, the Bell System's manufacturing subsidiary.

A strike of the Western Electric workers is expected to tie up some 300,000 other Bell employes—including some 7000 working here for the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. and the Long Lines Division of American Telephone and Telegraph Co. The CWA members are pledged to respect the picket lines which the Western Electric workers plan to place around all Bell installations, including central offices here.

CWA President Beirne is scheduled to make a Nationwide appeal for public understanding and support in a broadcast via a national network at 7:30 tonight.

The direct dispute involves Western Electric and three union divisions covering the WE installers, sales personnel, and production men. The union charges that the best company contract offer amounts to around an average of 9½ cents an hour increase in benefits, with the company insisting on the sole right to determine the distribution of the benefits.

"What's probably even worse," Beirne charged, "is that the company is seeking to freeze wages at these levels for 18 months without giving us an opportunity for review during that time."

Lane Calls Session to Cut Sales Levy

Maryland Governor Answers Challenge By McKeldin With Nov. 10 Summons

BALTIMORE, Nov. 4 (AP). Governor Lane today called the Legislature into special session for November 10 to remove the States sales tax from restaurant meals and exempt all purchases up to 50 cents.

Lane issued his proclamation in the closing hours of the general election campaign.

He said he did so to "eliminate completely the efforts of the Republican candidate for Governor to befuddle the public about the redemption of the Democratic Party's platform pledge to cut the sales tax."

The Governor previously had said he would call the special session if he were reelected next Tuesday.

In today's statement he said Theodore R. McKeldin, the Republican nominee, had chosen to "represent me as bargaining for reelection by saying that I would take this action if it is made my responsibility to do so."

Therefore, Lane said, "I will assume the responsibliity of doing it—win, lose or draw."

Food purchased for home consumption is now exempt from the sales tax but the levy is collected on restaurant meals. All purchases up to 14 cents are exempt now. Lane's plan also calls for exemption of soaps and household cleansers.

The telegrams sent to the members of the Legislature set 10 a.m. as the hour for convening next Friday. The administration expects it to be a short session.

The sales-tax changes are a part of the Democratic platform. The Republicans have them, too, but they also are in favor of eventual abolition of the tax.

Meanwhile, Republican candidate McKeldin issued a statement in which he said there still are many questions "which Mr. Lane has failed to answer and on which I have stated my position firmly and positively."

"Why does Mr. Lane persist in his statement that he built 262 new schools when only 47 have actually been built and all of them with the proceeds of local bond issues?

"How and by what authority does Mr. Lane continue to keep the State budget hidden as a personal secret?

"Why does Mr. Lane persist in his failure for more than two years to fill vacancies in the vital Department of Public Welfare . . .?"

And lastly, McKeldin asked:

"And why has Mr. Lane, accustomed to 'deals,' surpassed even himself now by trading off his friends to appease his enemies?"

Both candidates were out tonight, fulfilling a dozen or more speaking engagements and appearing at rallies in all parts of Baltimore City.

Don't Dump Low-Grade Milk On Maryland, Lane Tells D. C.

By Melvin Altshuler

Post Reporter

Maryland's Governor William Preston Lane, jr., entered the District's milk controversy yesterday—to see to it, he wrote Commissioner John Russell Young—that "Maryland does not become a dumping ground for low-grade milk which the District rejects for its consuming public."

His letter to Young dealt with one phase of the complex milk question: The District Commissioners' decision that milk or cream may be brought into the District from locally unlicensed sources for distribution to consumers outside of Washington.

Wrote Lane: "This is such an unusual procedure for a Government organization that I am constrained to ask as to why this was done.

"On what basis does the District of Columbia Health Department decide to permit milk to be imported by District . . . distributing agencies to be sold in Maryland when that milk was not regarded of a quality fit to be sold in the District of Columbia?

"Fundamentally," Lane's letter continues, "I doubt seriously that our State Health Department will wish to issue permits to District of Columbia dairies to sell milk in Maryland that is not regarded as fit for consumption in Washington."

Lane asked for two lists:

1. The "source of supplies that have been approved by the District . . . Health Department for sale to Maryland people but that have not been approved for sale to District of Columbia people."

2. The names of District distributors of milk who plan to send milk and cream to Maryland "under the new arrangement proposed by your health department."

"We want this information so that we may take proper steps to see that the consuming public in Maryland receives milk of high quality . . ." Lane explained.

The District's director of public health, Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, called Governor Lane's letter "very interesting."

"All milk that comes into the District of Columbia," Seckinger explained, "is certified as Grade A milk either by a State health department or by the United States Public Health Service."

But, said Seckinger, "if the State of Maryland does not wish to accept the certification, it is certainly within its rights not to do so.

"We will certainly cooperate with Maryland in every way we can."

The point of State and USPHS certification was made by James J. Ward, president of Embassy Dairy, in a communication to Lane.

Until October 1, Ward said, "all our supply came from the State of Maryland or District permittees." Since then demand has exceeded supply from these sources and Ohio and Pennsylvania milk has been imported, "which milk is of equal quality and purity with that received from the farmers on the Eastern Shore . . .

"Embassy independently tests all milk received by it for purity and quality. You may be assured that the residents and citizens of Maryland are receiving a high quality of pure, clean, wholesome Grade A milk."

Ward's letter also made the point that Embassy is owned by the Greenspring Dairy—a Baltimore firm.

Truman Hits 'Lie Campaign,' Sees G. O. P. Victory as Peril To U. S. Peace and Prosperity

Stassen Declares Chinese Reds Were 'Coddled;' Attacks 'Careless' Spending

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 4 (AP).—Republican leader Harold E. Stassen charged tonight that because the Truman Administration "coddled" Chinese Communists, American troops are now suffering their highest casualties of the Korean war.

Replying to President Truman's campaign speech in St. Louis, Stassen declared that thousands of American young men "are locked in a bloody battle with 100,000 Chinese Communists in the rugged mountains of North Korea."

This week, he said, American casualties have been higher than any week since the start of the Korean war. Then he added:

"I solemnly charge that this is the direct and terrible result of five years of building up Chinese Communist strength through the blinded, bewildering American Asiatic policy under our present national Administration.

"It has been five years of coddling Chinese Communists, five years of undermining General MacArthur, five years of snubbing friendly freedom-loving Asiatics, and five years of appeasing the arch-Communist Mao Tse-tung," leader of the Chinese Reds.

Stassen, 1948 GOP presidential aspirant, also lit into the home front policies of the Democrats under President Truman. He accused the Administration of "careless, wasteful financial policies" and of taking the American people down a "slippery inflation road."

"The hour has come when for the good of America a sweeping Republican congressional victory should be voted from coast to coast," Stassen declared in a major GOP bid for control of the new Congress.

Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania, was booked on a Nation-wide radio hookup immediately after the conclusion of Mr. Truman's speech from St. Louis. The speeches built up to the campaign climax Tuesday, Election Day.

At the outset of his speech before a Connecticut Republican rally here, Stassen alluded to the attempt of two Puerto Rican revolutionists to assassinate Mr. Truman Wednesday.

"I say with deep sincerity," Stassen remarked, "that I join with every citizen in America, of both political parties, in expressing commendation to the United States Secret Service for their alert and courageous performance of their duty in defending the President."

Stassen also expressed sympathy

Extraordinary Security Measures

President Leads Mourners At Pvt. Coffelt's Funeral

By Bill Brinkley

Post Reporter

Led by a moist-eyed President Truman, the Nation yesterday gave a hero's burial to Leslie Coffelt, the White House policeman who gave up his life to save the President from possible assassination.

Coffelt was laid to rest in Arlington Cemetery near a Confederate Monument inscribed with what might well be in his own epitaph:

Not for fame or reward, not for place or for rank . . . But in simple obedience to duty, these men suffered all, sacrificed all, dared all—and died.

Under extraordinary Secret Service and police guard, the President and Mrs. Truman attended both the services in Fort Myer Chapel and the graveside services for the man who fell at Blair House Wednesday with his gun blazing at a would-be assassin.

An open car carrying nine Seret Service men with the car door held open in preparedness, followed the President's limousine from the White House to the cemetery.

Concentration of Metropolitan motorcycle police was drawn up at the chapel itself.

Most striking feature of the security measures was afforded as the cortege, including the President's car, moved at funeral pace from chapel to graveside.

Spotted on the alert in the woods and among the graves lining the road were infantrymen of the Third "Old Guard" Regiment armed with rifles.

Private Coffelt was given a funeral of unstinted honor. Soldiers in ceremonial blue bore the flag-draped casket through a double lane of honorary pallbearers of Coffelt's comrades in the White House police and his brothers in the Masonic order. An escort guard consisting of a platoon from the Third Infantry was drawn up in tribute.

The sky was heavy with clouds as the President's black limousine emerged from the White House but the sun broke through just as the President stepped from the car at 10:58 a. m. and walked the few steps into the chapel.

Illinois GOP Hopes to Gain 4 House Seats

Belief Based on Crime Probe; Democrats Have Hopes Downstate

By Robert C. Albright

Post Reporter

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Thanks to the Senate's crime investigation, Republicans say they have a good chance to latch on to four of five Democratic House seats in Illinois, mainly located in this long-time Cook County haven of the old Capone syndicate.

The Kefauver committee turned up just enough evidence and suspicion of gambler's gifts to some Chicago policemen to hurt this city's whole Democratic ticket.

Some otherwise "safe" House Democratic seats are now doubtful as a result. No Democratic Congressmen or Senators are involved in any way in the scandals. But since Chicago is a Democratic city, they seem the logical target for the voters to hit.

Cook County seats Republicans say they have a good chance to win include the Second District, now held by Representative Barrett O'Hara, the Third District, represented by Representative Neil J. Linehan, the Fourth District of Representative James V. Buckley, and the Eleventh District, held by Representative Chester A. Chesney.

Outside of Chicago's pot-boiling orbit, Republicans hope to take back one downstate seat, the Daughters of Charity Superior Honored for Work of Order

By Richard Morris

Washington was host yesterday to a spectacle which testified that charity, though it may begin at home, extends to the farthest reaches of the world.

This theme pervaded the third day's meeting of the Thirty-sixth National Conference of Catholic Charities, climaxed by the presentation, to a visitor from Paris, of what the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, called the "symbol of the internationalism of Christian charity."

This highlight of the conference took place at the Catholic University gymnasium before a gathering of 1100 nuns of various orders, and 900 other persons.

The Most Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, rector of the university, presented the first Frederick Ozanam Medal for "outstanding national or international Catholic welfare work" to Mother Marie Antoinette Blanchot of Paris, superioress of the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul.

The mother superior represents 47,000 Daughters of Charity over the world—300 of whom were present at the ceremony.

"The University also feels it is honoring more than 100,000 of our own sisters, who look to Catholic University as a capstone of education," he declared.

After receiving the medal, named for the founder of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul in America and a former scholar at

President Charges Republicans Lost 'Patriotic Decency' In Seeking Votes

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Reporter

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 4. President Truman tonight accused "certain vote-hungry Republican politicians" of waging "a campaign of lies," and said they had "lost . . . all sense of patriotic decency" at a time of great national peril.

He mentioned no names. There was no doubt, however, that he was aiming at what the Democrats call "McCarthyism"—that is, Republicans who have gone along with Senator Joseph C. McCarthy (R., Wis.), in charging that the Government harbors Communists.

Mr. Truman said that the two big issues of the 1950 political campaign were isolationism and prosperity. He said that a vote for isolationism next Tuesday would be "a vote for national suicide," and he taunted the Republicans for their "tommyrot" about socialism when 62 million Americans have jobs and corporations are earning 40 billion dollars a year.

Mr. Truman delivered this, his only outright political speech of the campaign, at a Democratic rally in the St. Louis Kiel Auditorium. It was here that he wound up his whistle-stop tour of 1948. And, as on that occasion two years ago, he predicted tonight that the Democratic Party would score a triumph in the congressional elections Tuesday.

The Chief Executive was under an extraordinarily heavy guard throughout the day and night because of the attempt on his life at Blair House Wednesday.

More than 600 St. Louis policemen, double the usual number, were on the job in and around the Jefferson Hotel and the Kiel Auditorium. The entire day shift of 450 patrolmen and 20 captains had been ordered to work overtime tonight.

The St. Louis cops were taking no chances. Among those held up at the entrance of the Jefferson, after Mr. Truman had gone in, was Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder. His department embraces the Secret Service.

A crowd of about 11,000 turned out in the auditorium to hear Mr. Truman, which meant that there were about 2000 empty seats.

When Mr Truman walked out on the flag-draped stage the crowd yelled, clapped, and waved "Hello, Harry" placards. One man cut loose with a siren.

The President finally silenced

Youth Broadcasts Air Raid Report, Panics Neighbors

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (AP).—Stanley Gordon, 23, was charged tonight with disorderly conduct for "causing fear by broadcasting with an amplifier."

His arrest came after Bronx residents poured from apartment buildings and cars and sought air raid shelters, fearing an enemy attack on the city.

Hundreds of people within 200 yards of Gordon's apartment heard the following announcement.

"Enemy planes are approaching New York City . . . All residences black out . . . The enemy is 40 miles away.

"Be prepared for an atomic attack . . . Run for shelter."

A siren wailed in the background.

Fear gripped almost everyone in the street.

Police driving by were beset by an estimated 500 frightened persons.

Then, police found Gordon, grinning and playing with a four-watt public address system he had built.

Gordon said he had no idea his set had such carrying power.

"I was in my own kitchen," Gordon protested, adding he closed his broadcast with this announcement:

"All enemy planes accounted for and destroyed."

Gordon appeared later tonight in Night Court and was sentenced to serve 30 days in the workhouse.

200 Planes Sighted by Air Raid Spotters Here

The Washington Post

SEARCH THE SKY—Aircraft spotters at the 42 observation posts that will guard the city from air attacks had a rehearsal yesterday as planes flew over the area at various speeds and altitudes and were spotted and reported to a central station. Shown at the post at the Nalle School, 50th and Bass sts. se., where Commissioner Gordon R. Young watched the proceedings are, left to right, Frederick A. Minor, observer; Lorenzo Miller, chief observer; Harry L. Burbridge, supervisor, and General Young

The District, like 23 Northeastern States, had its first aircraft spotter test yesterday, and a couple of dozen southeast residents discovered that looking for airplanes isn't the easiest way to make a living.

For nine hours of wind, sun and rain they stood on the roof of the Nalle School at 50th and Bass sts. se., and searched the sky for airplanes. They reported about 200 to the filter center at Baltimore, Supervisor Harry L. Burbridge said. Among them may have been Air Force planes sent to test the effectiveness of the 6000 volunteer spotter posts set up on the east coast and in most Northern States east of the Rockies.

The job of the visual spotters is to supplement the Nation's radar screen. All aircraft, except those landing or taking off, are reported to a filter center. There the information is sifted and sent to headquarters of the Eastern Air Defense Force, which would decide on sending up planes to intercept an enemy.

At the District's only post (there are 42 in the area), observers stood on a platform on the roof of the two-story school. When a plane was picked up, binoculars were turned on it to try for identification. Then information on altitude and direction of flight, type and number of aircraft was relayed by direct phone to Baltimore.

The Air Force organization plan called for a two-man crew—one to spot and one to phone. With planes coming in from every direction at the same time, Burbridge found this wasn't enough. At 1:30 p. m. he had eight men trying to keep up with the planes, and couldn't call reports in fast enough.

District civil defense officials watched the drill for a while and complimented the crew on their interest and speed in getting organized. Burbridge was named to set up the post a week ago. In three days he picked a site, selected 30 observers and started a training program.

Reports from other cities indicated the drills were going on despite heavy rains. The United Press said 1500 spotters were on the job in the Chicago area despite heavy rains that kept the test flights grounded. They worked with commercial flights that were usually out of sight in the clouds. The drill will conclude with another nine-hour session today.

1 Killed, 10 Hurt in Fire

CLEVELAND, Nov. 4 (AP).—One man died and at least 10 other persons were hurt or overcome by smoke today in a fire which swept through the top of the five-floor Alhambra Theater building. A theater audience in the lower part of the building reached safety and tenants of the apartments were helped out by firemen.

Army Lieut. Lippincott of D. C. Wounded for Second Time

A young wife of a Washington Army lieutenant has learned that her husband has been seriously wounded for a second time in the Korean fighting and is soon expecting a promotion to captain.

Lieut. Lippincott

Word came through a "buddy" of First Lieut. John C. Lippincott, that the lieutenant was recuperating from another wound. The friend occupied a cot in a Korean hospital next to Lieut. Lippincott, and upon his discharge, notified the wife, Mrs. Margaret Lippincott, now living in Tokyo.

Lieut. Lippincott was first wounded on August 12. According to the Defense Department, he was "seriously" wounded again on October 15, but no details were given.

Young Mrs. Lippincott wrote her mother-in-law, Mrs. Norman R. Lippincott of 2900 30th st. se., that "John's buddy said he was feeling fine and walking around a little."

He was with the First Cavalry Division.

Eisenhower's Son Hurt in Crash

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Nov. 4 (U.P.).—Capt. John Eisenhower, 28-year-old son of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, was injured near here today in an automobile collision while en route to the Army-Pennsylvania football game.

Officials at Memorial Hospital said Eisenhower suffered injuries to the left eye, right shoulder and left, foot, but was in good condition.

Eisenhower was riding with two other Army captains from West Point, Charles Sampson, 30, and Robert E. Morrison, 26, in a car driven by Maj. John Karrick.

Their car collided with an auto driven by Jean Francis Viehle, 34, of Newark, N. J. Julia Gardner, 15, a passenger, was thrown through the windshield and suffered multiple cuts on the face.

Red Coup Reported In Tibetan Capital

NEW DELHI, India (Sunday), Nov. 5 (U.P.).—Pro-Communist Tibetans, led by two leftist monks, seized control of the government at Lhasa after the 16-year-old Dalai Lama fled before the advancing Chinese Red armies, reports reaching here today said.

Some opposition to the Red coup was reported, but it was put down quickly. A dispatch from Kalimpong, on the India-Tibet frontier, said the pro-Communists took over the government after "a slight commotion." It said conditions in Lhasa now were normal.

Chinese Communist troops advancing on Lhasa from the north were reported to have reached Nagchuk-Dzong, 130 miles from the capital, where Tibetans were girded for a last-ditch battle to protect the Dalai Lama's escape to India.

The two leftist monks were described as supporters of the 13-year-old Panchen Lama, rival to the Dalai Lama. The boys are believed by Tibetans to be reincarnations of Buddha.

The Dalai Lama and his followers are anti-Chinese; the Panchen Lama and his supporters are pro-Chinese, and the latter have the backing of Chinese Communist troops.

There was no indication yet what effect the coup in Lhasa would have on the fighting in the north.

There was no estimate of the number of Tibetan troops dug in at Nagehuk-Dzong. Before the Chinese invasion, Tibet's army was estimated at 40,000 foot soldiers—8000 regulars, 12,000 reserves and 20,000 new recruits.

Reports yesterday placed a spearhead of Reds driving from the north within 50 miles of Lhasa, but there was no confirmation.

The Dalai Lama, his 73-year-old Regent Taktra Rimpoche and a retinue of 50 reportedly were finding heavy going on their 357-mile flight to Darjeeling.

Recent heavy rains were said to have caused landslides blocking the road at several points. The route normally takes about two weeks by mule.

There still was no official confirmation the Dalai Lama had fled.

The Indian government sent an urgent message to Lhasa, seeking confirmation, but official sources said there has been no answer. Dr. Sinha, head of the Indian Mission in Tibet, has sent no report since last Sunday.

There was silence also from Peiping, where Indian Ambassador Sardar Pannikar delivered India's stern protest of China's invasion.

Rebel Capital Of Amboina Captured

JAKARTA, Indonesia, Nov. 4 (AP).—The Indonesian government announced today its troops have captured Amboina, the capital and major stronghold of a rebel government which has ruled the South Moluccas since April 26.

"The fall of Amboina is tantamount ot the complete capitulation of the rebel forces," said the vice minister of defense, Dr. Ali Boediardjo.

Neutral observers speculated, however, that Amboinese troops might carry on guerilla warfare across the South Moluccas—part of the once-famed Spice Islands which lie between Celebes and New Guinea. The town of Amboina lies on an island of the same name, where Indonesian government troops made an amphibious landing September 28. The town was reported to have been occupied yesterday. In the interval, earthquakes and a gigantic tidal wave battered the area.

About 150,000 persons live in the islands. The Dutch obtained there many troops for colonial service during their rule over Indonesia, which ended last December. These helped them in their long fight against Indonesian Republicans. The swift moves by Jakarta after independence from a federal form of government toward a unitary state annoyed the Amboinese, already aware of Javanese dominance.

The independence declaration of last April said the people of the Moluccas—Amboina, Banda and the key islands, Ceram and Aru—no longer felt secure and were cutting their ties with the United States of Indonesia. The revolt was the fourth in four months against the central regime of Premier Mohamed Hatta.

Lie, U.S. Differ on Admitting Consultants to U.N. Sessions

LAKE SUCCESS, Nov. 4 (NYHT). — Secretary General Trygve Lie today said the United States is legally bound to admit accredited U. N. consultants into this country for sessions of the General Assembly and consultations with the U. N. Secretariat.

The Secretary General's view was filed in a special report requested by the U. N. Economic and Social Council.

The issue arose over United States action in barring Georges Fischer, U. N. observer for the Communist-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions, an organization with consultative status before the Economic and Social Council, when Fischer arrived here last September to attend the Assembly.

Taken to Ellis Island

Although he held a transit visa from the United States Embassy in Paris to U. N. headquarters, Fischer was taken to Ellis Island. There, Lie reported, he "remained in custody until he was involuntarily returned to France on September 22, 1950."

Lie told the Council his staff had discussed the problem with U. S. officials, and had learned the U. S. based its action on the interpretation that the American Headquarters Agreement of 1947 with the U.N. did not entitle Fischer to attend Assembly meetings.

There was no dispute over Fischer's right to attend sessions of the Economic and Social Council. Lie said the U. S. mission here had notified him a new visa application by Fischer for the specific purpose of attending the Council "would be granted."

The Council had asked Lie to report both on the Fischer case and implications of the new Internal Security Act.

Lie reported he was "not prepared to state" whether the new legislation conflicted with the Headquarters Agreement, since the U. S. itself had not rendered an officila interpretaation.

U. N. Votes 38 to 10 to Lift Diplomatic Blockade of Spain

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (AP)—The United Nations today lifted its four-year-old diplomatic blockade of Franco Spain.

Sweeping aside Soviet protests, the U. N. voted also ta allow Spain to join U. N. specialized agencies such as the World Health and Postal Organizations.

The U. N. kept on the book, however, the 1946 denunciation of the Franco regime and [illegible] Spain's full entry into the U. N.

The roll-call vote in the General Assembly was 38 in favor and 10 against a U. S.-backed Latin-American resolution softening the restrictions. Twelve nations abstained.

The 1946 action recommended to U.N. members that they withdraw all envoys of ambassadorial or ministerial rank from Madrid.

The Assembly decision leaves it up to members to decide for themselves whether to send their top diplomats back to Madrid. Similarly it leaves it to special U. N. agencies to vote on Spanish membership.

While the United States supported the resolution, President Truman told a news conference Thursday it will be a long, long time before this country sends an Ambassador to Spain. The United States at present has a charge d'affaires in Madrid.

Some Latin-American nations already have established full-dress diplomatic relations with Spain, despite the 1946 U. N. embargo.

Reports from Madrid have described Spain as showing no enthusiasm about joining only special U. N. organizations. The Spanish press has clamored for full membership or nothing.

As they did in the Special Political Committee earlier this week, Guatemala, Israel, Mexico, Uruguay and Yugoslavia joined the five Soviet-bloc countries in opposing the resolution.

The abstainers were Britain, France, Australia, Burma, Cuba, Denmark, Ethiopia, India, Indonesia, New Zealand, Norway an Sweden.

French in Indo-China Quit Line of Forts Near Hanoi

SAIGON, Indo-China, Nov. 4 (U.P.).—French military headquarters today announced abandonment of a 25-mile string of forts southwest of Hanoi, hinting the northern metropolis is in danger of encirclement from the Communist Viet Minh army.

The high command disclosed also that a small-scale battle between French and Red forces has taken place southeast of Hanoi and that Communist probing of French defenses to the northeast is increasing.

The reports were the most ominous since the French admitted in September that Ho Chi Minh's legions, exploding from Communist China, had opened up an offensive.

Hanoi, second only to Saigon in size and importance in Indo-China, is the gateway to the Red River delta. It is ringed on the northwest, north and northeast by French defenses drawn close after the collapse of fortresses from Laokay to Langson on the Red China border.

The French said the forts on the southwest were surrendered under "strong enemy threats," indicating a rebel drive may be building up from that direction. He said they extended south like a large finger from Hoa Binh, French stronghold 33 miles southwest of Hanoi on the Noire River.

Civilians had been evacuated earlier, he said, and the withdrawal was proceeding smoothly.

The battalion and a half of mixed colonial and native troops who evacuated Laokay Wednesday were reported proceeding "in good order" somewhere west of the Red River. Bad weather still hampered air cover.

500 Massed Reds Killed by Bombers

ly north of Anju. Attacking with tanks and self-propelled guns, the Reds seized the town of Won, five miles north of Kunu.

The Reds then captured hill positions east of Kunu, were driven off by counterattacking South Koreans then retook the positions late in the day.

These Reds on the south side of the Chongchon were in position to drive down in behind the Anju bridge. They did not press their attacks yesterday.

An American officer said South Korean army authorities estimated six Chinese Communist divisions had entered Korea from Manchuria.

The statement came shortly after other American officers announced one Chinese Red division was battling the Allies in northeast Korea and equivalents of two other Chinese divisions were fighting Allied forces in the northwest.

300,000 Along Border

An American spokesman for the Korean military advisory group said Korean Republican officers placed the number of Chinese Communist soldiers already committed to the Korean war at 75,000.

A high-ranking officer of the U. S. Eighth Army said the Chinese Reds have probably 300,000 troops deployed along the Korean-Manchurian boundary and perhaps about one million more within "committing distance"—ready to strike from their present locations.

The Chinese units identified in the northwest are only of battalion size, the officer said, but the total number of battalions identified indicates the Chinese strength there amounts to two divisions.

So far, he added, there is no "pattern of proof" that the Chinese are fighting as regimental or divisional units.

A United States Marine spokesman, however, said a full Chinese Communist division, operating openly as one unit, was identified in northeast Korea, around the Chanjin reservoir.

The Marine said the division was composed of the Chinese 370th, 371st and 372d Regiments.

General MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters said Allied withdrawal strategy was "almost complete" in the big danger spot of the new U. N. front—around Unsan and Kunu Island from the west coast.

It was in this area that Korean and Chinese Reds had trapped parts of two United States First Cavalry Division regiments and slashed to pieces elements of the South Korean Sixth Division.

Half of Regiment Escapes

At least half of the Cavalry Division's Eighth Regiment had escaped from a Red trap sprung Thursday south of Unsan. An Eighth Army spokesman said there was reason tto believe those still trapped would make their way out.

There was no further word from another First Cavalry unit, about half a battalion, trapped west of Unsan.

The First Cavalry Division had gone to the aid of the South Korean Sixth Division when both were hit sharply by a strong Red counterblow Thursday.

Generally, the new Allied front in northwest Korea followed a line beginning at Chongju on the northwest coast and running northeastward, just north of the Chongchon River.

The line, the spokesman said, was drawn for the next U. N. action as well as for defense reasons.

Roadblock Wiped Out

A battalion of the United States Twenty-fourth Division fought to freedom through a Red roadblock north of the line Saturday. It had been cut off several hours in freezing weather. The unit lost several vehicles in fighting its way back to Allied lines.

The roadblock was 6 miles northwest of Kunu and just south of the point where Chinese Reds earlier had trapped a battalion of the First Cavalry Division.

To the northeast, the United States Seventh Marine Regiment advanced northward through Sudong toward the Changjin Reservoir after smashing a roadblock which Reds had slipped behind its two lead battalions Friday.

The Marines were heading for a fight with the Chinese Communist 124th Division grouped around the reservoir. The Chinese apparently were sent there to defend the hydroelectric installation which supplies some power to Red Manchuria as well as to North Korea.

Another Marine column drove through a Red roadblock behind the lines 75 miles to the south and struck within 4 miles of a Marine battalion isolated for three days at Majon. Majon is 16 miles west of the port of Wonsan.

The battalion was reported well entrenched and not under attack.

Guerillas Wear U. S. Uniforms

Marines and the United States Tenth Corps "Raider" Company, organized to fight red guerillas, attacked a band of 1000 bypassed Communists 16 miles north of Wonsan with tanks Friday. A Marine combat correspondent said 41 slain guerillas were captured in American uniforms.

A tank-led patrol of the United States Seventh Division was reported battling a Communist force 12 miles northwest of Pukchong, 20 miles inland from Iwon, where the division landed unopposed on October 29.

The location was 35 miles behind the division's farthest point of advance.

Numbers and nationality of the Reds in this behind-the-lines fight were not reported to Seventh Division headquarters.

Headquarters officers identified as Chinese a strong force which fought the forward elements of the Seventh Division Thursday and Frida‑ n‑a‑ Pungsan.

Seventh Drives for Border

Although surprised, the United States 17th Regimental Combat Team threw back the Reds four miles northwest of Pungsan Thursday and captured two hills. On Friday the Americans captured in battle a snowy mountain pass six miles northwest of Pungsan.

The team, northernmost of all American units in Korea, was about 38 miles south of the Manchurian border.

Maj. Gen. David Barr, commander of the Seventh Division, said that despite the trouble behind the lines the division would drive to the Manchurian border "as fast as we can" after getting all men and supplies ashore.

In the far northeast, a column of the South Korean Capital Division in Kilchu lashed out at a force of about 1500 Reds menacing the important road center from the north.

Kilchu, the northernmost point of the Allied advance, is 60 miles southwest of Chongjin, last big port on the east coast of Korea between the Allies and the Siberian-Korean border.

Adenauer Appeals to France For Role in Europe's Defense

FRANKFURT, Germany, Nov. 4 (AP).—West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer tonight appealed to France to let West Germany "share in the defense of freedom."

The chancellor's plea was applauded by 2000 Germans during a state election campaign speech at Stuttgart.

Adenauer urged that France "recognize the need for European solidarity" and give up its opposition to rearming West Germans to serve in a united European defense army. He denounced his political foe, Kurt Schumacher, Socialist leader, for "giving the world the impression that we do not want to defend our own freedom."

The chancellor spoke 24 hours after the United States had published a warning to Germans they had better stop "haggling" over conditions and get ready to do their part in European defense against Communist aggression. The warning appeared in the Neue Zeitung, the Americans' official German-language newspaper..

The article cited this utterance from an unnamed German leader as an example of why American patience is worn thin: "We prefer to see healthy people Bolshevized in undamaged houses rather than as cripples in foxholes."

It said American policy opposed reestablishment of a German national army and welcomed the fact that the German people also opposed it.

"However, the United States oppose any discrimination against including Germans in a unified defense force if Germans desire to enter it," the statement added.

Adenauer made no direct reference to the article in his speech, the strongest public indorsement of German rearmament he has made yet. The Chancellor rebuked Socialists and other opponents of German rearmament as strongly as had the Americans.

Four Killed as Private Plane Crashes and Burns

Joe Armstrong—The Washington Post

MISSES TOURIST COURT—Shown here is the wreckage of a private plane which crashed and burned near Hybla Valley airport last night, killing the three soldiers and one civilian who were passengers. The plane crashed while trying to make the airport for a landing and narrowly missed the cabins of a motor court, part of which is seen in the background

2-Way Tieup of Inchon Port Seen as One Cause of Setback

By Leif Erickson

U. S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Nov. 4 (AP). Could the Americans have pushed to the Manchurian border and thus forestalled the Chinese Red intervention that has turned a nearly-won war into an uncertain future of bitter fighting?

In this country of horrible mountain roads and tough supply problems, there might have been that chance, but . . .

When the Eighth Army was chasing the broken Red Korean army north from the Pusan perimeter in the southeast, it had to carry all its weapons, ammunition, fuel and food all the way from Pusan.

While the Eighth Army was chasing, the United States First Marine Division was withdrawn from its exploitation of pursuit positions north of Seoul and loaded into ships at Inchon, Seoul's port.

Inchon's port capacity is limited at best. While the loading of the Marine force was under way, there could be no unloading at Inchon of materiel to shorten the supply route for the advancing Eighth Army.

Inchon harbor was tied up nearly 10 days in taking out supplies instead of bringing them in.

At the same time, the United States Seventh Division was motor-marched from Seoul all the way southeast to Pusan for boarding ships, thus bucking the choked traffic stream of the Eighth Army.

"In a War College class, maneuvering plans like this would rate a flunk," said one military observer.

When the First Marine and Seventh Infantry Divisions were afloat, they were carried around Korea to the northeast port of Wonsan.

South Korean Republicans already had occupied Wonsan, but the Reds had so heavily mined the harbor that transports had to steam up and down six days before the Marines could land.

The Seventh Division was carried on north to Iwon and landed there instead of Wonsan to try to make up lost time.

The already difficult supply problem in Korea was compounded because the landing vessels needed to haul gasoline and bullets cruised so long aimlessly offshore.

Thus, with its supplies moving over bad roads and by slow trains over damaged railways from Pusan, the Eighth Army finally ran out of gas.

Beyond Pyongyang, the Red capital which fell October 19, the rate of Allied advance was determined strictly by available gasoline. Most of it was delivered by plane.

Two American divisions, the Second and the Twenty-fifth, had to be left in South Korea because there were not enough supplies coming into Inchon to feed them, let alone move them or put them into a fight.

There also was the problem of bridging. One officer said that when the Korean war began there were only 850 feet of military bridging in the entire Far East Command. The shortage has remained critical.

When the British Commonwealth Brigade reached the Chongchon River at Anju in North Korea, it had to ferry its tanks. It took five days before a bridge could be thrown across.

The Chongchon crossing delay allowed time for the North Korean and Chinese Reds to set traps up ahead.

The South Korean Seventh Regiment actually reached the Manchurian border October 27. Now it has vanished in the country east of Kojang. It has not been seen or heard from in two days after two successive days of airdrops of supplies.

Task Force Stevens, of the American Twenty-fourth Division, got within 15 miles of the key border town of Sinuiju. Because of the sudden Chinese and Korean Red thrust against the First Cavalry Division on its right flank, it had to be called back 50 miles.

The Reds had penetrated to the village of Won, within 10 miles of the one bottleneck bridge site across the Chongchon near Anju. Its loss could not be risked.

The first objective of the Eighth Army now is to protect that bridgehead until it is learned how much of the Chinese Red Army will have to be fought.

Plane Crash Fatal to Four

ing: It was a ghastly sight," Lanfersiek said. He added he was unable to get to the pilot inside the plane because of the terrific heat from the flames.

Another eyewitness, John R. Ferguson, 28, who lives at nearby Woodley Hills, said he was leaving his house with his wife when he saw the plane flying "awful low."

"The pilot apparently was trying to bank the plane when the engine stalled, and it crashed," Ferguson said.

The plane banked at almost a 90 degree angle and the pilot turned on his landing lights just before the engine stalled, he added.

The entire area was roped off by Virginia State police, as hundreds of curious spectators gathered along the heavily traveled highway.

Virginia State police had owned the plane at one time but recently sold it to Cavalier Air Transport, it was reported.

E-2 Bus Line Extension Scheduled for Nov. 19

The Capital Transit Co. will extend its Rhode Island ave. E-2 bus line along Eastern ave. from 22d ne. to Michigan ave. starting November 19.

Iron Curtain Lifting Urged By Diplomats

ROME, Nov. 4 (AP).—Western European foreign ministers tonight called on Russia to lift the Iron Curtain, open the frontiers between East and West, and stop making appeals in the name of a "false peace."

The action was taken at the conclusion of a three-day session of the foreign ministers' committee of the Council of Europe. The committee adopted a resolution proposed by Britain

The ministers also signed a convention of human rights which binds them to protect the basic rights of their citizens.

The signing ceremony was held at the Barberini Palace.

Twelve of the 14 nations represented at the ministers' meeting, plus the Saar, signed the convention. They were Britain, France, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Ireland, Iceland, Luxembourg and Turkey.

Two nations—Sweden and Greece—did not sign, but indicated they would sign soon.

Countries signing agreed to:

1. Maintain the simple and basic human rights.
2. Set up a European commission of human rights to which complaints could be made and which could investigate.
3. Set up a European court of human rights, to decide disputed points, if eight states so desire.

THE CAISSON, BEARING THE BODY OF PVT. LESLIE COFFELT, MOVES FROM THE CHAPEL TO THE GRAVE

Registration Moves Calmly In Puerto Rico

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Nov. 4 (AP).—Registration of new voters for the balloting on a new territorial constitution opened calmly today after a week of tension set off by an abortive Nationalist revolt.

Women registered today for the referendum June 4, 1951. Men will register tomorrow. Reports throughout the island indicate the total of the new voters may exceed the estimate of 70,000 given by Gov. Luis Munoz Marin in a radio speech last night urging a big turnout.

The Governor said free elections were the best defense against disorders such as the revolt, which cost 27 lives. He called national guardsmen off the streets this morning. Policemen or special deputies guarded the 106 registration places in San Juan.

Of several hundred prisoners in custody, Attorney General Vicente Geigel said all but about 200 will be freed without the filing of formal charges.

Geigel said Pedro Albizu Campos, 63-year-old Nationalist chieftain flushed from his San Juan home with tear gas, was arrested on two specific charges. One accused Albizu of intent to murder a police detective, Angel Delgado, which would carry a penalty up to 10 years in prison upon conviction. The other accused him of violating the insular version of the Smith Act, which makes it a crime to advocate the violent overthrow of the government.

Authorities announced today that a bomb factory had been found a short distance from the Governor's summer home at Jajome. The bombs were fashioned from 3-inch pipes, capped with bronze.

Torresola's Wife Scorns Legal Counsel

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (AP).—Scorning legal counsel, Mrs. Carmen Torresola, 21, sat stoically in her cell today, reportedly convinced her slain husband did right in trying to kill the President.

She has received no visitors and has not asked to see her 6-month-old daughter, Rebecca.

There were varying reports about whether the woman has eaten.

A Federal official, who declined use of his name, said yesterday she had gone on a hunger strike, but a Federal House of Detention informant said today "nothing was known" of a hunger strike.

The informant said the Puerto Rican woman, charged with conspiring to injure the President, has been a "cooperative prisoner in every respect."

According to prison rules, a report must be made to the Department of Correction if a prisoner refuses to eat.

Philadelphia Newspaper Gives Widow $1000

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4 (AP).—A check for $1000 has been sent from the Philadelphia Inquirer to Mrs. Cressie Coffelt, widow of the White House policeman who lost his life Wednesday during the gun battle in front of the Blair House in Washington.

The check for Mrs. Coffelt is an extension of the Inquirer's policy, in effect many years, to give $1000 to the widows or other survivors of Philadelphia policemen, firemen and Fairmount Park guards who lose their loves in line of duty.

Thee," the President took his place in the front row of the chapel. The flag-draped casket was wheeled down the aisle to a point near the President.

Some 290 persons filled all the seats and in the back stood against the wall in the tiny chapel.

Dean John W. Suter of Washington Cathedral spoke the scriptural tribute:

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Dean Suter added a prayer for the President:

"Behold and bless Thy servant, the President of the United States . . . grant him health and prosperity long to live."

And for the slain hero: "Thy servant Leslie Coffelt of the White House police, who faithful unto the end, gave his life for law and order to protect the President of the United States."

Truman Moist-Eyed

The President, Coffelt's grief-stricken widow and his sobbing mother followed the casket from the chapel and took their place in cars behind the casket-bearing caisson drawn by six matched greys.

The President was moist-eyed as he emerged from the chapel. Mrs. Truman appeared to have been crying.

The sun had departed and heavy rain clouds were drifting across the sky as the cortege got slowly under way.

The strains of "Our Fallen Heroes," played by the Army band, filled the air as the body was borne to a grave just across the road from the grave of Lieut. Gen. James Lonstreet of the Confederate Army.

Three volleys from a firing party barked out a tribule. Taps was sounded for the 40-year-old World War II veteran, and an echo was played by another bugler standing 100 feet from the gravesite.

Lieut. Col. Robert M. Homiston, Fort Myer chaplain, presented the flag from her husband's casket to Mrs. Coffelt.

The widow grasped the flag, pressed it to her cheeks and broke into tears.

Masonic services followed. The services over, Mrs. Coffelt was led back to her car and the President followed to his.

relating to that candidacy on another page. Reading these papers, one can understand why his contradictions so frequently dismayed those who took him literally. These traits of deviousness and evasion appear again in the periods preceding the third and fourth-term campaigns.

Making and breaking of dozens of political friendships is divulged in the FDR correspondence. The Smith-Roosevelt story emerges, letter by letter. The messages sent to Henry Wallace show the early esteem of the man in the White House, disclose the strange contradictions of the 1944 convention instructions, and end up with FDR again writing to his former vice-president and about him, in praise. The exchanges with Hugh Johnson show Roosevelt at his ingratiating best, unsuccessfully trying to get his NRA administrator to a safer spot without alienating him. The messages to Harold Ickes disclose how frequently FDR had to placate his fiery Secretary of the Interior.

The war letters reveal the private views of FDR on Yalta, on "Unconditional Surrender," on colonial problems of the British and French, on De Gaulle and Giraud and on a host of other issues and personalities of the great conflict. The self-assured and confident note, so characteristic of the man, continues through to his last letter.

Daily installments published by The Washington Post will range up to 2000 words. Some of the Sunday installments exceed 5000 words. The most interesting of the letters in the two-volume work are being selected for serialization but none of the letters picked for publication are being abstracted or condensed. They will appear as written. Text will be accompanied by many photographs.

G. U., Howard Get $28,000 for Heart Illness Study

The medical schools of Georgetown and Howard Universities have received grants of $14,000 each from the Public Health Service's National Heart Institute, for heart ailment instruction.

The grants were among 49 authorized, totaling $735,854.

Each medical school will use its $14,000 to increase the range of classroom instruction and to purchase equipment normally beyond financial reach, according to Dr. Leonard A. Scheel, Surgeon General of the PHS.

N. J. Report On Assassins Called Error

A report yesterday by a Raritan, N. J., garageman and a policeman that they had seen one of the would-be assassins of President Truman headed south in a car with seven other persons last Monday, proved last night to be a case of mistaken identity.

Secret Service agents said they were able to track down the license tags of the car and had located its owner. They determined that the occupants of the car did not include the would-be assassins and that they were on legitimate business, agents said.

The two Raritan men, Carl Engle and Policeman Ralph Petrone, had identified Griselio Torresola, who was killed in the gun battle Wednesday in front of Blair House, as one of the car's occupants from pictures.

His accomplice, Oscar Collazo, 37, who survived the battle, has insisted, however, that he and Torresola came to Washington from New York City by train Tuesday night. Collazo is under police guard in Gallinger Hospital, recovering from a superficial bullet wound in the shoulder.

One White House policeman, Leslie Coffelt, was killed and two others, Donald T. Birdzell, 42, and Joseph H. Downs, 44, were wounded during the exchange of bullets.

The two policemen are in Emergency Hospital, where authorities said yesterday that Downs remains in critical condition with bullet wounds in his head, chest and abdomen. Birdzell was shot in the leg. His condition is not serious.

A first-degree murder charge has been placed against Collazo in Coffelt's slaying. Local authorities are pressing for a speedy trial of the case, which probably will be presented to the grand jury this week.

Blood Donated By Policemen Saves Guards

Blood donated by their fellow policemen only 48 hours before, helped save the lives of the two wounded Blair House guards.

Metropolitan policemen, 18 of them, had given their blood at the Red Cross Washington Regional Blood Center, 1730 E st. nw. After the assassination attempt Wednesday, the blood center rushed whole blood and serum albumin to Emergency Hospital where the presidential guards were taken.

A total of 941 pints of blood was distributed from the center to area hospitals last week.

The Bloodmobile will make five visits this week: Monday and Thursday, Fort Myer, Headquarters Building, Jackson and Lee sts., Arlington, from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.; Tuesday, Warrenton, Va., the Legion Hall, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.; Wednesday, Fairfax, Va., the Methodist Church, 12 noon to 6 p. m., and Friday, the Pentagon, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Mahoney Vital in Lane Fight

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A man not now running for the office holds the secret to who will be elected Governor of Maryland Tuesday.

The answer would solve a lot of other questions about the hundreds of county, State and Federal offices at stake in the election.

But he doesn't know the answer himself.

The man is George P. Mahoney. He won a popular majority but only a minority of nominating unit votes, in the September Democratic primary for Governor. Now he has taken on what amounts to emergency managership of his primary rival's still desperate bid for reelection.

And the big question is how many of his 192,000 primary votes will Mahoney take over to Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., and how many will go to Lane's Republican opponent, Theodore Roosevelt McKeldin.

Some See Problem Solved

Democrats say Mahoney's homestretch alliance with Lane has solved the problem of reelecting a Democratic Governor.

Republicans say Mahoney committed political suicide when he went all-out for the man he had bitterly attacked in the primary, and that McKeldin will get more benefit than Lane.

Where does Mahoney think the 192,000 votes will go—"If I knew that . . ." he muses.

Generally observers think the Governorship race is close, that Lane stands to benefit from the 3-to-1 Democratic margin on the registration books, but that McKeldin still has the best chance to convert factional wrangling by Democrats into a GOP capture of the Governorship for the first time since 1934.

For closeness, the Governorship race now appears to overshadow the seven congressional races (one Senate and six House) and a majority of local elections in which the makeup of the State Legislature and of county governments are being decided.

Tydings' Backers Hopeful

Backers of United States Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) in his bid for a fifth term, are predicting he will win by 40,000 to 60,000 votes over John Marshall Butler, the Republican nominee.

Butler supporters apparently feel their main present hope is pinned on Baltimore City, on how its voters react to Republican charges that Tydings whitewashed this year's Senate probe of subversives alleged to be in the State Department, and on a McKeldin sweep if one develops. The general belief is that a Butler victory would requir McKeldin's capturing a majority beyond all foreseeable proportions.

Forecasts generally are for the return of four Democrats and two Republicans, the present Maryland lineup, to the House.

Washington itself has a ringside seat at two of the most sharply contested county elections in the State—those of Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties. In Montgomery, the Democrats are bidding to break a Republican-and-charter, etc., hold on county government and oust the all-Republican delegation in the Legislature.

The Republicans rode into office four years ago on the crest of a reform movement that two years later produced county charter revision with installation of a council-manager government. Republicans say their election is needed to preserve these gains. Democrats sense a softening in the political underpinning of the reform drive, and think they can recapture the county.

Picture in Reverse

Prince Georges presents the Montgomery spectacle in reverse. Here Republicans are moving in to exploit what they regard as sweeping discontent with key features of a county government long dominated by Democrats. Democrats say they have provided, through the recently enacted Sothoron law, the kind of government the community wants. Republicans call the new law a "smokescreen" and say a thorough re-study of the whole setup is neded.

At stake in State-wide voting are the Ober (anti-subversive) law, the calling of a constitutional convention, and five amendments to the constitution. A majority of "yeses" keeps the Ober law in force; and a majority of "noes" would erase it from the statute books.

In Montgomery, voters will decide whether to lower from 10 percent to 5 percent of qualified voters the minimum number of petitioners required to put a county measure to referendum. In Prince Georges voters in the Vansville, Bladensburg, Surratts and Berwyn election districts are to decide whether an annual fire tax will be applied in their area starting in 1951.

Election Lineups

Following, for Federal, State and (nearby) county offices, are the election lineups:

Governor Lane's running mates for reelection on the State-wide Democratic ticket are Attorney General Hall Hammond, and Comptroller J. Millard Tawes.

William A. Gunter is the Republican candidate for attorney general on McKeldin's ticket. There is no opponent for Tawes, so that he will be elected by the casting of a single vote, his own or anyone else's.

In the races for House seats Representative J. Glenn Beall (R.) in the Sixth District (Montgomery County and western Maryland) and Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D.) in the Fifth (Prince Georges and southern Maryland, plus some Baltimore wards) are expected to win. Their opposite numbers are Maj. Gen. Russell P. Hartle, USA (ret.), Sixth District Democratic candidate, and Thomas S Carr, Fifth District Republican candidate.

Fallon, Garmatz Favored

In the Baltimore City congressional districts, Representative George H. Fallon (D.), and Representative Edward A. Garmatz (D.) are both regarded as sure to win over their Republican opponents, James W. Miller and Louis R. Milio, respectively.

Chances for a change in the congressional lineup center in the Second Congressional District, which includes some Baltimore City wards, plus Harford, Carroll, and Baltimore Counties, and on the Eastern Shore, whose nine counties make up the First Congressional District. In the Second, Representative William P. Bolton (D.) is seeking reelection against the strong bid of Brig. Gen. James P. S. Devereux, USMC, retired, hero of Wake Island. On the Eastern Shore, Representative Edward T. Miller (R.) is seeking reelection against State Senator Thomas F. Johnston. Both Bolton and Miller are believed to have the upper hand, in probably close contests.

Prince Georges County

Rivals for the State Senate are Senator L. Harold Sothoron (D.) and John Raymond Fletcher (R.).

Democrats seeking election to the House of Delegates are T. Raymond Burch, Ernest N. Cory, jr., George G. McLeish, Nicholas Orem, jr., LeRoy Pumphrey, and Perry O. Wilkinson. Republican candidates for the House of Delegates are Albert R. Hassall, William R. Hughes, John F. Lillard, jr., Wendell Sigler, jr., Mrs. Dorothy E. Sousa, and Harry E. Taylor, jr.

Rivals for county commissionerships are (Democrats) John H. Beall, James B. Bland, Leonard Dyer, Harry W. McNamee, and Alfred H. Smith, and (Republicans) Daniel A. Abbott, Thomas E. Latimer, W. Everett Marton, H. Wilson Spicknall, and Edward J. Waters.

Other Candidates Listed

Other candidates are: For treasurer, Norman Collins (D.) and Julian B. McKay (R.); for State's attorney, A. Gwynn Bowie (D.) and Carlyle J. Lancaster (R.); for sheriff, T Ward Martin (D.) and Carlton G. Beall (R.); for clerk of Circuit Court, W. Waverly Webb (D.) and Samuel R. Acuff (R.); for register of wills, Griffith B. Oursler (D.) and W. Curtis Hopkins (R.).

Candidates for judges of the Orphans Court are (Democrats) Lansdale G. Claggett, William T. McPherson and Vincent A. Osterman, and (Republicans) Clifton L. Clevenger, Paul D. Johnson and Mrs. Laura Lee Courtney.

J. Dudley Digges (D.) is unopposed for judge of the Seventh Judicial Circuit, which includes Prince Georges, Charles, Calvert and St. Marys Counties; and Ben Dyer (D.) is unopposed for Prince Georges County surveyor.

Montgomery County

Candidates for State Senate are Joseph B. Simpson, jr. (D.) and DeWitt S. Hyde (R.).

For the House of Delegates the race is between (Democrats) Einar B. Christensen, James C. Christopher, Frank L. Hewitt, jr., Edward S. Northrop, Mrs. Margaret C. Schweinhaut, and Jerome H. Simonds and (Republicans) J. Douglas Bradshaw, Julian P. King, Anders R. Lofstrand, jr., J. Paul Marshall, Mrs. Leona M. Rush, and Robert A. Wallace.

One council candidate is unopposed; he is Grover Walker (D.) Second District. Other council races are: First District, Jerry T. Williams (D.) and George F. Nesbitt (R.); Third District, G. LaMar Kelly, jr. (D.) and Lathrop E. Smith (R.); Fourth District, Mrs. Stella B. Werner (D.) and John C. Reid (R); Fifth District, Robert T. Snure (D.) and Harold F. Hammond (R); candidates at large, Preston C. King, jr. (D) and Joseph M. Mathias (D.), and Mrs. Kathryn J. Lawlor (R.) and J. Louis Monarch (R.).

Other candidates include: for State's attorney, Alger Y. Barbee (D.) and Walter W. Dawson (R.); for register of wills, Frank I. Davis (D.) and Walter C. Clarke (R.); for sheriff, Charles H. Jamison (D.) and Charles S. Lawrenson (R.) and for county surveyor, Robert K. Maddox (D.) and Thomas B. McNeill (R.)

Judge Charles W. Woodward (D.) of the Sixth Judicial Circuit is unopposed for reelection. Candidates for clerk of Circuit Court are Clayton K. Watkins (D.) and James B. Parkhill (R.). Rivals for judges of the Orphans Court are Democrats Coleman L. Diamond, Eugene E. Ruppert and Mrs. Genevieve H. Wells, and Republicans Millard Taft, Charles H. Squire and William Tyler Page, jr.

In League With Republicans? Charterites Scoff at Charge

The Montgomery County Charter Committee yesterday denied a charge by a Democratic candidate that it "is in league with the Republicans."

The committee's statement declared "it is unfortunate that she (Mrs. Stella B. Werner, Democratic candidate for County Council) has become so completely upset in the heat of the election campaign as to make such ridiculous statements, and misstatements of fact, that the committee is in league with the Republicans."

Hope was expressed that Mrs. Werner would "calm down after the election and become again the Stella Werner we have indorsed."

Also yesterday, Mrs. Leona M. Rush, GOP candidate for re-election to the House of Delegates, declared that county schools were "never adequately maintained" until 1946 when the Republicans came into office. In its first year in office, the party increased maintenance appropriations from $12,800 to $110,000," she said.

From an opposing vantage point, Democrat Joseph B. Simpson, jr., State Senator nominee, predicted a majority of 5000 votes for the Democratic Party in Congressional, State and county races in Montgomery.

In a radio speech, James W. Gill, veteran Democratic leader said the county payroll has increased 250 percent since 1945—the last full year the Democratic Party was in office. The number of employes has jumped from 540 in November, 1946, to 791 in September, 1950, Gill declared.

The League of Women Voters issued an appeal for support of the constitutional convention referendum on the ballot.

Revision of the State constitution should lead to economies and greater efficiency in government, the league maintained.

Postlude

Miss Curtin Gives Fine Song Recital

By Paul Hume

Phyllis Curtin, soprano, made the first of two Washington appearances in three days when she sang last night in Cafritz Auditorium.

She will be heard again Monday night as one of the soloists in Bach's B Minor Mass when it is given in Washington Cathedral. Were not the music of the Bach, and the kind of performance Paul Callaway always gives the Mass, sufficient reason, Miss Curtin's singing would be adequate cause for you to journey to the Cathedral.

Miss Curtain's age is not known to me. Yet I would feel safe in saying that she is the most remarkable soprano of her age that that I have heard an artist's age is seldom an important factor in judging singing. But Phyllis Curtin is so fine a singer and artist that the only factor needed to improve her real gifts is the maturity and insight which years alone can bring.

Her program was a handsome list of songs by Beethoven, Brahms, Ravel, Debussy, Moussorgsky, and unfamiliar items by Starer and Caturla, With highly artistic collaboration of Elias Lopez, her accompanist, Miss Curtin gave a beautiful account of herself.

In songs by Debussy and Ravel, especially the latter's Hebrew songs, Miss Curtin showed her most sensitive work. Liszt's "O, quand je dors" was tonally affecting, but the tempo surely was too fast. The large audience which should have greeted so fine a young artist will be wise to hear her Monday night.

Sothoron Act Defended by County Head

Harry W. McNamee, president of the Prince Georges County Commissioners and candidate for reelection on the Democratic ticket, said last night the record of the board is one of "progress and efficiency."

He said he found that the county government reorganization act — the Sothoron Act—is "wise and progressive legislation."

The act does not attempt, he said, to set up in detail the form of government, but rather leaves the form, within a general framework, to the local governing body.

Speaking over station WTOP, McNamee enumerated several steps already taken by the commissioners under the act's provisions, effective last July 1.

These included, he said, adoption of an effective budget control and establishment of a department of budget and accounts, authorization of a purchasing department which will be implemented as soon as formation of its procedures is completed, and study of reorganization of the police department.

Answering recent criticism of budgetary procedures (by William R. Turner, former executive secretary of the Citizens Committee for Good Government), McNamee asserted it has always been "common knowledge" that the county tax levy did not cover all expenses, some being met by funds from other sources.

He also said the commissioners recognized more than a year ago that the budget system used in earlier years needed improvements —"and we have made them."

Northern Virginia Contests Hold Spotlight

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Sideshow performances are expected to draw more attention, if not bigger crowds, than the Big Top, when Virginians go to the polls Tuesday.

Some of the best acts on the Midway, furthermore, will be found in the Old Dominion communities near the District of Columbia.

The Eighth District, embracing those localities, is the scene of one main event. Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), the nearby area's Congressman for 20 years, will face Republican Tyrrell Krum for the second time in as many elections.

Only three other major party contests for Congressional seats are scheduled. Representative Edward J. Robeson (D., Va.) is opposed by Nile Straughan, GOP businessman from Fredericksburg, in the First District, Representative Thomas B. Fugate (D., Va.) faces Republican Jacob Aaron Garber of Timberville, in the Ninth. And Representative Burr P. Harrison (D., Va.) seeks reelection in the Seventh against George C. Sutherland, a Grundy lawyer.

Two noncontroversial constitutional amendments will appear on ballots over the State:

1. To permit cities with 30,000 or more persons to consolidate local judicial systems and add judges with approval of the General Assembly (Richmond is the only city now in need of the law).

2. To allow consolidation of school boards and systems of cities and counties into a single department, to be approved by the General Assembly.

For Virginia, 1950 is an off-year election. Gov. John S. Battle started his four-year term in January, and Senators Harry F. Byrd and A. Willis Robertson hold office until 1953 and 1955, respectively.

Tuesday's ballots across the Potomac from the Nation's Capital will pose a number of local issues for the electorate, as follows:

ALEXANDRIA

A referendum, as prescribed by the new city charter, to decide whether the offices of city attorney and city tax collector shall remain elective or shall become appointive. If a change is approved — six of the city's seven councilmen support it—the city attorney would be named by council, and the city collector would be named by the city manager.

ARLINGTON

1. County Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan, 34-year-old Independent, seeks to retain his pivotal seat on the board. He is opposed by Democrat Fred W. Bach, 40-year-old advertising man, and Independent Jacob Bechtel, 73, a retired carpenter.

This contest is considered vital because of the 3-2 Independent majority on the five-member board. A victory for Bach would swing the balance of power to the Democrats.

2. A referendum on $7,450,000 in school bonds, which has gained widespread support by county organizations, is a highlight of the voting. Its approval would give Arlington a $3,500,000 junior-senior high school; three new elementary schools costing $1,330,000; new buildings costing $640,000 to replace Woodrow Wilson and Thomas Nelson Page Elementary Schools; six additions to present buildings, costing $950,000; new school sites costing $430,000, and remodeling of 12 existing buildings at a cost of $300,000.

3. A referendum on $2,617,000 in sewer bonds, championed by the Izaak Walton League after officials of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin warned of "near-cesspool conditions" in the Potomac River, is also scheduled.

FAIRFAX

A hotly contested referendum on changing the county's form of government heads the list of local issues in Fairfax.

Voters will be asked if they want a change from the present board of supervisors and executive secretary system and, if so, whether they want (1) the county executive form or (2) the county manager form.

FALLS CHURCH

A referendum, somewhat similar to that in Alexandria, is required by the new city charter. It asks whether the post of city attorney shall continue to be appointive (by city council) or elective. Observers say the tenure of the present council-appointed city attorney, LaRue Van Meter, is actually at stake.

LOUDOUN COUNTY

A change-of-government referendum is also a question to be determined on this local ballot. Voters will be asked if they want to change from the present government by a board of supervisors to the county executive form.

PRINCE WILLIAM COUNTY

1. The main local question is a $2,400,000 school bond issue. Present plans, if it passes, include an $880,000 high school in Manassas; a new $530,000 high school near Occoquan, and a new $375,000 Negro high and elementary school at Manassas.

2. Occoquan District voters will ballot on a $147,000 bond issue for a new water system.

Stassen Hits U.S. 'Coddling' Of China Reds

for the family of the White House policeman killed in the shooting affray, and for the two guards who were wounded. And he offered "prayerful thanks that the President is alive and speaking to the Nation tonight."

But, said Stassen, "the shocking news of the fanatic Puerto Rican attempt on his life is overshadowed by news many times more grim from Korea."

Then Stassen, former Governor of Minnesota, launched a sharp attack on Administration foreign policy, particularly in the Far East.

Administration Called Socialistic

He said "the whole burden of redeeming the blunders in blood is thrust upon American armed forces weakened by a short-sighted, socialistically minded national Administration."

The situation, Stassen went on, causes every American citizen to ask:

"How can it be? How can it be that five short years after winning a sweeping victory in World War II, so much of what we fought for has been lost, the bright hopes for peace have been destroyed, one third of the peoples of the world have been brought under Communist dictatorships . . ."

The "mistakes" of the Administration in foreign policy are not relegated to the past, Stassen said.

"The startling facts are that the same kind of mistakes are still being made," he added.

Elaborating, Stassen said it had "just been revealed" that when Mr. Truman last June ordered the United States Seventh Fleet to safeguard Formosa during the Korean fighting, "he also ordered the fleet to break the Chinese Nationalist blockade of the Communist Chinese coastline." He added:

"As a result, supplies for the Communist Chinese war machine have been flowing in, and are flowing in today in ships of every description, including Russian freighters."

At that point Stassen referred to testimony to a Senate committee that this year about four million pounds of Japanese-produced copper had found their way clear around the world and back to the Chinese Reds from a New York port.

"It is not unlikely," Stassen continued, "that in Northern Korea today, and in other battles of the future, American boys will be killed by bullets made with this four million pounds of copper.

"I say with all the emphasis at my command, this appeasement of Communist war machines must stop."

Wake Trip Denounced

As for Mr. Truman's trip to the Pacific island of Wake last month to confer with General MacArthur, it was "staged as a political escapade to obtain publicity" for the current political campaign, Stassen declared.

The Administration's postwar foreign policy makes it clearer day by day, the GOP leader declared, "that the President has been caught between very bad advice from his State Department and very bad politics of Missouri Pendergast machine moved up to a national operation."

That was a reference to the Democratic organization in the President's home State.

"It is now apparent that even at this late date that his (the Truman) Administration will not take General MacArthur's advice on Communist China, and Formosa, and Indo-China, which are the three future trouble spots," Stassen said.

Stassen called the Administration "so weak and confused and spy-riddled that this more than anything else accounts for the tragic five-year loss of the bright hopes of peace for which so many men fought and so many men died in World War II."

He also charged that in August, 1947, the Soviet ship Mikhail Kutuzov sailed from New York "with atomic devices and materials for Russia, and that these postwar shipments . . . and the spying of Klaus Fuchs and Harry Gold are the direct reason that the Communists of Russia have atomic bombs today."

Those were references to the British scientists, Fuchs, and the American chemist, Gold, who were arrested earlier this year in connection with the theft of United States atomic secrets.

Assailing Administration domestic policies, Stassen said they have been "just as wrong" as those in the foreign field "but the sad results are not yet as obvious."

Spending Cut Urged

He said "higher and higher prices have been pushing through the kitchen door, and higher and higher taxes have been pushing in through the front door, and the family is squeezed in between."

Stassen called for a cut on non-defense spending and for "stopping the inflationary spiral." He said:

"I am confident that a Republican majority in the next Senate and House would take these important steps for the well-being of every family in America."

Stassen called it "shocking to find the President using the power of his office and the cash of his political committee" for the all-net-works radio and telecast of his St. Louis speech tonight.

The Republican leader described that as "an unprecedented attempt to get more members in the next Congress who will be political puppets for his Administration."

Broadcasting of the President's speech over all available Nation-wide facilities cost the Democrats an estimated $100,000. The Republicans said they were unable to pay out that kind of money and so limited Stassen's talk to one radio network at a cost of about $15,000.

Declaring the issues are clear, Stassen said:

"If you want to continue the tragic costly blunders in Asia, vote for the President's candidates on Tuesday."

He said the voters should do that, too, "if you want to bring all the doctors and nurses and hospitasl under the thumb of the Washington politicians." That was a criticism of Mr. Truman's health insurance program.

Stassen also took a crack at the Administration's Brannan Plan for production payments to farmers. He said it would injure both the farmer and the consumer.

Hears From Well-Wishers

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ALL SMILES—Lieut. Gov. Joe R. Hanley, of New York, sat up in bed yesterday in Columbia Memorial Hospital at Hudson, N. Y., to read telegrams and letters from well-wishers. Looking on is his daughter and secretary, Mrs. Kenneth Wilcox. This is the first picture of Hanley, 74, Republican nominee for the United States Senate from New York, since he entered the hospital Wednesday, suffering "complete exhaustion"

Stassen Statement Puzzles AEC Officials

By the United Press

Atomic information officials said last night they have no idea what Harold E. Stassen was talking about when he said in New Haven that "atomic devices" were shipped to Russia from New York in 1947.

Public information officials of the Atomic Energy Commission said they had no knowledge of the alleged shipment. They pointed out that Stassen seemed to be identifying the "atomic devices" merely as "electronic devices," in which case he might mean any of a number of things.

Volunteers of America Issue Appeal for Toys

The Volunteers of America have put out an urgent call for Christmas toys for the poor and needy children of Washington.

Each year the groups seeks toys, particularly from the homes of children who discard their old ones for new. The toys are repaired and distributed free to the poor. Anyone having old toys to give away is asked to call RE. 5100. A truck will call for them promptly.

Baby Sitter Charged With Indecent Act

A baby sitter was held under $5000 for action of the grand jury yesterday, charged with committing an indecent act on the 5-year-old child he was guarding.

GOP Sees Gain of 4 House Seats in Chicago

Twenty-first, now held by 34-year-old Peter F. Mack, a first-term Democrat.

For the Cook County prizes, Republicans have entered former Representative Richard B. Vail in the Second District, former Representative Fred E. Busbey in the Third, William E. McVey in the Fourth, and Timothy P. Sheehan, a feed broker, in the Eleventh.

For the possible downstate upset, Probate Judge Benjamin S. DeBoice is running against Naval Air Force veteran Mack, in the Twenty-first.

In Chicago's largely Negro First District, Republicans are also making a lively fight to oust Democratic Representative Arthur L. Dawson, chairman of the House Expenditures Committee, and political leader of this district, where he is known as "The Man."

Republicans are trying to replace Dawson with Archibald J. Carey, jr., lawyer, minister and orator, who is making a vigorous campaign. Both of the candidates are Negroes. The Democratic Chicago Sun-Times has indorsed Carey, a GOP independent, to clean up alleged numbers and other gambling in the area.

Not So Hopeful

But Republicans appear less hopeful of carrying this district than the four other city seats they have spotted. Neutral observers say Republicans aren't making too much headway here with the argument that Truman and the Democrats sold them out on civil rights.

Democrats meanwhile are making every effort downstate to capture three narrowly held Republican House seats in the southern third of the State.

Tipsy downstate GOP balliwicks that Democrats chiefly have their eyes on are the Twenty-third District, held by Edward H. Jenison, 43-year-old editor and critic of the "Fair Deal," the Twenty-fourth District, represented by 69-year-old Charles W. Vursell, a veteran of four House terms, and the Twenty-sixth District, of Representative C. W. (Runt) Bishop, who has held the seat for 10 years.

Democrats are running former Representative Laurence F. Arnold, making his first comeback try for Congress since he was defeated in 1942, against Jenison in the Twenty-third.

Opposing Vursell in the Twenty-fourth District is John David Upchurch, Democratic Mayor of Eldorado, a wholesale gasoline and oil dealer, who has the backing of labor leaders.

In their effort to beat Bishop, in the Twenty-sixth District, Democrats have put up a once-familiar New Deal 100 percenter, former Representative Kent E. Keller, now 83 years old.

Democrats say they also have a chance to beat Representative Harold H. Velde (R.), in Senate GOP candidate Everett Dirksen's former House district, the Eighteenth. Opposing Velde for this seat is Walter D. Boyle, State's attorney of Putnam County.

Special Panel Sought On Crime Revelations

CHICAGO, Nov. 4 (U.P.)—A county grand jury today demanded a special prosecutor and panel to investigate the Senate Crime Committee's revelations of connections between politicians, police and criminals.

The grand jury said "there appears to be a tie-in" of organized criminal groups and law enforcement agencies "sufficiently grave to warrant a more-detailed investigation."

It said a special grand jury should be impaneled on the first of the month after the Senate Committee completes hearings here. The committee, of which Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) is chairman, is scheduled to resume hearings here next month.

Truman Assails 'Lie Campaign'

the crowd by reminding it that radio and television time cost money.

Some thought that, as a result of the abortive assassination, Mr. Truman might make a restrained speech tonight. Actually, it was even stronger than his "mow-'em-down, give-'em-hell" speeches of 1948. The expressions he used then—"mossbacks," for example—seemed pallid alongside the harsh language he flung at "certain" Republicans tonight.

When he said he intended to tell the country exactly what the issues were, one enthusiast yelled "Give 'em hell, Harry."

"I'm going to," Mr. Truman said.

In attacking isolationist candidates, he departed from his text to say that "one of them is over in Illinois." This was a crack at Everett Dirksen, the Republican, who is running against Senator Scott Lucas, the Democratic floor leader.

The President, warming up to his role of political warrior, evoked raucous laughter when he went after a familiar villain—the "No-Good, Do-Nothing Eightieth Congress."

Boos arose from the crowd when Mr. Truman told how the Eightieth Congress started to destroy the unions through the "infamous Taft-Hartley law."

Mr. Truman got cheers when he told how he vetoed the Republicans' "rich man's" tax bill three times, and then went out and got himself elected.

The Republicans, he said, are trying to win an election with a record they are ashamed to admit, "and a program they want to conceal."

Obviously angry over the charges that the State Department is a sanctuary for Communists, and the Republican demands that Secretary of State Acheson be fired, Mr. Truman tore into the opposition with these words:

"These Republican politicians have maliciously and falsely made charges of disloyalty against some of the finest servants—in Congress and in the executive branch of the Government.

"These Republican politicians have been willing, in their desperate pursuit of this false issue, to undermine their own Government at a time of great national peril.

"They have been willing to destroy the United Nations. They have attacked the bi-partisan foreign policy. They have lost all proportion, all sense of restraint, all sense of patriotic decency.

Red Charges "Craziest Yet"

"I say to you that politicians who are willing to do that—politicians who are willing even to condone such disgraceful acts—are not to be trusted with high public office.

"There are in the Republican Party many honorable men and women who oppose this shameful course. I honor them for that, and I will continue in the future as I have in the past to work with those Republicans who have the best interests of their country at heart.

"I believe that the rank and file of the Republican Party must be ashamed of the reckless tactics of some of their leaders, and will repudiate them at the polls."

Apropos the charge of "Some Republicans" that the Democratic Party is communistic, Mr. Truman said this was "the craziest idea yet." He continued:

"It is our party—the Democratic Party—that has done more to defeat communism in this country than any other group, public or private.

"It is our party—the Democratic Party—that saved free enterprise after 1932—when communism was feeding on the misery and despair created by 12 years of Republican misrule.

"It is the Democratic Party that has prosecuted communism under the law, and now has the Communist leaders on the way to jail.

"It is a Democratic Administration that has strengthened and united the free nations of the world to stand up and fight against communism—to stand up and fight in Korea, and to win a smashing victory over Communist aggression.

"None of these plain facts has any effect on certain vote-hungry Republican politicans. They go right on with their campaign of lies.

"Of course, they don't believe it themselves.

"They are just trying to get votes. But this effort of theirs to get votes is being made at a terrible cost to the country."

Mr. Truman, in his attack on isolationists, said they would leave the United States alone in the world, forfeiting to the Communists all the manpower and resources of Europe, Asia and Africa to use against us.

"That is the kind of disaster the isolationists would lead us into," he said. "A vote for isolationism in this election would be a vote for national suicide. This is the time to stand up and let the whole world know that we are going to stick with the other free nations in the struggle against communism.

"Isolationism is one main issue in this election."

Mr. Truman and members of his party, traveling in the Independence, landed at the Scott Air Force Base in Illinois.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, who was with the President, got several pats on the back from friends who had heard he had become a grandfather.

The President was greeted at the air field by his sister, Miss Mary Jane Truman of Grandview, Mo., and Donald Dawson, White House administrative assistant.

The President rode in a closed car, a Lincoln, followed by two open cars loaded with Secret Service operatives. When the motor cade crossed the Mississippi and entered St. Louis, the streets were lined with policemen. They had their backs to Mr. Truman and were looking upward at the windows of office buildings.

Newspaper reporters, who ordinarily follow right behind the President in going into hotels, were barred at the door of the Jefferson and were kept waiting until Mr. Truman had reached his suite. William M. Boyle, jr., chairman of the Democratic National Committee, also was blocked at the hotel door.

Optimistic About Hennings

Mr. Truman recalled, at the outset of his speech that he had spoken in Keil Auditorium on the Saturday night before the 1948 election.

"When we met here in 1948," he said, "the Democratic Party was on its way to victory. Tonight, the Democratic Party is on the way to victory again."

He said, confidently, that the Democrats in Missouri were going to elect Tom Hennings as United States Senator and send a Democratic delegation to the House of Representatives.

He said he had hoped to make a number of speeches in the 1950 campaign, adding that he felt it was the duty of the President and the Vice President to report to all the people, since they are the only officials who are elected by the whole country.

But the critical international situation, he said, made it impossible for him to take part in the great debate. So, he continued, he had to leave his share of the campaigning to "the other member of our team," Vice President Barkley. He said that the Kentuckian, "a great American," had done "a magnificent job."

He said that our forces had won a tremendous victory in Korea, even though some hard fighting still lies ahead.

"But they have done a great deal more than that," he said, "they have brought about a moral and spiritual revival among all men who seek freedom and peace . . . I believe that this is the greatest step toward world peace that has been taken in my lifetime.

Peace Sought

He said that, since he became President in 1945, he had worked constantly for world peace—that this was his greatest ambition. And, with God's help, he added, we are making progress toward that goal.

He said the United States had never done anything more important for peace than it did in June when it took the leadership in the United Nations to put down aggression in Korea.

He recalled what happened in the Wilson Administration—how this country took "the wrong road," "the road away from peace," and how "the isolationists kept us out of the League of Nations." But we are on the right road now, he said, and we must stay on that road.

He went on to attack isolationist candidates who would cut this Nation off from the rest of the world, abandon our friends and allies, and virtually invite Communist imperialism "to gobble up the rest of the world."

At this point, he made his remark about isolationism being synonymous with national suicide, and said that isolationism was one main issue in this election.

The other main issue, he said, was whether this country was going forward here at home toward greater strength and prosperity.

GOP Termed Obstructionist

"During the last 17 years," he said, "the Democratic Party has led this country to the greatest period of prosperity the world has ever seen.

"The Republicans have fought us every step of the way. But we won those fights, and today the United States stands free and strong because we did win them."

He went on to list the gains that had come to the Nation's farmers—how their land had been saved, how good prices for farm products had been brought back, and how electric power had been brought to the farms to ease the burden on farm wives.

He said that the "no-good, do-nothing Eightieth Congress," elected in 1946 because "two thirds of the people stayed at home and didn't vote," began to tear down what the Democrats had done for the farmer.

"I said in this hall in 1948," Mr. Truman went on to say, "that any farmer who votes for the Republican Party is voting against his own interests—and ought to have his head examined. That was true then, and it is true now."

He said that the same thing was true for the workingman, and he proceeded to list the benefits that had come to him—growth of the labor organizations, better wages, higher standard of living, and social security.

"But the Republicans would like to get back in. What are they offering labor?

"Frankly, I don't know. I think they have about given up talking to the working man. They know that no matter what they say, nobody is going to believe them—the Republican record on labor is too plain."

Taking up the case of business, Mr. Truman said he was "getting sick and tired" of hearing that the Republican Party was good for business. He said there was no evidence to support it.

He pointed out that corporations, which were "three billion dollars in the red" in 1932, had profits of 23½ billions by 1946. Attacking the Republican Eightieth Congress again, he said it tried to please the real estate lobby, the oil lobby and "all the other lobbies." Moreover, he said, they passed "a rich man's tax bill."

Charging again that the Republican Party had been "taken over by the special interests," the President reiterated what he described as his party's program "for all the people":

A system of "marketing farm products that will stabilize farm income and give consumers the benefit of abundant production, without waste," in effect, the Brannan plan.

A "fair labor law."

Better education and health, "including a workable health insurance system to help people pay their doctors' bills."

Mr. Truman concluded with an appeal to all citizens to vote Tuesday, to "vote for yourselves; vote for your future and your children's future.

"Vote for progress and prosperity in the United States and peace throughout the whole world."

St. Louis Police Find Puerto Rican Handbills

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 4 (U.P.)—President Truman arrived late today for a 19-hour political visit only a few hours after police found "inflammatory" handbills of the Puerto Rican Nationalist Party.

Police rechecked security precautions after finding the handbills and ordered the arrest of anyone distributing them.

MORNING COUGHS and Asthma

Do you cough and cough, especially mornings and at night? Do you choke, gasp for breath, wheeze and often can't sleep? The cause of these devitalizing symptoms may be recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma. In such cases, the very first dose of MENDACO usually starts right now, working through the blood and thus reaching lungs and bronchial tubes, to help relax that clogged up stuffy feeling in the bronchial tubes, then helps Nature loosen and clean out thick, strangling phlegm. This helps you get good fresh air into your lungs and promotes restful sleep. Ask your druggist for MENDACO. Satisfaction or money back guaranteed.

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY
DEMOCRATIC PARTY PERFORMANCE

In the past 16 years of Democratic Administration Prince Georges County has experienced phenomenal growth. Your Democratic officials have extended and expanded its services, and have added additional services to keep pace with that growth. Some significant comparisons are set forth below for your examination:

EDUCATION

	1933.	1950.
No. of pupils	12,223	31,500
No. of school rooms	418	*750
No. of teachers	377	1,057
Average salary of teachers	$1,188	$3,300
Years in curriculum	11	12
Area of playgrounds—acres	182	850

Since construction controls were lifted at the close of World War II, there has been spent or authorized for new school construction in Prince Georges County, the sum of $14,000,000. Twenty-one (21) new sites for future construction have been acquired with negotiations pending for other sites.

A complete vocational high school is operated at Bladensburg, to which students from the entire county are transported by bus.

* Note: Reference to standard class rooms only. All schools built since the war include libraries, infirmaries, cafeterias and auditoriums plus gymnasiums in high schools.

HEALTH

	1933.	1950.
Appropriation	$2,000	$71,179
Doctors	1	1
Nurses	None	12
Clinics	None	3
Chief Sanitarian	None	1
Inspectors	None	12

The Health Department provides what is considered by national standards to be a complete public health service. The Sanitation section conducted approximately 15,000 or inspections during the last year.

RECREATION

By action of the General Assembly in 1949, a Recreation Board was created to provide, under the County Commissioners, a public recreation program in the County. A six-week summer playground was conducted by the Board in 1950 at 14 different communities in the County, with the co-operation and support of local committees. Over 3,000 children registered in the first two weeks, and aggregate attendance was 99,938. An adult program of games, hobbies, arts and crafts, etc., is being organized for the winter months.

All direction and supervision are paid for by the County.

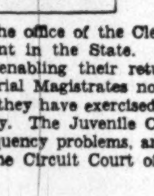
PARK AND PLANNING COMMISSION

The Park and Planning Commission, in addition to the supervision of subdivisions and plants, building inspection and zoning, has within the twenty-three years of its existence, acquired in Prince Georges County 850 acres of land for public parks. In this acquisition, it has secured from the Federal Government, a contribution of $133,000. It has laid out and set aside within the park system seven recreation areas which, with the Recreation Board, are being developed and equipped. It has about completed its overall plan for that part of the metropolitan district in Prince Georges County, which plan will be a guide for the development of the county for the next twenty-five years.

WATER AND SEWER

The Sanitary Commission has managed to keep pace with the unprecedented growth of the county in supplying these important public untilities. On January 1, 1940, in Prince Georges County alone, there were 194 miles of water main and 138 miles of sewer main and on January 1, 1950, there were 401 miles of water main and 302 miles of sewer main. On January 1, 1940, there were 10,145 house connections in Prince Georges County and on January 1, 1950, this had jumped to 23,584. The Commission therefore has constructed more water and sewer lines and house connections in the last ten years than existed prior to 1940. It is now engaged in a sincere and consistent effort to remove all pollution in the streams of the County and expects that this will be accomplished within the next two years. The Commission has within the past year started the construction of an additional reservoir on the Patuxent River with necessary filter plant and pumping station near Laurel which, when completed, will assure the whole area an ample water supply at least through 1960.

LIBRARY



A Prince Georges County Memorial Library was created by action of the County Commissioners in 1946. It is operated by a staff of experienced librarians, and already has over 25,000 books, with annual circulation exceeding 166,000 in the main and four branch libraries. In addition, a Mobile Branch service is operated, with seventy-one (71) regular scheduled stops in the County, thus providing ample opportunity for additional education.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

	1933.	1950.
No. of Judges in Circuit	3	4
Cases filed	1,701	3,427
Trial Magistrates	0	3

The office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court has been, in the last few years, made one of the most efficient in the State. Over 15,000 deeds and mortgages are recorded annually by photostatic reproduction, enabling their return within 3 weeks, as compared with the former time of 6 to 8 months.

Trial Magistrates now hear and dispose of traffic and minor civil and criminal cases, totaling 20,000 cases a year. Since 1947, they have exercised the special jurisdiction of the Juvenile Court created that year for the County by the General Assembly. The Juvenile Court, with special probation offices provided by the County, has been highly successful in handling delinquency problems, and has prevented the establishment of a criminal record by hundreds of young offenders, besides relieving the Circuit Court of a large volume of criminal cases.

HOSPITAL

Since February, 1944, the County Commissioners have operated a 105-bed modern fireproof hospital at Cheverly. It is approved by the American Medical Association and American Hospital Association. In 1949, the County Commissioners, under authority given by the General Assembly, let a contract for $1,200,000 for construction of a 4-story, 120-bed addition. With the opening of this addition in December, 1950, complete general hospital service will be available to all residents of the County. Unlike many other hospitals under County sponsorship, Prince Georges Hospital has successfully overcome many of the problems which proved so fatal to their successful operation.

POLICE

	1933.	1950.
No. of police officers	11 (Constables)	42
No. of desk clerks	None	7

The Police Force operates from stations in Hyattsville and Marlboro. Each station, and all police cars, are equipped with two-way radio-telephone communication. Also connected by teletype with D. C. and Maryland State Police, and with eastern police network. Studies are now nearing completion to add about 20 members to the force.

FIRE PROTECTION

	1933.	1950.
Volunteer Fire Companies	22	29
Rescue Squads	0	11
County appropriation to companies	$13,500	$47,600
Fire Control Center appropriation	None	$28,520

Two linked Fire Control Centers are operated by the County Commissioners at Hyattsville and Capitol Heights, to which all fire companies are connected by direct telephone line. All alarms are sounded by signal from the centers, to summon the nearest companies. In 1950, Prince Georges became the only County in the United States with two-way radio-telephone communication between a central station and apparatus away from station. In addition to the sincere interest which the County Government has in the Volunteer Fire Companies and Rescue Squads, the individual members of these companies and squads carry a heavy burden for which we are sure our people are deeply grateful. One of the real direct and practical benefits which our people receive from the fine work of the companies and squads in the reduced insurance rates which are applicable to Prince Georges County.

STREETS AND ROADS

In 1945, with legislative approval, the County Commissioners created a County Engineer's Department in the County government. The County Engineer handles construction and maintenance of the County Road System; designs and supervises construction in the Metropolitan Improvement District and in Special Improvement Districts; and prescribes and enforces standards of street construction in new developments.

ELECTIONS

Early this year the County Commissioners purchased 125 voting machines, and they are being used for the first time in the 1950 primary and general elections. They have also ordered 40 additional machines to keep pace with the steadily increasing registration of voters.

ADMINISTRATION

Internal service functions of the County government, such as property assessment, collection of taxes, general administration, budgeting, accounting, purchasing, housing, and legal service, have kept pace with the growth of the County and its public service departments, both in scope and in progressive efficiency.

Following the uniform State pattern, tax assessment is conducted on a modern, systematic basis, which, as far as humanly possible, has eliminated inequalities and inequities of assessment which are bound to occur in any assessment system.

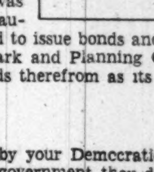
The office of he County Treasurer, where tax bills formerly were prepared by hand, is mechanized to the ultimate degree, and its achievements in efficiency have attracted experts from the entire State and the far corners of the country to study its operation.

The Office of the County Treasurer collects all County Taxes, State Taxes, Park and Planning Taxes, Metropolitan Area Taxes, Washington Suburban Sanitary Taxes, Washington Suburban Sanitary Front-foot Charges, Special Area Taxes and Special Area Ad Valorem Taxes. Also collects Fire Taxes in the 6th, 12th, 18th, 20th and part of the 19th Districts. The modern, efficient method of handling tax bills have materially reduced the number of pieces of property sold at tax sales. At the annual tax sale in March of this year, out of over 92,000 accounts there were only 779 tax sales, which is a remarkable demonstration of the efficiency of the office.

A 1950 Act of the General Assembly requires the County Commissioners, beginning in December, to meet twice instead of once weekly, and requires the President of the Board to give full time to his duties, which include supervision and direction of all departments. Under the same Act, much of the static, statutory organization under the Commissioners was eliminated, and they were granted a flexible and dynamic control over their departmental organization.

Under that authority the Commissioners have prescribed rules for their proceedings; have created and organized a Department of Budget and Accounts and adopted a modern and rigid budget system under a Comptroller; have reorganized their Clerk's Office into a Department of Administration; have created a Personnel Board to prescribe and administer personnel and employment policies; have put their legal service on a departmental rather than a consulting basis.

FLOOD CONTROL



The County Government has been diligently working towards a solution of the flood condition at Bladensburg. Through the persistent efforts of our Congressional Delegation in Congress, and particularly Congressman Sasscer, the Army Engineers made a comprehensive detailed survey of the area and made its report to congress. Under the sponsorship of Congressman Sasscer, a bill providing for an authorization of funds as a Federal contribution towards the project was passed and signed by the President. In order to meet the terms of the Federal Act, the General Assembly of Maryland in 1949 passed a bill which was signed by the Governor on May 6, 1949, in which the cost in excess of the Federal grant was allocated between the State of Maryland, acting through the State Roads Commission, which was authorized to appropriate $1,500,000; the County Commissioners of Prince Georges County were authorized to issue bonds and appropriate the proceeds therefrom in an amount not exceeding $1,500,000, and the Maryland National Park and Planning Commission was authorized to issue bonds in an amount not exceeding $250,000 and appropriate the proceeds therefrom as its contribution to the cost of the project.

CONCLUSION

The preceding summary of some of the improvements, the scope and quality of services offered by your Democratic officials in the last 16 years amply demonstrates their alertness in providing for the people, the kind of government they desire. The Democratic Party of Prince Georges County, pledges its continued efforts in behalf of all of our people and solemnly promises the continued recognition of the governments obligation to provide public services and facilities for our people within their ability and their willingness to pay. All of these improvements have been made and services rendered by your County Government without increasing the real estate tax rate and indeed with a reduction of that rate.

On this record we respectfully solicit your support for the Democratic candidates in the coming election on November 7, 1950.

H. P. Leeman Reelected By Citizens' Federation

Group Also Votes An Amendment to Constitution for Dues Increase

The Federation of Citizens' Associations reelected Herbert P. Leeman, former head of the Society of Natives, as president at a meeting in the District building last night.

The federation amended its constitution, by the required three-fourths vote, to raise dues from $10 to $15 a year. Groups which have already paid the $10 dues now owe $5 more.

Other officers elected last night were: Dr. M. Virginia O'Neil, of The Mount Pleasant Citizens Association, first vice-president; Dr. J. Ross Veal, of the D. C. Medical Society, second vice-president; Mrs. Edward B. Morris, of Fort Davis Citizens Association, secretary, and Harry N. Stull, of Staunton Park Citizens Association, treasurer.

Speakers last night included: Inspector John E. Fondahl, acting director of District civil defense; Max Schwartz, director of air raid warden service; Dr. Maurice Protes, and Frederick W. Brown, both of the District Diabetic Society.

Nominated by the federation for the Evening Star outstanding citizenship award was Vernon V. Baker, chairman of the public utilities committee and member of Shepherd Park Citizens Association.

David Babp, of the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association, was elected secretary emeritus.

Elected to the executive board were the following delegates: Babp, Baker, Mrs. Henry A. Bartlett, Burroughs; John H. Connaughton, Petworth; Joseph A. Kaufmann, Forest Hills; Thomas E. Lodge, American University Park; Jerome P. Lynch, Brentwood Terrace; Clifford H. Newell, Arkansas ave.; Lester H. Steinem and Walter F. Wasson, West End.

Jerry Kluttz, who conducts the Federal Diary, is on vacation.

Building Code Revision Partly Completed

The four-year job of revising the District Building Code has been partially completed, and a final draft of the finished portion is scheduled to go to the Commissioners this week for approval.

Deputy Director of Inspection J. J. Ilgenfritz said each provision has already been approved in substance by the Commissioners. Primary purpose of the job is to put into logica lsequence and is to put into logical sequence and subsequent amendments, he said.

The code contains egress (fire safety) regulations for new construction, but not for existing buildings.

A strict egress code drawn up in 1946, following several disastrous hotel and nightclub fires around the country, brought protests that Washington building owners would have to spend 100 million dollars to comply.

A year ago the Commissioners finally adopted fire safety regulations for new buildings, but set a committee of property owners and District officials to the job of preparing workable regulations for existing structures.

Ilgenfritz said proposed egress regulations for existing buildings that are altered or converted to other uses will be sent to the Commissioners in about a week. Regulations for other existing structures have not been drafted, he said.

Ilgenfritz said he hoped the code, except for incompleted parts of the egress regulations, would be approved and printed for public use by the first of the year. Revisions were made by an Advisory Citizens Committee, the Department of Inspection and the fire marshal.

Harl of FDIC Named Chairman In Arthritis Drive

Maple T. Harl, chairman of the board of directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, has been named chairman of the District chapter of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation's 1950-51 campaign, it was announced yesterday.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, national foundation chairman, who announced the local appointment, said the campaign will open here and nationally on November 14. It will end December 15.

"It is of the greatest importance that we all help in the fight against rheumatic disease—arthritis and rheumatism—which cripples more than 7 million people in this country," said Clay. "The dramatic new drugs have shown the way, but they are not the complete answer." Clay added that more than 97 million man days of work are lost each year because of arthritis.

If last year's auditions are an indication, contestants from this year may expect invitations to entertain on radio and television shows fo owing their performances in the Government talent show.

Scouts from radio and television stations, along with public relations officials, have been invited to attend the audition, R. I. Tompkins, chairman of the auditions committee, announced.

Police Board Asks Dismissal Of 2 Police

A Police Trial Board yesterday recommended dismissal of two policemen recently cleared in District Court of charges of stealing two air conditioners.

The board found Pvt. Warren G. Farran, of the Eighth Precinct, guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer, refusal to respond to the questioning of superior officers and failing to maintain constant patrol.

His partner, Pvt. Henry Martin, was found guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer, making an untruthful verbal report, failing to maintain constant patrol, making an untruthful statement and conduct prejudicial to the force.

The charges were an outgrowth of the alleged theft of the air conditioners. On the board, which tried the two men Friday, were Inspector Robert A. Pearce and Capts. John Agnew of the Sixth Precinct, and Thomas Edwards of the Eleventh Precinct. Their recommendation will be sent to the District Commissioners for final action.

Grand larceny charges were placed against the two policemen last June after night watchman Sherman T. Callaway reported two air conditioners were taken from the Berkshire Apartments project at 4201 Massachusetts ave. nw. The units were found in the back seat of Farran's private car, police said.

At their trial, the charge was dismissed against Martin for lack of evidence. Farran was convicted but the verdict was set aside after Callaway's serious criminal record was disclosed. Charges were then dropped against Farran.

Farran, 30, has been a policeman for four years. Martin, 50, has been on the force 26 years. In 1941, he was convicted in District Court for simple assault and sentenced to a year in jail. The conviction was reversed later by the District Court of Appeals.

Barkley to Speak

Vice President Alben Barkley will speak at Western Maryland College's homecoming convocation Saturday, November 18, in Alumni Hall, Westmister, Md., at 10:30 a. m. The public is invited.

Film Producer to Give Four Lectures Here

Dr. Alexander Markey, independent producer of spiritual pictures, will give four lectures beginning Wednesday at 8 p. m. through Saturday in the Theosophical Lodge Rooms, 726 11th st. nw.

His subjects will be: "Journey into Mystery—Unique Occult Experiences Among the Polynesians," "Forbidden Miracles—Discovery in Healing," "The Glorious Choice," and "Adventure Into the Golden Age." The lectures are open to the public without charge.

ABC Board Will Consider Atlas Club License Tuesday

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board will hold a hearing Tuesday to determine whether the Atlas Club is qualified to obtain a private club liquor license.

Located at 1349 E st. nw., the Atlas Club was one of 11 Washington after-hours clubs attacked last March by United States Attorney George Morris Fay. A court action against the club was withdrawn in May on the stipulation that it apply immediately for a license. It did so, but the board took no action because the club's president, Sidney Brown, was in Europe and unavailable for the required fingerprinting.

James O'D. Moran, ABC Board member, said no protests have been lodged against application. But the Atlas must demonstrate that it is a bona fide club, he said. The hearing will be held at 10 a. m.

The board has also scheduled these cases for hearing this week:

Monday, November 6, 10 a. m., Schwartz Liquor Store, Inc., 500 7th st. sw., charged with sale and delivery of alcoholic beverages to an intoxicated person.

Thursday, November 9, 10 a. m., Jo-Del Restaurant, 719 9th st. nw., charged with "failure to carry out in good faith" the provisions of the ABC Act.

$2,182,474 Collected in Chest Drive

Campaign Donations Pass Halfway Mark Three Weeks After Launching of Effort

Washington tucked away 50 percent of a $4,260,000 quota into its Red Feather purse at the end of three weeks' campaigning last week.

Community Chest Campaign Chairman Hugh K. Duffield, noting a slower pace than the first three weeks last year, notified chairmen of all soliciting units "that all possible assignments should be completed by volunteer workers this week."

"If each key man or other individual worker will see the people for whom he has accepted responsibility, all out campaign unit thermometers in the Washington Hotel Hall of Nations' Red Feather headquarters will take an upward spurt," he said.

"I hope we can reach 65 percent by Friday's report meeting," he added.

Servicemen Add to Need

A total of $2,182,474 has been subscribed in the Washington area chest campaign to date.

The campaign goal of four and one quarter million dollars is needed to provide services for an estimated 284,000 needy persons. Chest authorities calculate another 138,500 must be provided for, figuring $15 as the average unit of service.

"In this personalized goal we include," Duffield said, "some 34,000 members of the armed forces and their families who are expected to turn to our Red Feather agencies for assistance and counseling in these days of recurring international emergencies."

Today the Barney Neighborhood House, a Red Feather agency at 470 N st. nw. will celebrate its forty-ninth anniversary. Two hundred associate members have been invited by the board of trustees to attend a tea at 5 p. m.

Mme. Dreyfus-Barney Arrives

Mme. Laura Dreyfus-Barney, daughter of the original donor of Barney House, arrived from France yesterday to be an honor guest at the celebration.

Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, president of the board of trustees, will be hostess. A musical program will be presented by students of the Settlement House.

On Tuesday, the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, is scheduled to address workers at the general report luncheon at 12:20 p. m. in the Washington Hotel Hall of Nations. Invocation will be offered by Dr. C. C. Hung, pastor of the Chinese Community Church.

Guests of honor will include Mrs. John R. Steelman, chairman of the Red Feather Cavalcade—campaign opener held on October 12—and her associates on the committee.

Red Feather "Oscars" will go to key men who have completed their assignments.

The first of a series of special advertisements publicizing Government agencies and bureaus that have "gone over the top" in their Chest quota reports will appear in newspapers and periodicals starting Monday, November 6.

Ft. Belvoir GIs Find Nothing To Do in Quiet Alexandria

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

If you want to look at an unmet community need, drive over to Alexandria any Saturday night and go down the main street.

There it is, looking right at you.

Every Saturday night, hundreds of soldiers stationed at Fort Belvoir come to Alexandria, either to drop off the bus there, and try to find "something to do," or to wait for a bus into Washington.

They sit on the curbs. They wander over the Christ Church yard. They walk up and down the streets, looking for companionship, whistling at attractive girls.

Undignified? Sure. But there isn't any place for them to go.

Hospitality Lounge Needed

E. Austin Thompson, executive director of the Alexandria Community Chest, said yesterday that "Alexandria faces as critical a situation with the servicemen as any city in the country."

He said that a hospitality lounge is "required at once—not two months from now. It was needed months ago."

Thompson said that a citizens' committee now is studying ways and means of acquiring such a lounge. But "undignified and bad means of financing are now being proposed," he said.

"This lounge is a community project and should be financed through community funds, which means from the five percent which has been added to our Federation goal for services to the armed forces. They must be provided at once, not in the indefinite future."

The impact of the peacetime army is being felt in Washington as well.

Gretchen Feiker, program coordinator of the YWCA's Young Adult Department, pointed out that the number of servicemen who come there on Saturday nights has gone up from 646 in May to 1206 for the first three weeks of October.

But now the Young Adult Department is carrying on the program which it previously shared with the USO for both service and civilian personnel between the ages of 17 and 30. With the departure of USO, the staff was cut one half. "Y" officials have to close the penthouse two evenings each week because of the limited staff.

And, the coordinator warns, "Even at present and under existing conditions there is inadequate supervision of the young adults using the building. In order to continue the program which we feel is needed, we must have additional trained professional personnel."

Chest Hopes to Give $230,000

At present, only one organization devotes its activities exclusively to the armed forces needs. That is the Associated Services for the Armed Forces, which includes the Jewish Welfare Board, National Catholic Community Service and the YMCA.

All are members of the Community Chest Federation. But as the size of the armed forces goes up, other Chest agencies also are being called on to help with the problem. Already there are increased demands on agencies like the Travelers Aid Society, the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen Club.

The Community Chest has earmarked a fund of $230,000 for aid to servicemen and their families. That much money will be distributed—if the campaign reaches its $4,260,000 goal.

19 Stores Stage Exhibits Featuring Schools As Part of American Education Week Here

The Washington Post

MAKE EXHIBITS—Three pupils of the Janney School, Wisconsin ave. and Albemarle st. nw., are shown with one of the exhibits the students have prepared that will be shown in shop windows in the neighborhood in connection with Education Week. Left to right are: James Riley, 7, of 4327 Harrison st. nw., Dorothy Fawcett, 7, of 4417 Albemarle st. nw., and David Keith, 7, of 4409 Warren st. nw.

Education is the current feature product in the windows of 19 stores in the vicinity of Wisconsin ave. and Albemarle st. nw.

To mark American Education Week students at the Janney Elementary School have set up exhibits that will explain to the window shopper what education has for sale.

The exhibits show how children spend their time in school. One in People's Hardware, 4600 Wisconsin ave. nw., describes by charts "A Day in the Second Grade." Another in the window of Peake's DeSoto and Plymouth dealers, is entitled "From Print to Script in the Third Grade."

The Grove Printing Shop, 4024 Brandywine st. nw., features "Insect Friends and Enemies" as studied in the fifth grade.

Mrs. Sylvia L. Samenow, 5B-6A teacher at Janney, thought up the idea of taking the school out into the community as a change from the usual education week theme of inviting the community in to see the school.

Students in her classroom visited the merchants, urging them to contribute window space.

Every grade and every student in the school has participated in the project, according to Miss Nell Hiscox, principal of Janney.

Other schools in the Greater Washington area have scheduled special programs to bring attention to education during the week nationally celebrated by schools from November 5 to 11.

The Montgomery County Board of Education urged citizens to drop in on the schools during school hours.

Arlington County scheduled open house from 3 to 6 p. m. Sunday at eight schools. They are Abingdon, Glencarlyn, Yorktown, Barrett, Randolph, Reed, Stratford and Oakridge.

Arlington School Superintendent William A. Early will speak at 11 a. m. services Sunday at the Walker Chapel Methodist Church, 4102 N. Glebe rd., Arlington. The theme of the services will be "The Public Schools in Relation to the Religious Heritage of the Nation."

A special window display in Penney's department store in Clarendon will feature audio-visual aids used in Arlington schools.

Alexandria's George Washington High School will present a historical tableau at an open-house program Monday at 7:45 p. m.

The Burdick Vocational High School, 1300 Allison st. nw., will hold open house Tuesday from 7:30 to 9 p. m. The school will be in full operation with all classrooms and workshops open for inspection.

The Pleasant View Elementary School, Kensington, Md., will hold open house Wednesday and Thursday from 9:30 to 11:45 a. m. and from 1:15 to 2:45 p. m.

The Chamberlain Vocational High School will hold its annual open house Tuesday between 7:30 and 9:30 p. m. at 14th and Potomac ave. se. School shops will give demonstrations of their work and there will be a glee club entertainment at 8 p. m. followed by refreshments.

Barbers Study Hike in Haircut Price to $1.25

A referendum on whether the price of haircuts should be increased —possibly to $1.25—is being conducted among Washington's organized barbers, it was learned yesterday.

Standard charge for a haircut has been $1 here since June 1946.

H. S. Fink, president of the barbers' union, local 239, (AFL), said postcards were sent to 700 barber members about three weeks ago.

The cards, he said, ask barbers if they believe increased operating expenses warrant a higher price on haircuts. No change is contemplated in the price of shaves.

Deadline for returning the postcards is November 15, Fink said. "It will take at least 75 percent of the membership to change the present haircut charge," he explained.

Fink declined to guess the outcome of the referendum.

Sought in Theft

D. C. Cashier Held in Ohio; Has $13,000

James Norman Eshelman, 40, wanted for the theft of $16,000 from the Coca Cola plant, 400 7th st. sw., was arrested early yesterday in Athens, Ohio, on a tip from his wife to police.

Police said she told them after he disappeared that he had arranged to meet his brother at an Athens hotel.

He had about $13,000 in cash with him and readily admitted taking it from the company's safes here, Washington police were informed.

Police said he was willing to return to the District to face larceny charges. Detective Sergt. B. D. Clark of the general assignment squad left for Athens last night to bring him back.

Eshelman, who lives at 1126 16th st. S., Arlington, had been a cashier at the Coca Cola plant for 15 years. His wife told police Friday that he left home about 7 p. m. Thursday night to attend a lodge meeting and did not return.

Police broadcast a lookout for him throughout the East. Then, yesterday morning, his wife told them he had called his brother in Parkersburg, W. Va., Friday and had arranged to meet him in a hotel in Athens. The brother called Mrs. Eshelman about it here. Washington police sent a special alert to Athens police. Police added that a sister of Eshelman is living in Athens.

Frank D. Noel, manager of the plant, said the money represented receipts, payroll and the night deposits of drivers.

Death Benefit For Firemen Is Doubled

The Arlington County Board yesterday voted to underwrite a $5000 increase in the county's death benefit for volunter firemen killed in the line of duty.

The action, bosting the total benefit to $10,000 was taken after County Manager A. T. Lundberg reported insurance companies have set a $5000 ceiling on policies covering firemen. He said the only alternative, in the event an increase was desired, would be for the county to assume the added obligation.

As a result of the decision, the estate of any volunteer killed in line of duty now will receive $5000 from insurance provided by the county and an additional $5000 to be appropriated from county funds. The added benefit was requested two weeks ago by John Paul Jones, president of the county Volunteer Firemen's Association.

The board also voted unanimously to ratify a proposed mutual aid pact under which civilian defense agencies in the Greater Washington area would pool or exchange services and facilities in the event of emergency. A statement of "common policies," drafted by area defense officials here last Thursday, also was approved.

The board approved an appropriation of $12,172 for the purchase of five radio-equipped scout cars for the police department.

Following yesterday's meeting, members of the board participated in brief ceremonies formally opening the county's new $650,000 incinerator on S. Eades st. near Four Mile Run.

Lincoln Memorial Ranks As Top Tourist Attraction

More people went to see the Lincoln Memorial during the last travel year than any other monument or park under the jurisdiction of the National Park Service.

The Interior Department yesterday said that national park and monument visitors set a new record for the travel year ended September 30. More than 32,780,000 people got out and looked, walked over and visited park facilities.

The Lincoln Memorial accounted for 2,042,632 of these, as compared with 1,656,916 during the 1949 travel year.

Hereabouts, the Washington Monument was the second most-visited spot, with 903,976 viewers compared to 857,108 during 1949.

The more recently completed memorial to Thomas Jefferson was visited by 655,185 persons, compared to 558,040 in 1949. The number of visitors to the Lincoln Museum in the old Ford Theater also increased during the period. A total of 109,152 persons went in there in 1949, compared to 112,679 in 1950.

In nearby Virginia, the Lee Mansion was visited by 320,608 persons in 1950, compared to 329,655 during 1949.

GU Student Killed When Car Hits Wall In Virginia

Woman Companion Critically Hurt; D. C. Boy, 6, Hit By Auto Near Home

A Georgetown University student was killed and his companion critically injured late yesterday afternoon when he apparently lost control of his car and crashed into a wall at Mount Vernon.

He is Charles W. Schew, 31, who lived in Healy Hall on the university campus. Fairfax County Trooper F. C. Plitt said he was a captain in the Army Reserves and was from Dayton, Ohio. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Fort Belvoir Hospital.

Mrs. Rutledge was given emergency treatment by the resident physician, Dr. Warren Brill, and was taken to Garfield Hospital, where she was admitted with third-degree burns to the body. Hospital authorities said her conition is poor.

Fairfax Government Defended, Attacked

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

Fairfax County's simmering political pot neared the boiling point yesterday, with new appeals by supporters of all three forms of government on which voters may ballot Tuesday.

The day's development included (1) a stout defense of the existing government by G. Wallace Carper, chairman of the present board of supervisors; (2) a reply by supporters of the county executive form to charges by county manager advocates that the executive form offers only "token" changes from the present government and (3) an assertion by a past president of the county's Lay Health Association that the recent resignation of Dr. H. C. Bradford, county health officer, constitutes a "warning to voters" that a change in government is needed.

Carper, in urging voters to retain the present government, contended it has given the county "necessary services" and still maintains a tax rate "lower than that prevailing in other similar municipalities."

He said the board of supervisors "endeavored constantly" to modernize the government, and cited a number of its accomplishments of the past 10 years.

The Fairfax County League of Citizens Favoring the County Executive Form took issue with supporters of county manager government for their assertion that the executive form, "aside from achieving local government . . . makes only token changes in the present plan."

The statement first paid tribute to the county manager advocates for their desire to bring about governmental reform in the county. Then, the league said the executive form makes all the changes the county manager form does "so far as functions in county administration are concerned."

It contended the only differences relate to a single phase of the duties of the county administrator and to the method by which the supervisors are elected.

The resignation of Dr. Bradford, who gave up his post because of "differences of opinion" with State and county authorities on how the local health department should be run, was injected into the campaign by Mrs. Donald Wilkins. An organizer and past president of the Lay Health Association, she also has been an active supporter of the county manager government.

Mrs. Wilkins termed Bradford's criticism of the State health department and county supervisors as "another example of buck-passing in Fairfax County's archaic government." Under the existing system, she said, "the people complain about health problems; the board of supervisors blame the State health department; the State department blames the local health officer and the health officer in turn blames the supervisors."

Meanwhile, the Fairfax Taxpayers Advisory Association complained that another group was capitalizing on its name to distribute "fear and smear" literature in an effort to retain the present form of government.

Edward T. Gibbons, president of the group, which is a strong supporter of county manager government, warned that the new Fairfax County Taxpayers Association, Inc., is not to be confused with the "well-established Taxpayers Advisory Association." He said the new group is a "cell of the same political group that has ruled the county for so many years."

D. C. Firemen, Policemen Being Drafted

Local draft boards have ignored recommendations of a special committee to defer policemen and firemen, with the result that about 60 have been lost to the armed forces.

The District Agency Committee, reactivated last summer to seek deferments for essential city employes, consequently is now marking time until a Federal policy has been laid down, Chairman Walter L. Fowler said yesterday.

During the last war, he noted, the committee worked through the War Manpower Commission, which had authority to make its recommendations stand. But no comparable agency has been set up in the present mobilization, and no deferment policy for Government workers put in effect, he said.

Refusal to grant deferments has hit the police and fire departments doubly hard, since they are now trying to increase their numbers to operate on a shorter work week.

In other departments each case is judged on its merits, Fowler remarked. For example, the only technician in Washington who could install certain equipment in the auditor's office was deferred four months, he said.

Archdiocese Gets 88-Acre Estate On Patuxent River

An 88-acre estate on the Petuxent River near Prince Frederick, Calvert County, Md., has been given to the Archdiocese of Washington by Charles Di Giulian, president of the Standard Art Marble and Tile Co., 117 D st. nw., it was announced yesterday.

In expressing the archdiocese's appreciation, Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle said that the beach part of the tract will be used as the site of a girls' summer camp by the Christ Child Society. An eight-room house with modern improvements also is located on the estate, which is eight miles south of Prince Frederick, Md., and has a half-mile frontage on the Patuxent River.

Di Giulian, who resides at 5900 Moreland st. nw., was born in Italy and came to the United States in 1908. He is recognized as an authority on art marble and tile and his company is one of the largest of its kind in this country.

Di Giulian also has contributed to charitable activities in Italy and has taken a prominent part in encouraging the Italian people to fight communism. Last year he contributed more than $60,000 to build a home for the aged and for war orphans in his native town of Arba, Province of Udine, Italy.

Ernest Dove Wins Flower Show Honors

All the chrysanthemums weren't decorating the sweaters of coeds at football games yesterday.

Some 500 "mums"—from tiny button buds to big, bronze double handfuls—were on display at Taft Junior High School in the fall chrysanthemum show of the Woodridge Garden Club.

Top honors went to Ernest M. Dove, of 8650 Rockville pike, Bethesda, for his winners in two classes, outdoor grown specimen and collections.

The men gardeners completely outdid the ladies at the show, with only three female entries making the winner's circle. Mrs. M. W. Cogar of 4705 Edmonston rd., Hyattsville, Md., shared the prize in the vase and basket quality exhibit with D. C. Duey of 9011 Sudbury rd., Silver Spring.

H. J. Clay of 2603 Monroe st. ne. took two blue ribbons for best spray type and best arrangement in the show.

A large mauve and reverse gold single flower, a Mrs. Roy, brought the judges' award for best exhibition type flower in show to Joseph E. Dentz of 120 Van Guren st. nw.

Best arrangement, children's class, was won by Nancy Clark, 10, of 1721 Otis pl. ne. for her yellow daisy-type chrysanthemums in a cream vase.

In the junior class, best arrangement was won by Miss Carol Hofmann of 1716 Evarts st. ne.

The exhibitors cast covetous glanaces at a guest to the show, a pink dahlia arrangement brought by C. L. Armentrout of 3416 22nd st. ne., from a plant he developed that is on the 1951 National Honor Roll of Dahlias. His plant goes on sale at flower stores next season.

New World-Wide Treaty Urged on Book Copyrights

A two-week meeting of international experts concluded at the Library of Congress yesterday with the recommendation that a new world-wide copyright treaty be adopted to protect literary, scientific and artistic works.

The proposals will be forwarded to the director general of United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization for review before the next UNESCO conference in Paris next spring. The proposals may be submitted to a world convention of governments in 1952.

Experts from 15 nations attended the meetings here. United States representatives were Dr. Luther H. Evans, Librarian of Congress; Attorney John Schulman of New York, and Judge Charles Wyzanski, jr., of Boston.

500 Expected At Broyhill Tea

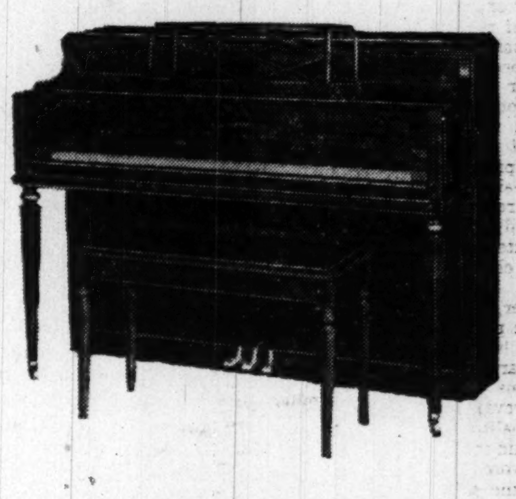
Gulbransen
"FAIRFAX" Console Pianos



You May Have Immediate Delivery Of Yours If You Act Promptly!

When the first few Gulbransen "Fairfax" Console Pianos were sent to us, they were bought up almost immediately. We asked for more, but were warned that it might be a long time before the factory could deliver. Now, at long last, they're here!

You'll never tire of seeing this beautiful Gulbransen in your home. The lines are faultlessly graceful; the console cabinet is of richly hued Mahogany that gathers new lustre with the years. And the 88-note keyboard produces a tone of splendid brilliance. You'll enjoy the fine, free, accurate action, too.

Come in tomorrow and see if the Gulbransen "Fairfax" isn't just the piano you've been waiting for. You may purchase it with a small down payment, and monthly terms to suit your convenience. (No credit restrictions have yet been imposed on pianos.)

Autumn and Winter Belong to Music!

Everyone knows that Spring is the season of the poet. In Summer, painters swarm over the countryside, propping up their easels wherever there is a view.

But when the leaves begin to turn and the good green earth goes to sleep, Music comes into its melodious own. The great orchestras go on tour. Auditoriums are packed, and millions applaud the unseen musicians over the air waves. And in countless homes all over the land, the older-than-history custom of family singing gets its annual revival.

The holidays that close out the year are especially and traditionally tuneful. Our Puritan forebearers raised their stern voices in song only in thanks for a fruitful harvest. And the Bible records the angels as singing but once, and then on Christmas morning: "Peace on earth, good will toward men!"

So, in this season of essential sadness, Music, always deeply moving, plays an even more significant role in the lives of men. The home in which there is Music is touched but lightly by the tragedy of the year's dying. For Music is life. Where Music is, is joy. Where Music is, is Peace.

Businessmen Indorse Plan For Tax Boost

SEA ISLAND, Ga., Nov. 4 (U.P.)—Ninety of the Nation's top businessmen told the Government mobilization leader tonight that they are willing to pay higher taxes.

Most of them also indorsed a policy of keeping one step—but no more—ahead of the defense program.

But they opposed an excess profits levy, even if it is clothed in the title of a "defense profits tax" as proposed by Secretary of Treasury John W. Snyder.

Meeting at this fashionable coastal resort for a conference of the Business Advisory Council, the businessmen were led in a discussion of the controls program by Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer and National Production Administrator William H. Harrison.

Disruption Called Inevitable

Harrison told the businessmen behind closed doors that his agency is attempting to map a two-to-three-year control program but ha been hampered by a lack of firm estimates of military requirements.

He acknowledged, it was learned, that it was impossible for the Defense Department to lay down all its needs over such a long period. He said temporary and local disruption would be inevitable in the civilian economy.

Sawyer told a news conference that Americans would deserve what they got if they ignored the warning of Korea.

'This has been the acid test of democracy," he told reporters.

Sawyer is known to favor immediate price and wage controls but he has refrained from making his views public to avoid an intra-Administration dispute. The opposite view has been expressed frequently by Economic Stabilizer Allan Valentine, who spoke at today's session, and Chairman W. Stuart Symington, of the National Security Resources Board, who was not present.

Administrative Help Sought

Valentine, Harrison, and Cyrus Ching, chairman of the Wage-Stabilization Board, engaged in bidding for the help of the businessmen in finding the manpower to operate the Government's control program.

A price administrator is Valentine's immediate goal. Ching is looking for men to fill the vacancies on his nine-man committee, and Harrison is worried about the lack of an adequate enforcement staff to back up his NPA control.

Defense Secretary George C. Marshall delivered an off-the-record address to the council tonight in the final formal session.

UAW Wins 10-Cent Hike At Harvester

CHICAGO, Nov. 4 (AP).—The International Harvester Co. and the striking CIO United Auto Workers union agreed on a five-year master contract today. The union gets a general hourly pay boost of at least 10 cents and a form of union shop.

The 10-week strike has idled 23,000 UAW members in Harvester plants in nine cities and an additional 14,000 workers in other plants.

The agreement, which the UAW hailed as "a complete victory on the four points at issue" will be submitted to the members soon for formal ratification. The union said the plants will not be reopened until this is done.

The contract provides an immediate 10 cents hourly pay hike, 4 cents representing an "improvement" factor and the remainder a cost of living factor. The improvement factor will give the union an annual hourly increase of 4 cents on each anniversary date of the contract.

Starting December 1, wages will be computed every three months in relation to the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics cost of living index. However, no decrease will be made before June, 1951, even if the index goes down in the meantime. A change of 1.14 points in the index will bring a 1-cent alteration in hourly wages.

The company said Harvester employes will be paid $1.80 hourly for straight time under the new agreement.

The union originally demanded hourly wage hikes of 15 cents and other benefits.

Under the union shop provision, union members must continue membership and new employes must join. Present nonunion employes need not join.

Receives Medal for Service to Charity

The Washington Post

FIRST PRESENTATION—Archbishop Patrick A. O'Doyle (left) yesterday presented the first Frederick Ozanam Medal for distinguished service to charity to Mother Marie Antoinette Blanchot, of Paris, France, Superioress of the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul, who accepted the honor in behalf of the 8000 members of that organization. Bishop Patrick J. McCormick is at the right

Superior Given Medal

Catholic University, Mother Marie Antoinette told the audience:

"The Daughters of Charity have only done their duty. In the long run, we have been only the distributors of the magnificent generosity of the American people."

With the presentation came notice of the Apostolic Blessing from Pope Pius XII, a message from Rome which said that "the Holy Father lovingly imparts to you and your sisters the Apostolic Blessing and wishes you most consoling success in your noble undertaking."

Also present were Henri Bonnet, French ambassador to the United States, and Madame Bonnet, who heard the Trinity College Glee Club and the Daughters of Charity sing the "Marseillaise."

Discussion of displaced persons and the work of the National Catholic Rural Life Conference and the National Catholic Welfare Conference were other features of the meeting.

The Rt. Rev. L. G. Ligutti, executive director of the rural conference, told a roundtable gathering at the Statler Hotel headquarters of the meeting that "if the national origins principle is to continue to guide United States immigration, I advocate basing it on the national origin of the boys who shed their blood in World War II and are shedding it now in Korea."

He blasted other phases of an "exclusive immigration" policy, noting that "this very afternoon on the American gridirons resounding cheers will go up in honor of football players with rather unpronunceable names."

"They are the children and grandchildren of the immigrants who, according to 1921 Congressmen, were declared not fitted for assimilation into the American picture."

The Rt. Rev. Edward E. Swanstrom, director of War Relief Services of the NCWC, discussed the problems of displaced persons and surplus population and their relation to the United States.

"Since peace is the product of good order," he said, "true peace will not reign in the world until there is a more equitable distribution of population and resources."

The ability that the United States has to assume the role of leadership "is equivalent to an obligation," he declared.

"Both in the thinking of the American people and in the laws of our land," Msgr. Swanstrom continued, "there are evidences of isolationism, individualism, outright apathy and greed."

To remedy the situation, four "basic programs" are necessary, he said:

1. Helping peoples of underdeveloped areas to help themselves.
2. Migration of peoples from overpopulated areas to nations greatly in need of the energy, initiative and knowledge of the new immigrants.
3. Assisting certain western European countries to a more efficient utilization of their resources.
4. Admission of refugees and peoples from overpopulated areas to the United States and similar nations, which, although not underedeveloped materially, could benefit from such immigration.

The conference will continue through Monday. At 8 p. m. today at the Catholic University gymnasium, the Most Rev. Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, will speak on "The Personal Responsibility of Every Christian."

Warden Raps Jail Methods

Modern penal institutions are turning out about as many repeaters as those of a half century ago, the warden of the Federal Reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio, contended here yesterday.

Warden L. Clark Schilder criticized the tendency to train prisoners to be better inmates than citizens, at a two-hour forum of the National Conference of Catholic Charities at the Statler Hotel.

He derided also the modern theory of parents being blamed for all the "juvenile delinquents of today." "It is our plain duty to discipline our children," Warden Schilder stated . . . "too often, someone other than the child is blamed." He said it probably stemmed from the "recently popular idea that discipline and training hamper a young person's self-expression."

Schilder maintained that institutional authorities are often condemned unless the morale among the inmates is high. "Does this term 'morale' mean they must seem contented and satisfied?" he asked.

"Since incarceration is painful, we should expect a certain amount of discomfort and, at times, even open rebellion to the program," Schilder told an assemblage of about 300 in the Federal Room.

In the audience were penal authorities Harold E. Hegstrom, director of the District of Coumbia National Training School for Boys, Joseph E. Dayton, director of Bureau of Rehabilitation, a Community Chest agency, Edward J. Kelly, executive secretary of the International Association of the Chiefs of Police, and Victor H. Evjen, administrative officer of the United States Courts in charge of Federal probation. G. Howland Shaw, treasurer of the NCCC and on the Board of Visitors of the National Training School for Boys, presided.

Although against depriving inmates of the priviledges they now have, Schilder said he "would be extremely chary in going any further until we know just how successful we are in what we have done."

Food Prices Rise .2 Pct. During Month

Retail food prices rose two-tenths of one percent between mid-September and mid-October, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said last night.

This brought retail prices to 2.2 percent higher than the pre-Korea mark.

The bureau said its special survey of 50 food prices in eight big cities put the retail index at 209 percent of the 1935-39 average.

Higher prices for eggs, dairy products, cereal, and bakery products, coffee, fruits, and vegetables more than offset somewhat reduced prices of meats poultry, fish, sugar, fats, and oils, the bureau said.

Egg prices which normally rise in the autumn, jumped 8.6 percent in the month period covered by the survey. The dairy products group went up 5.3 percent and coffee 2.2 percent.

All food prices with the exception of fresh fruits and vegetables contributed to the average 2.2 percent rise from June 15 to October 15, the bureau reported.

Sharpest increases in the four-months period were recorded for eggs, 39.2 percent; coffee, 15.6; dairy products, 9.3; fats and oils, 9.3, and sugar, 6.7.

Cereals and bakery products rose 4.7 percent during the four months, canned fruits and vegetables, 4.6, and the meats, poultry, and fish group, 1.4.

The cities included in the official survey are Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Columbus, Ohio, New York, Richmond, Va., San Francisco and Washington.

Milk Row Showdown Looms Wednesday

(First of a Series)

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

John Q. Public, finding quarts of wholesome milk on his doorstep each morning, is wondering why arguments are raging over the milk market of Greater Washington.

If he decided to try and find out he would find himself face to face with a barrier of complex economic and qualitative discussions which may well determine the quality—and indirectly the price—of his future milk deliveries.

Some of the confusion may be cleared Wednesday morning when the Wakefield-Model Farms Dairy outlines its case for an injunction against the District's milk regulations.

The District government is preparing for a full-scale showdown on the issue of the quality and safety of milk produced on farms inspected by District inspectors versus the so-called "outside" milk brought into the city.

A second airing of the issue is expected shortly when Senator Guy M. Gillette's Agriculture Subcommittee on Food holds hearings on the District government's handling of the milk market.

What's all the shouting about?

It would take a book with more pages than the 1800 farms supplying milk here to give sketchy coverage. Already some of the issues have been aired in court and congressional probes in the past quarter century, but as time marches on new points of controversy are raised and so the problem of who is right and who is wrong becomes harder to determine.

Producers vs. Independents

Basically, the fight has been a running one between the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, a producer cooperative which supplies 85 percent of the milk sold in Greater Washington, and the independents, local dairies who buy their milk elsewhere.

The association emphasizes that its supplies sold here meet the requirements of the District's 25-year-old milk act. One of these provisions is that only milk from farms inspected by the District may be sold here.

During the war, from 1942 on, this was relaxed because the association could not meet the area's zooming needs and "outside" milk was admitted from farms inspected by States and sometimes bearing the United States Public Health Service Grade A label.

In this eight-year-period the independents gained a strong foothold on the Washington market—home deliveries, stores, restaurants, hotels, schools and Governmental units. For the past six months the District Commissioners, goaded by the association, have tried to close the door to the "outside" shipments and this has been fought by the independents.

One dairy producer W. Lawson King of Gaithersburg, Md., a member of the association, has already announced that if the market is closed, he intends to file for an injunction and seek damages from the Commissioners.

The situation now is that the Commissioners ordered a ban ef- but compromised to the extent "outside" milk within the city, fective last Wednesday on sale of of permitting "outside" milk to be processed in their local plants for sale outside the city, pending developments of a "safe margin" of supply from D. C.-inspected farms.

Even this, the legal counselors have told the Commissioners, is illegal since Section 18 of the Milk Act prohibits "outside" milk entering here for any reason, according to their interpretation.

Two of the independents—Embassy Dairy, which is among the area's four largest in volume, particularly in restaurant sales, and Highland Farms, producers for High's stores, are operating under the compromise ban.

A third, Wakefield-Model Farms, was granted a court order last week permitting it to continue selling "outside" milk in Washington pending a hearing Wednesday on the dairy's request for an injunction. The firm has emphasized that all milk sold will continue to be United States Public Health Service Grade A.

The court order raised cain in the District government circles. At an open meeting with Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, Director of Public Health, the three independents had agreed to accept the comporimse. Later, Wakefield found it could not, officials informed the District.

But even before what they termed the "flip-flop," some Health Department officials were questioning the wisdom of gearing the continuation of the compromise on computations of supply.

To Add Fuel

They charged that dealers interested in showing a shortage of supply for their needs could expand out of the city sales, while others aiming at showing an adequate supply (beyond need for admitting "outside" milk) could reduce sales elsewhere. In other words, the "shortage" could be manipulated by both sides to the controversy.

With this in mind, it is clear that the court hearing will probably not write finis to the milk controversy, although it may well add fuel to the flames.

In seeking an injunction, Wakefield has contended that the District's milk regulations—orders adopted by the Commissioners to implement the Congressional Milk Act—are "arbitrary and unreasonable" and are enforced in favor of the Producers Association. It is hard for their producers to obtain D. C. permits, the dairy contends.

Sparks flashed during District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff's hearing on the restraining order Tuesday.

Principal Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray charged that the independents paid $2.50 a hundredweight less for milk than dairies buying from the association. After hearing, spokesmen for Wakefield took emphatic objection, declaring they paid up to and sometimes higher than the association price.

With this kind of a start, the District Court hearing may well turn into a slam-bang affair.

MONDAY—The difference between District-inspected milk and United States Public Health Service Grade A milk.

New Dental Specialty Unit Formed Here

Formation of a new dental specialty society, largely composed of District dentists, was announced last night.

The new organization, the International Academy of Oral Dynamics, was officially formed at the annual meeting of the American Dental Association last week, in Atlantic City, N. J.

Objects of the academy, its officers said, are to promote the art and science of dentistry through the application of oral dynamics (bite correction), especially as it applies to natural teeth; to conduct research on the subject, and to help spread the knowledge gained to the entire profession.

Dr. Thomas H. Forde, 5510 16th st. nw., was elected academy president; Dr. James J. Greeves, 1801 K st. nw., president-elect, and Dr. Ralph L. Morrison, 5959 Chapel rd., Seat Pleasant, Md., secretary-treasurer.

Members of the council, the organization's governing body, include Dr. Louis Neyman, chairman; Dr. Edward Kolitsko, vice chairman, and Dr. John Clemence, all of this city; Dr. Bernard Haley of Warrenton, Va.; Dr. John McSweeney of New York City, and Dr. James Melanese of Philadelphia.

Cost of Senate Races Exceeds Half Million

By The Associated Press

Official reports showed yesterday that Democratic and Republican Senate candidates had spent more than half a million dollars trying to win 36 Senate seats.

Most officials agree that because of the phrasing of the present law governing reports the actual total spent may be several times that sum.

Senator Gillette (D., Iowa), who heads the Senate subcommmittee policing this year's election, described the existing law as a sieve, without any real limits on the amount that can be spent by or for a candidate.

Republicans Spend More

The laws require two reports on campaign contributions and expeditures from every candidate, one 10 days before election and a final one not less than 30 days after.

The present tabulation covers the preelection reports and indicates that Republican candidates had more contributions than Democrats and had spent more.

The figures were: Republican contributions, $366,695, to $254,739 for Democrats, and Republican expenditures, $334,885, to $189,440 for Democrats.

Actually these do not tell the whole story, because in the normally Democratic South a primary election victory is the one that counts. And the reports are required only on the final election, although some candidates have lumped both together.

Expenses Deducted

Legally, there is a $25,000 top limit on campaign expenditures for a Senate candidate, and this applies only if the total number of votes cast in the last election multiplied by three cents equals $25,000 or more. Otherwise the limit is $10,000 or the 3 percent formula.

But there's a catch in this, too, because costs of hotel bills, telephone and telegraph, most printing and similar other expensive campaign items can be legally deducted.

Largest campaign chests were reported from Illinois, where Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D.) is opposed by former Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R.).

Lucas listed contributions of $66,695 and expenditures of $55,768, but noted most of the latter were exempt. Dirksen said he had received $53,863 and spent $51,646 with most of this exempt.

Next largest report was by Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), with contributions of $50,759 and expenditures of $48,170. But more than half of both amounts was spent in the primary.

In California, Representative Helen Gahagan Douglass, Democrat seeking a Senate seat, listed contributions of $42,757 and expenditures of $17,463. Her opponent, Republican Representative Richard M. Nixon, reported only $4209 in contributions and $2020 spent.

Six Report No Spending

Six Senators seeking reelection reported no contributions or expenditures: Hill (D., Ala.), Fulbright (D., Ariz.), Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), Aiken (R., Vt.), Lehman (D., N. Y.) and McMahon (D., Conn.).

Senator George (D., Ga.), who is unopposed, listed contributions and expenditures of $5630, but noted they were used in the primary.

In Ohio, New York and Pennsylvania, where major Senate battles will be decided, candidates of both parties listed relatively small campaign chests.

Following is a summary of the reports by States in which incumbent Senators are designated (*) with contributions and expenditures in that order:

Alabama—Lister Hill* (D), none and none; John C. Crommelin, jr. (Ind.), $3648 and $1436.

Arizona—Carl Hayden* (D), none and $1437; Bruce Brockett (R), $1635 and $4282.

Arkansas—J. William Fulbright* (D), none and none (unopposed).

California—Helen Gahagan Douglas (D), $42,757 and $17,465; Richard M. Nixon (R), $4209 and $2020.

Colorado—Eugene D. Millikin* (R), none and $8628; John A. Carroll (D), $7320 and $7352.

Connecticut—Brien McMahon* (D), none and none; Joseph E. Talbot (R), $5275 and $4867; William Benton* (D), $1706 and $1705; Preston S. Bush (R), $55,007 and $43,221 plus $4324.

(In Connecticut, Bush said some other candidates listed only personal expenditures, whereas the totals for him include expenditures of his campaign committee.)

Florida—George A. Smathers (D), $2500 and $2225. John P. Booth (R), $2265 and $10,549.

Georgia—Walter F. George* (D), $5630 and $5630 (unopposed, all primary).

Idaho—Henry C. Dworshak* (R), $2000 and $1400; Clarence J. Burtenshaw (D), $5570 and $3700; Herman Welker (R), $9055 and $5825; D. Worth Clark (D), $3200 and $1775.

Illinois—Scott W. Lucas* (D), $66,695 and $55,768; Everett M. Dirksen (R), $53,863 and $51,646.

Indiana—Homer E. Capehart* (R), $27,670 and $28,449; Alex. M. Campbell (D), $11,235 and $9940.

Iowa—Bourke B. Hickenlooper* (R), $4425 and $5990; Albert J. Loveland (D), $2474 and $3715.

Kansas—Frank Carlson (R), $7360 and $4793; Paul Aiken (D), $23,547 and $9330.

Kentucky—Earle C. Clements (D), none and $1315; Charles I. Dawson (R), $3585 and $4332.

Louisiana—Russell B. Long* (D), none and none; Charles S. Gerth (R), $635 and $312.

Maryland—Millard E. Tydings* (D), $31,395 and $13,377; John Marshall Butler (R), $21,698 and $16,538.

Missouri—Forrest C. Donnell* (R), $20,169 and $2852; Thomas C. Hennings, jr. (D), $5710 and $5376.

Nevada—Pat McCarran* (D), $2300 and $2077; George E. Marshall (R), $4170 and $2787.

New Hampshire—Charles W. Tobey* (R), $957 and $203; Emmet J. Kelley (D), $6000 and $995.

New York—Herbert H. Lehman* (D), none and none; Joe R. Hanley (R), $419 and none.

North Carolina—Clyde R. Hoey* (D), none and $425; Halsey B. Leavitt (R), $55 and $382; Willis Smith (D), $125 and $283; E. L. Gavin (R), $110 and $1331.

North Dakota—Milton R. Young* (R), $150 and $360; Harry O'Brien (D) (no report).

Ohio—Robert A. Taft* (R), $1543 and $1322; Joseph T. Ferguson (D), $870 and $870.

Oklahoma—A. S. Mike Monroney (D), $3175 and $1195; William H. Bill Alexander (R), $6280 and $7457.

Oregon—Wayne Morse* (R), $50,759 and $48,170; Howard Latourette (D), $1635 and $1125.

Pennsylvania—Francis J. Myers* (D), $6200 and $12,600; James H. Duff (R), $13,229 and $551.

Rhode Island—John O. Pastore (D), $4225 and $640; Austin T. Levy (R), $23,790 and $27,030.

South Carolina—Olin D. Johnston* (D), none and none (unopposed).

South Dakota—Francis Case (R), $6107 and $6336; John A. Engel (D), $1420 and $3440.

Utah—Elbert D. Thomas* (D), $1500 and $1382; Wallace E. Bennett (R), $6750 and $3171.

Vermont—George D. Aiken* (R), none and none; James E. Bigelow (D), $150 and $150.

Washington—Warren G. Magnuson* (D), $17,705 and $23,535; Walter Williams (R), $26,985 and $29,520.

Wisconsin—Alexander Wiley* (R), $6540 and $6037; Thomas E. Fairchild (D), $1045 and $613.

Doubt in Both Camps Distinguishes Off-Year Vote

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

MOST of the signs point to another two years of Democratic control of Congress, with slightly reduced margins, but hold on to your money.

A bad case of polster jitters, possibly stemming from 1948 "wrong-guessing," is sweeping the country.

On both sides of the political turntable, the phrase "in the bag" is strangely missing.

If there is one single theme that distinguishes next Tuesday's election from other off-year contests, it is doubt, with a capital "D."

More than half of the 36 Senate seats on the block, regardless of impressive "leanings" either way, can reasonably be classified "in doubt."

Enough House seats are still in the same doubtful category to net Democrats an implausible pickup, or, equally improbable, to swing Republicans into control.

One political technician, baffled by conflicting reports from identical districts, put it this way: "This could be the screwiest off-year election since 1934."

A Quiet Electorate

NOT ONLY are the 1948 "crow-eaters" approaching this one with extreme caution, but the voters themselves are unusually quiet.

There's a difference between apathy and silence, the two terms frequently applied synonymously tc voter reactions. Reticence could mean that the man in the booth is getting ready to take a powerful sock at somebody, even though he isn't outwardly mad.

On the surface, he hasn't much reason to be mad. Nearly everybody in the cities has a job, and despite the high prices is able to "get along." The farmers are more prosperous if anything than they were in 1948. Up to this point the Korean war has been going far better than expected.

Aside from spotty crime scandals and general price griping, in the five States toured by this reporter there wasn't any visible sign of a brewing "revolution" against things as they are.

These are all favorable Democratic signs. Against them, Republicans cite the historic pattern of light voting and Democratic losses in every off-year since the peak Roosevelt fall of 1934. Unlike 1946, when the GOP took over control of both Houses, Republicans have been doing little or nothing with the price issue.

They've been dabbling with the "war and peace" issue less and less since the Korean war turned. They still hope to collect dividends on draft and casualty lists, however. Bungling in Washington, "Red infiltration" and "Socialism" have been their other key issues.

Whether this is enough to upset the Democratic "peace and a full stomach" line remains to be seen.

Resort to Mathematics

THE ANSWER may be found somewhere between the Republican and Democratic "maximum" and "minimum" claims.

Officially, Democrats are saying they expect to hold their own and stand a good chance of increasing their House and Senate majorities. Privately, Capt. Victor Hunt Harding, Democratic congressional expert, fixes his range between a net House gain of 10 Democratic seats and a net loss of 20. He thinks the net change in the Senate won't shift more than two seats either way.

Against this, Republican National Chairman Guy Gabrielson is predicting that the GOP will pick up at least 25 or 30 House members and 4 or 5 Senate seats. Republican Congressional Chairman Leonard Hall sees an outside chance of picking up as many as 55 or 60 seats.

Behind the scenes, Republican congressional technicians say it's this way: They can count up to 193 "pretty certain" House GOP seats, 21 more than Republicans hold now. Beyond that they see a doubtful fringe of 30 "that will go Republican if the trend is our way."

Thus, a strictly mean figure between what Democrats say is the "most" they will lose and what Republicans claim is the "least" they will gain produces this interesting result:

Republican net Senate pickups—Three.

Republican net House gains—Twenty-three.

Neither figure is enough to give Republicans control of either house, nor do they expect it. Republicans need a net gain of 7 to take over the Senate and at least 46 more seats to control the House. If that happens, and conceivably it could in this groping election, Republicans obviously would be just as surprised as the Democrats.

During the panicky early stages of the Korean war, "scared" Democrats frankly feared the Republicans would make it. Now the Democrats say they are "scared" only of the optimistic reports they are getting. They would like to predict overboard Democratic majorities, but that off-year election jinx stops them.

Sympathy for Truman

BOTH CAMPS last week figured all of their arguments were in and concentrated mainly on getting out their vote. For the Democrats, the willingness of the "bread and butter" vote to come out and be counted may tell the story. Republicans have always profited in off-years by a light vote, but they are working just as feverishly as the Democrats to turn out the vote "in the right places."

Candidates in tight races are also watching the horizon closely for late breaks that could influence the outcome. A really bleak turn in the Korean war would hurt them, even at this stage, most Democrats concede.

The vote of any crossroads hamlet might be important in this possibly "screwiest" off-year election since 1934

Atlantic Allies Could Miss the Tide

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

THERE is an old Spanish proverb that says: "He loses all who loses the right moment." The proverb comes to mind in connection with last week's meeting of the North Atlantic Defense Ministers.

For, in spite of cheerful official statements to the contrary, the ministers failed to do what they had set out to do. They failed to agree on the structure of the proposed international army to safeguard western Europe.

Because they could not agree—specifically, because the French Defense Minister would not agree with all the others—the United States declined to go ahead with the naming of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as the supreme commander, and the ministers did not begin to discuss the supreme commander's powers.

The daring new concept of a combined army is, therefore, little more than an idea and a hope. The North Atlantic allies have agreed on the forces which each of them will contribute, but they have not yet brought the force out of the paper planning stage into reality.

The man who would symbolize it and energize it as supreme commander must wait in the wings while the stage hands wrangle. At this rate, it is by no means sure, and will not be sure for several weeks, that the combined army can ever be put together.

The great danger that haunts many officials here and abroad today is that "the right moment" may have been lost.

If a great liner misses the tide, its passengers must wait only half a day until the ship can dock or sail. If a military commander misses the tide in launching an amphibious operation, as in Normandy or at Inchon, he usually has another chance later, although his hazards are made worse by the delay.

But if statesmen miss the psychological moment in bringing a great idea to life, they sometimes lose it forever. They run the risk that parliaments and people may lose interest, and they themselves may become frozen into fixed positions from which there is no withdrawal. When the momentum is checked and the drive is allowed to slacken, great schemes of international cooperation are apt to wither and die.

The 'Ifs' of History

HISTORY is littered with lost opportunities which, if seized in time, could have changed the course of the future. If the liberal forces in Germany had formed a federation in 1848, instead of bickering among themselves; if broadminded men in our own North and South had not let extremists gain control after 1850; if the Balkan states had formed a federation in the 1920s, as they had a chance of doing; of if Britain and France had seized the moment for stopping Hitler at the Rhine in 1936, who knows what horrors they might have spared mankind?

There is nothing foreordained in history, although the Marxists insist it is all a mechanical process. The accidents of politics, or the personal whims of politicians, or sudden gusts of public emotion, can push a nation's policies from one groove into another; and then it is usually too late to push them back again.

So it may be with this most revolutionary of all American decisions, which would put American troops into a combined army of the West in peacetime, under an American commander. If disagreements among the allies now lead to inaction and frustration, history may yet say that the Western World missed its golden moment.

American officials talk bravely of ironing out the difficulty within a few weeks. They argue that France has already moved forward, step by step, in the past two months, and will move further if handled right. "With some people," said an American policy-maker last week, "you can make headway by punching them in the jaw, but with the French in their present mood you have to stroke them gently on the head."

The trouble with this reasoning is that Congress will reassemble in a few weeks, probably this month, and Congressmen do not take kindly to head-stroking as a method of conducting foreign policy. If agreement is not reached, or action not taken without full agreement, this month, the reproaches and recriminations from Capitol Hill may make agreement more difficult than ever.

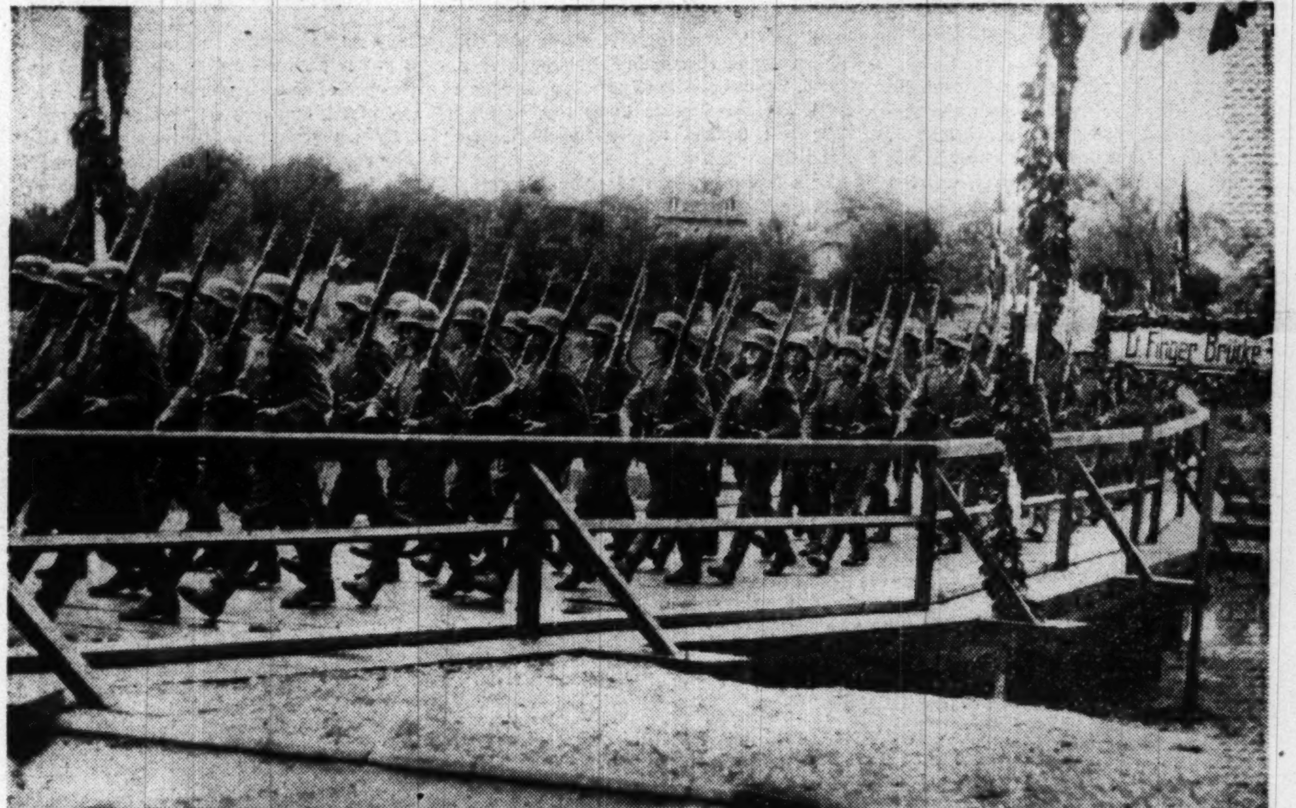
Long-Cherished Dream

IT IS ironic that France, of all countries, should be the immediate cause of this difficulty. For if there is anything that French statesmen have dreamed about for generations, it is a firm American guarantee of just the kind that President Truman has offered.

Thirty-one years ago, Georges Clemenceau almost disrupted the Paris peace conference by demanding the Rhine frontier for France. He gave up his demand only when Woodrow Wilson and David Lloyd George offered him an Anglo-American guarantee of instant help in the event of attack by Germany.

The guarantee of 1919 fell to the ground when the United States repudiated the Versailles Treaty; and when it lapsed, the poison of fear reentered the French mind and Germany started on the road of revenge.

Now, at last, the United States, Britain, Canada and eight western European countries have given France the guarantee of Clemenceau's dreams. They have given much more than a pledge to spring to the help of France in time of trouble.



Nazi troops marching across a bridge near Paris in 1940. The French can still hear the clump of those invading boots

They have offered to put their troops onto French soil now, in peacetime, under a single command; and the Americans, like the other allies, have made the offer with the apparent overwhelming support of public opinion.

Yet at the very moment when the United States was ready to make its offer real, when General Eisenhower was discussing his proposed assignment with his commander in chief, the French objected because the United States insisted on using German divisions in the combined army.

Outwardly, the differences between the French and Americans are of the sort that could be resolved in negotiations among military technicians and civilian experts.

The French contend that Germans should be used only in regiments or battalions, thoroughly mixed with French and other European units in a continental European army. The Americans insist that you cannot form an effective fighting force out of polyglot divisions; they argue that the workable unit is a division of one nationality.

But the difference, of course, goes much deeper. For one thing, the French have added political conditions; they demand that Western Germany first agree to pool its coal and steel industries with those of France, and they argue, too, that there must be a French commander, a European minister of defense and a European parlia-

Depression Spawned Albizu Terrorists

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

WHEN President Truman at his Thursday press conference expressed puzzlement as to what had engendered the attack upon him the day before, he voiced the perplexity that was in the minds of all who have studied our relations with Puerto Rico.

Why should Puerto Ricans attack this of all administrations? More effort has been expended for and more opportunities held out to the little Carribean Island in the last five years than ever before. Why should the man who had over and again expressed himself as friendly and as anxious to be helpful to Puerto Rico, be the target of an assassination plot?

As in all incidents of its kind, the background of the assault on Blair House is made up of wheels within wheels, and plots within plots.

The story may best be told by relating the history of the head of the Puerto Rican Nationalist movement, Pedro Albizu Campos, the Harvard graduate, former American Army officer and convicted seditionist who was arrested in San Juan Thursday for his part in the Washington outrage.

Back in 1917, Albizu, then about 28, was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army of the United States. He had a record of friendliness toward this country. He was of a good family and well-educated.

Here is a description of the young officer, as given Friday by a prominent Puerto Rican:

"He was handsome, very suave, of warm personality and quick to attract friends. A good speaker, he was able to rise above facts in his orations with the ease of a Hitler. Also, he was crazy as a loon."

Albizu is a mulatto, and, in those days, according to the same source, "recognizably so." As such he was used to the color prejudices of Puerto Rico, which are "subtler and not as cruel as in the United States, so subtle, in fact, that he may have been unconscious of them."

In the American Army he met with harsh social and economic discrimination more marked than it is today.

He took a "deep burn" to these discriminations. "Thenceforth, after his army service," continued this old acquaintance, "all things bearing a USA label stirred some passions in him. It didn't take him long to start thinking about Puerto Rico in terms of complete severance from the United States."

Little is known of his activities in the decade after the war, although the territorial files at the Interior Department undoubtedly record them. His big opportunity came after 1929 and was born of the world-wide depression which nurtured revolutionists in many countries.

The hard times of the early 1930s hit Puerto Rico even harder than other parts of the United States. The Puerto Rican economy was an agricultural one, based on sugar, coffee and a cigar-type tobacco.

Sugar went begging; prices dropped to zero. It couldn't be sold in the United States for the cost of transportation. The cigar trade is a semi-luxury market, and luxuries are the first hurt when times turn bad. The worst blow came in coffee, however.

A mountain-grown bean, the Puerto Rican coffee was used in the better blends and enjoyed a firm demand. But a series of hurricanes in 1928 and again in 1932 virtually wiped out the industry—a blow from which it has never recovered. Even today, with three years of aid from the Agriculture Department, Puerto Rican coffee production is only sufficient to meet two-thirds of the island's own demands.

The extreme misery to which the island descended, attracted to Albizu's Nationalist banner a great many Puerto Rican youths. By 1932 his organization had a definite fascistic hue. He had his own army of around 200 men. They wore colored shirts, similar to the brown shirts of Germany, and they practiced small arms firing and minor military tactics. Albizu had been a good soldier.

Albizu preached the same doctrines as Hitler and Mussolini, except for the racial theme. His was a pious-sounding message preaching love of family, a narrow patriotism under the guise of love of country, and

WORLD AFFAIRS

Nov. 7 Symbolizes Gap Between U. S. and USSR

This is the fifth background article in the "Information on World Affairs" program which is being carried out by The Washington Post and many schools of the area. Each Sunday for 26 weeks, The Washington Post will publish a similar analytical article. Each Thursday, The Post will print 30 multiple-choice questions (15 questions on the Sunday article and 15 on current news events). Readers will find these questions a stimulating test of their general information. On the same day, the same questions will be given in classrooms to junior and senior high school students. On Saturday, the answers will be presented.

Inquiries about the program should be addressed to Information on World Affairs Program, The Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

The program is being carried out under the direction of J. Edward Gerald, Department of Journalism, and Edgar B. Wesley of the School of Education of the University of Minnesota.

IT IS 33 YEARS since the Communists, on November 7, 1917, in the Petrograd Revolution or the Bolshevist Uprising, seized power over the Russian people.

This year's anniversary comes with peculiar appropriateness at the same time as the elections in the United States. It symbolizes the difference between the two regimes. In one, the government has not changed in 33 years. In the other, it can be changed every two years.

Communism came into power through war and revolution. That is the only way it can be put out of power. This, as much as any other attribute, distinguishes it from democracy as the Western world has always understood it.

The nature of Soviet society has not been readily grasped in the West. In the twenties, the Western world reacted instinctively in fear and anxiety and hostility toward the violently-born Communist government. Before Munich, when, for an interval, collective security suited the aims of the Communist regime as well as the hopes of the democratic West, the Communist government became respectable among nations. Its prestige rose when it was allied to the democracies during World War II.

In the years following the war, the old conflicts, hostilities and anxieties have returned. The Communists who rule Russia once again are feared and distrusted by most of the civilized world, as a threat to the peace and security of free governments everywhere, as the author of postwar aggressions on many fronts, as the cause of internal chaos in many lands.

WHILE WORLD OPINION toward Russia's Communist rulers has fluctuated, the regime itself has changed internally very little. It is substantially as Lenin constituted it. It really consists of two parts: the formal government structure which rules on paper and the party structure which rules Russia in fact.

The government laid down on paper has little validity at many points. In theory, the country is ruled by councils of workers organized in a highly centralized system, with relatively few Communists, 200,000, on the top and a supporting bureaucracy of 2 or 3 million functionaries. In form, there are 16 constituent republics or regions, 45 oblasts or states, and beneath the states the raions or counties.

The Supreme Soviet is the highest power in the state (according to the theory of government organization). Its members are nominated by workers who vote in elections that are always unanimous, in which there is only one choice. Of the total membership, 60 percent are party officials, army officers or secret police, about 10 percent technical intelligentsia, 10 percent industrial workers and 10 percent peasants (who make up 60 percent of the population).

The Supreme Soviet meets infrequently. A presidium functions ad interim. The laws it makes in permanent session are invariably approved by the Supreme Soviet. All proceedings are unanimously approved. According to a foremost American expert, there never has been a dissenting vote in these proceedings. Only once, in 1937, this same authority avers, was anything brought up from the floor, outside the carefully prepared official agenda.

REAL POWER is in the All Union Communist Party—the Bolsheviks.

At the top is the Politburo (headed by Marshal Stalin). The power is exerted downward through a Central Committee of the party, on down to committees in the states, clear down to city committees and finally to the executive bureau of the party cell.

The apparatus closely resembles an American political party turned upside down. Power, instead of flowing upward through local, precinct caucuses and county and state conventions to a federal convention, moves downward from the Politburo at the top. The elections by which membership at each level is determined are always unanimous, but even the persons elected by such fixed elections can be rejected if not approved by the echelon above.

Total party membership is relatively small (2,400,000 in 1939 and a peak of six million in 1945; this is out of a population of nearly 200 million.) Large and representative membership is not desired, as conventional democratic parties desire membership. Lenin, from the outset, sought a small, select, elite conspiratorial organization.

Russia's Communist government, for all its novelty of apparatus, is an old-fashioned oligarchy, often found in history. This oligarchy (the Politburo) is absolute in its powers. Decisions of the Politburo are always unanimous. They are not arrived at as political boards or commissions or legislative bodies of the West arrive at them.

The usual procedure, so far as Western observers can ascertain it, is more like the operation of a corporation board in which the president of the board holds all the stock. There is discussion. The president states his choice of opposing views. Then all the members vote for it.

COMMUNISM'S contribution to the philosophy of government, after 33 years, is not very original. It emerged in 1917 as a method of seizing power in order to establish socialism. It survives in 1950 not as a form of socialism, but as a form of power; it is not significant for its economic doctrine (the end it initially sought to further) but for the political means it invented on the pretext of seeking an economic end. The political means are distinguished from those by which preceding dictatorships seized power by the absolute degree to which the exercise of power has been developed rather than by the originality of the devices employed.

Communist power in Russia has fallen victim of the internal fears that always beset the holders of absolute power. Fear of any rival neighboring power compels the assault upon all nearby rival sovereignties. There is no point of equilibrium at which any absolute power can voluntarily come to rest as long as there exists anywhere in the world any challenge to it.

The destruction of all dissenting or rivaling power becomes by the dynamics of power politics the first purpose of the state. Other regimes in history have pursued this power frenzy to their own destruction, or to the destruction of all competing sovereignties. Such regimes lack the internal checks that might compel voluntary relinquishment of aggression as an instrument of policy. They can only go on until they meet external checks.

Possibility of cordial and friendly international relations is precluded. Hopes for peaceful understanding and cooperation are doomed. Precarious power balances are the most that can be expected as long as the dictatorship persists.

IN 1917, THE WORLD believed the Bolshevists were seizing power in order to establish socialism. This economic objective made the revolution unique. Thirty-three years later, the dictatorial power that was first perceived as a means to an end is recognized as an end in itself. Communism's notable contribution to government has not been an economic theory, but the scheme of absolute political rule.

This is the significance (and the threat) of the Bolshevist Uprising of November 3, 1917. It has accomplished the destruction of all political liberty inside Russia. It is driven, by its own internal forces, by an expansionist dynamic quality of tyranny as old as history, to seek the destruction of political liberty everywhere, by direct aggression where feasible, by internal discord where possible.

Brazil's 'Socialism' Probably Will Be a Relative Thing

By Virginia Prewett

Miss Prewett is a long-time former roving correspondent in Latin America for The Washington Post and the Chicago Sun. Later she was chief of information for Latin America for the International Refugee Organization. She returned to the States last December to marry a magazine editor, and now is doing magazine writing.

EARTH tremors to the south of us being noted by political seismologists these days are caused by a stampede of Brazil's weightiest political and financial personages to get aboard the bandwagon of President-elect Getulio Vargas.

A chorus arising among the upper-middle and top castes, which were the former dictator's electoral opposition, says that he is, after all, the best man for the nation at the moment. The moment, of course, was the morning after Vargas' smashing election by the lower-middle and working ranks.

The chorus is led by Oswaldo Aranha, Getulio's long-time Ambassador in Washington who bolted the Vargas camp in the last days of his 15-year reign, back in 1945.

In New York and Washington, in the plush corridors of international finance and politics, the news of Getulio's snowballing majority caused an expectant hush. Ears were bent to catch the first hint of the victor's intentions as constitutional president.

The big question they want answered is just what Vargas intends to do about making it attractive for American capital to go into Brazil.

Abbreviated reports of Vargas' first post-victory statements featured three points. First, the new government will be one of "evolution," not revolution. Second, it will be modeled on socialistic Britain or Sweden. Third, Brazil's ability to permit profits from American investments there to flow back here will depend on how many dollars Brazil has.

This first news caused some consternation. For years, American big-time investors, who today have few opportunities abroad, have longed to channel some of their boom profits into Brazil. Six hundred million itchy American dollars have gone in there since the war and have multiplied handsomely.

But the growing thought is that Brazil, with 50 million people, an area even greater than ours and vast resources crying to be developed, could absorb a billion or billions of our capital. Vargas' post-election reference to forming a government like Britain's threw a slight veil over this vision.

But the full text of Vargas' post-election statements puts a somewhat different light on the matter. It appears that Vargas was trying first of all to calm fears of Brazilian capitalists and sectors of the Brazilian army. They remember him as the man who rode to power on a revolution and imposed undreamed of advantages for the masses. Vargas' recent emphasis on "evolution" apparently was meant to assure these people that they could forget their fear that he would now impose even more sweeping changes, with a triumphant proletariat at his back.

Strange as it may seem to an American, Vargas' references to socialist Britain would be reassuring to a Brazilian capitalist conscious that communism is wooing the Brazilian masses by promising vaguely to turn everything over to them. And the American businessmen who shuddered when they read that Vargas will travel the road of Britain and Sweden did not realize that Brazil has a long way to go to catch up with our own advances in that same direction. To a Latin American, the Vargas reference would simply mean that he intends to follow the trends of the West, and not move toward Russian statism.

Vargas' full post-election statements, in fact, carry a concise blueprint for the coming of American capital into Brazil. He said all foreign capital will be invited, especially to provide low-interest loans to Brazilians. This recalls the new World Bank policy of lending money to private banks to relend at low rates, initiated in a loan to Mexico.

Vargas said he is against "parasite" foreign capital or foreign capital that wants to go into fields that Brazilian capital can cover. Enterprises basic to national defense, he said, should be controlled by national capital.

He then batted the whole question right back into our own laps by pointing out that the biggest obstacle to the investment of American capital in Brazil is that it would have to pay both an American and a Brazilian income tax. This, he said, is a situation only the United States Congress can relieve.

VARGAS fully admitted, however, the key fact of Brazil's immediate future: that the country must pull itself out of a bad economic hole and needs foreign capital to help.

Unnoticed by the world, Brazil has for several years been miring deeper into a real crisis characterized by inflation and caused to a great extent by a breakdown in her national equipment. The country has outgrown its transportation system and power resources. Lack of them is strangling the development of the interior, while impoverished hordes desert to the coastal cities, Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro. Farm output is falling and the cost of living, already high, is going higher each day.

Much of Brazil's rail equipment, long inadequate, is falling to pieces. President Dutra, on his 1949 visit here, told Gov. Gordon Browning of Tennessee that that State has more paved roads than all Brazil. Brazil's two great cities, Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, only 250 miles apart, will only be connected by a decent highway at the end of this year. The state of Sao Paulo alone has anything approaching an adequate road system joining farms to markets. Elsewhere, bad roads make trucking costs sky-high.

Brazil's power shortage has been acute for years. This has prevented the start of small processing plants in scores of small cities, plants that would reduce transportation costs from the farm to urban centers and would employ in the interior many of the migrants now pouring into coastal centers.

ANOTHER condition throttling Brazil is the high interest on money. Banks charge up to 20 percent in most instances. The Bank of Brazil nominally lends money at around 8 percent for some production, but the borrower has to pay the expenses of periodic inspections and the cost mounts rapidly.

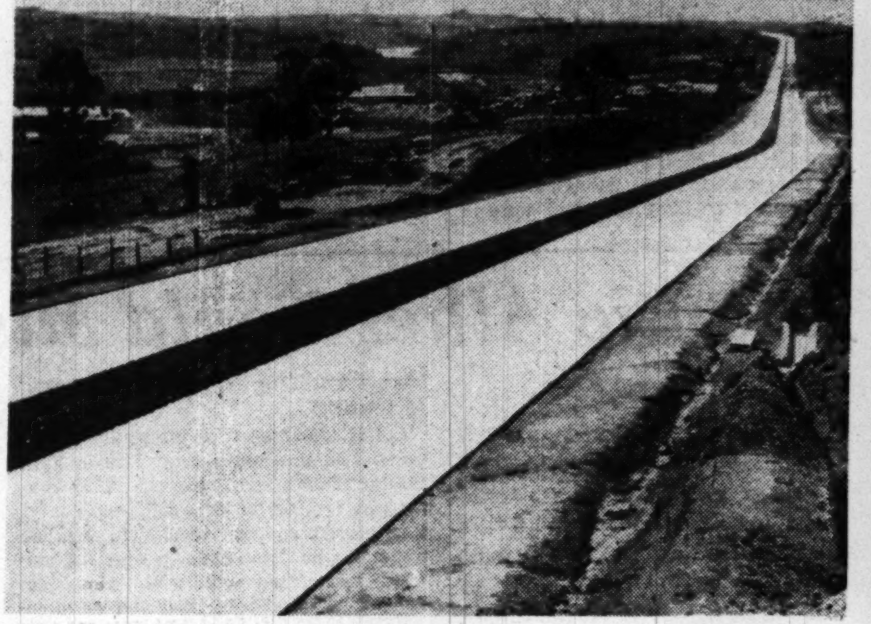
Obviously, Vargas wants foreign capital to help on the long-term national improvements that must be made. This type of investment would not yield the 25 to 30 percent or more that the Brazilian is used to making on money invested in manufacturing or business. In fact, Vargas' remark about "parasite" capital and fields which Brazilian capital can cover implies that these ultra-lucrative spots will be reserved for Brazilians.

An impartial observer, however, cannot see how the emergency can be solved with Brazilian capital continuing to make such high profits. Perhaps Vargas was foreshadowing lower returns for his countrymen when he warned of "sacrifices" to come.

FOR THOSE who know Brazil, it is neither surprising nor shocking that the opposition is now flocking to Vargas' bandwagon. The "adaptability" of Brazilians helps them solve their problems with far less violence and stress than most peoples.

Vargas also may need his former enemies to help control his friends. He has been swept into power by the underprivileged. The bandwagon hoppers who say he is the man for the moment do so in the hope that he will be able to maintain a reasonable restraint on his masses.

His failure to do so would certainly subject Brazil to violent swings to the left, then to the right. Such swings could produce chaos if they came at a moment when the country desperately needed cooperation at home and help from abroad to set its economic house in order.



Brazil has few roads like this superhighway linking industrial Sao Paulo with the port town of Santos, and it needs them sorely hatred for the United States as "American imperialist invaders." He called himself president, and named ministers of state, treasury and the army.

Can Puerto Rico Afford Independence?

His biggest obstacle appeared about this time in an effort by the United States to give Puerto Rico aid such as the Works Progress Administration was providing on the mainland. First came the Puerto Rico Emergency Relief Administration, then the Puerto Rican Reconstruction Administration.

ABOUT 1935 a new police chief had been appointed for the island, Col. Francis Riggs.

"Riggs was a saintly man," said the Puerto Rican quoted earlier, "a kind and gentle soul. Within a short time after his appointment he became greatly loved by the police. No man in that job could have a higher recommendation than that."

"This kind and gentle soul" became the first target in the Nationalist program of terrorism. Lots were drawn in Albizu's be-shirted army for the privilege or the duty of assassinating Riggs. Two youngsters, one in his teens, drew the fateful numbers.

The next Sunday the deed was carried out.

THE ISLANDERS were horrified. The Sunday atmosphere was charged with demands for prompt but legal retribution. Then happened one of those evil incidents that so often have changed the course of history.

The shooting of Riggs angered the police to fury. The two boys were thrown into a deep cell. Then, almost immediately, word came from the prison that both had been killed "trying to escape."

The community opinion that had been clearheaded about the immorality of the Riggs slaying, reacted angrily to the murder of his slayers. The whole affair took on the color of a political shooting.

The next action by the police added to this changed opinion. They moved on Albizu's army. In what became known as the "Ponce massacre"—Ponce is the island's second largest city—more than 30 persons were killed.

Albizu was captured, tried for sedition and sentenced to Atlanta for 10 years. He was released in 1943 and went to New York, where he stayed about three years. It is interesting to note that in his trials and appeals, he was constantly supported by Representative Vito Marcantonio of New York.

Albizu went back to Puerto Rico in late 1946 or early 1947.

Events since his return apparently have embittered him. First of all, his violent orations which in depression days had inflamed passions, attracted only the merest handful of followers. An effort was made in the name of his wife to recruit followers in several Central and South American countries. Letters were broadcast bearing her signature and charging that "United States imperialists" were getting ready to kill him.

MEANTIME, the man in Washington who was last Wednesday's target, told newsmen Thursday that he still believes what he said in 1948 when he visited Puerto Rico:

"I have said to the Congress several times and I repeat it here, that the people of Puerto Rico should have the right to determine themselves the Puerto Rican relationship to the continental United States."

The President pointed out that there are three alternatives open to the islanders: (1) To continue with the same government as at present; (2) statehood, except for representation in Congress, on which they will vote next June. The registration took place yesterday; (3) complete independence.

The economic situation is such that it is doubtful that Puerto Rico can afford either independence or statehood.

FIRST of all, the balance of trade is overwhelmingly unfavorable. In 1949, imports from the United States alone totaled 326 million dollars. Imports from other countries amounted to another 24 million. Against this, its exports totaled only about 204 million; 196 million to the United States and eight million to all others.

This leaves a gap of 146 million dollars. Last year the United States Government poured about that much in.

The biggest payments were from the Armed Services. All three are represented on the island, with huge Navy and the Air Force installations contributing mightily to the Puerto Rican economy. Puerto Rico is necessary to the defense of the United States.

Puerto Rico is exempt from the American income tax. Internal Revenue taxes collected from the liquor industry—rum is one of its largest exports—are turned back to the island government. It is the only American area so generously treated.

The new Social Security Act is in effect on the island. It will add huge sums to the Puerto Rican economy. The pending Aid to Education bill extends coverage to the island. House proposals to improve water transportation include Puerto Rico.

All this aid to Puerto Rico is blowing the Nationalists' appeal out of the water. Maybe that is what incensed them to terrorism.

Coed's No Glamor Girl to Kremlin

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Reporter

SOME of Russia's most important preachings have been scorched quite accidentally by a little essay on coeducation prophetically called, "A Burning Question."

The essay has brought much discomfort to the Kremlin—so much that a pall of pained silence still hangs over the place.

It all began somewhat obscurely in the April 8 edition of Literaturnaya Gazeta. Comrade V. Kolbanovsky, a professor of more learning than sense, asked forthrightly — Well, should we or shouldn't we have coeducation?

"It is strange and absolutely unpardonable," said he, "that the Academy of Pedagogical Sciences of the RSFSR and the Ministeries of Education of the union republics have so far ignored this question which is occupying teachers and parents, and are not examining how coeducational and separate schools do in fact compare."

WITH THIS seemingly simple academic assertion, Comrade Kolbanovsky fanned a smoldering issue which Soviet planners have kept fairly well in control since 1943, when coeducational schools were abolished in all cities of any size. At that time, the government justified its action by emphasizing the wartime need of combining school work with preconscription training for all boys.

The war, however, has long been over, the comrade professor reasoned, and peaceful aspirations have been proclaimed by Stalin far and wide. So the government must certainly be thinking of going back to education for education's sake.

While this was touch enough, the good professor's eagerness for an objective inquiry was further embarrassing in that education was another major field in which Russia's vaunted equality of sexes had slipped. Women, in short, were being trained to breed for a man-hungry nation.

In maintaining separate schools for boys and girls, the professor observed injudiciously, the government is in effect training these boys and girls for unjustified purposes and not for citizenship based on "mutual respect for human dignity."

"I have not minced matters in writing about these defects and difficulties," Comrade Kolbanovsky declared in conclusion, "because I consider it necessary to attract attention of the public to this burning question."

AND ATTRACT attention he did, while Soviet propagandists looked on helplessly—trapped by their own dictum that "self-criticism" is a laudable Bolshevik pursuit.

The Literaturnaya Gazeta itself printed a number of letters commenting on Professor Kolbanovsky's observations. Parents and teachers generally supported his stand for coeducational schools, while school officials had other views.

One headmaster, in his haste to uphold the government's position, let the cat out of the bag by stating:

"The upbringing and training of Soviet children in boys' schools should have definite, distinctive qualities. The young boy should be particularly smart, resourceful, hardy and well disciplined. He should be a good subordinate and an excellent leader."

As for the girls, the headmaster accused Kolbanovsky of ignoring "a question of immense importance—the question of happy Soviet motherhood."

A Leningrad mother, on the other hand, innocently exposed the artificiality of separate schools by pointing out, "In children's homes, boys and girls are brought up together, and in the Pioneer Camps they spend the summer together.

"An illogical situation arises. It is allegedly harmful if the few hours at school are spent together, but it is useful to live and spend holidays together . . ."

A summary by the Literaturnaya Gazeta showed that about 98 percent of those expressing themselves on the subject favored a return to coeducation, many doing so because they just could not understand the government's readiness to spend money for extra buildings required by a system of separate schools.

While no official comment from government authorities was noted, a hint of what officials were thinking was provided in an account of one teacher's efforts to obtain an authoritative statement on the government's stand.

"When I took it up at the City Education Department," recounted the teacher, "one of the comrades there replied: 'The business of the teachers is to thoroughly prepare the next lesson and see to discipline. As for which system of instruction is better—that is not for you to decide.' "

A Minsk schoolgirl studies the primary foreign language taught in Russia. Despite Professor Kolbanovsky, however, she'll have to learn it without any coaching from masculine schoolmates

Naval Museum Exhibition Here Reviews Marine Corps' 175-Year History

The United States Marine Corps will celebrate its 175th anniversary Friday in an aureole of victory reflected from far-off Korea. The corps made its first amphibious landing in March, 1776, at New Providence Island; its latest one smashed into Inchon, Korea, on September 15, 1950.

In honor of the corps on its anniversary, the Naval Historical Foundation is opening an exhibition, "United States Marines in Review, 1775-1950," at noon Friday at the Truxtun-Decatur Naval Museum, 1610 H st. nw. The material on exhibition covers all actions in which the Marines have participated, from the American Revolution to Korea.

The 100 items, arranged in chronological order, include documents, maps, paintings, lithographs and sketches, weapons ranging from the British "Brown Bess" to the modern rocket launcher, and a host of photographs. One of the photographs and two paintings are reproduced above.

The exhibition will be open from noon to 5:30 p. m. Tuesdays through Fridays; from 10:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. Saturdays; from 1:30 to 5:30 p. m. Sundays, and will be olosed Mondays. It will continue to February 4.

The show catalogue contains an essay on the history of the corps as well as a check-list with historical notes, and each purchaser of a catalogue will receive a free copy of the 136-page November issue of the Marine Corps Gazette, devoted entirely to the history of the corps.

Good Neighbor Policy Goes on the Shelf as U. S. Embraces the Whole Free World

By Benjamin Muse

Mr. Muse was counselor to the American delegation to the Seventh International Conference of American States

WHY IS the United States giving so little attention to Latin America? Mexican Gen. Alberto Salinas asked the question of State Department officials the other day in a friendly chat: "Is it because we haven't enough Communists down there?"

The United States drive for Latin American friendship, which rose to the pitch of a national obsession in the 1930s, has dropped into low gear.

President Franklin Roosevelt proclaimed a new era in Western Hemisphere relations and gave a name to a memorable policy when he said in his first inaugural address: " . . I would dedicate this Nation to the policy of the good neighbor."

The following December, Secretary of State Cordell Hull set the Good Neighbor Policy in motion—a little faster than Roosevelt had contemplated—at the Seventh International Conference of American States in Montevideo. Sumner Wells, later Undersecretary of State, became the technical expert and completed a famous trio, under whose leadership Government, press, schools and several billion dollars of public funds were mobilized for Pan American solidarity. The expression, "Good Neighbor," with reference to, the Latin American republics, became a part of the vernacular.

The drive continued until Wells, Hull and Roosevelt had passed from the diplomatic scene. Then it began to fade out.

STOPPING at Rio de Janeiro on his voyage to the Montevideo Conference, Secretary Hull said to the press:

"We must take stock of all the blessings in this favored part of the world—all our cultural, political, social and material assets—and bring them to bear, by united efforts, to help right a topsy-turvy civilization."

It was typical of the bold sweep of the early Good Neighbor Policy. Later in the decade, as civilization became more and more topsy-turvy, the Good Neighbor concept narrowed to a feeling that, perhaps, the Western Hemisphere would be civilization's last refuge. Europe and Asia were in flames. The United States dug in behind Iceland and Greenland and prepared to build a brave new world in North and South America.

When Roosevelt proposed Hull for the Nobel Peace Prize in 1939, he based his proposal on Hull's work in behalf of the Good Neighbor Policy. It was illustrative of the importance which both President and Secretary of State attached to the Pan American movement in that era.

Hull said of the Good Neighbor Policy in his memoirs: "It fully rewarded the many thousands of hours my associates and I, with the President's approval, had devoted to it in the course of 12 years."

SUBSEQUENT Secretaries and Undersecretaries of State all together have not devoted a thousand hours to the Good Neighbor Policy. It has not been a matter of major concern to any official above the rank of Assistant Secretary.

Incidentally, the State Department had one Assistant Secretary out of four specializing in Latin American affairs as early as 1927; the Latin American specialist is only one of eight Assistant Secretaries today.

Since the Good Neighbor era, Asia has acquired vast new importance and a cold war with Russia has made major diplomatic targets of all the countries on the fringe of the Iron Curtain. In the midst of all this, it might be submitted that a harassed Administration has little time to consider peaceful Latin America—little time to deal in a large way with problems like racial friction along the Mexican border, or to conceive bold and imaginative gestures of Western Hemisphere solidarity.

But obsession with great emergencies does not explain the phenomenon. The tensions which led to World War II had almost the opposite effect. As we moved from Munich to Poland to Pearl Harbor, the Good Neighbor drive was actually intensified. The Roosevelt-Hull-Wells team went on building up the Pan American system, and an additional able policy-making official, the late Laurence Duggan, gave full time to Latin American affairs.

Outside of State, Nelson Rockefeller, with sub-Cabinet rank and enormous public funds at his disposal, inaugurated in July, 1941, the stupendous Good Neighbor program of the Office of Inter-American Affairs. Whatever may be said of the hasty and far-flung largesse of that unprecedented agency, it was indicative of the emphasis placed upon hemisphere relations in that hectic period.

Public interest in Latin America also increased. A calculation made from the Readers' Guide to Current Literature shows the largest output of articles on Latin America after Hitler's invasion of Poland and before Pearl Harbor. The same indexes indicate that American periodicals are now giving only about one third as much attention to the once popular subject of the Good Neighbors.

A FAITHFUL corps of American officials at home and abroad is still doing a routine job of cultivating the friendship of Latin America. But the spark and the emphasis are gone. The national attitude has changed.

Yet many sources of inter-American friction remain to be ironed out. Latin-American distrust of the United States has been notably allayed, but it is far from being extinguished. Above all, the American public is still little acquainted with the Latin half of the hemisphere's inhabitants, with whom we are bound by common democratic ideas and heavy economic and cultural ties—as well as by the grim exigencies of long-term strategy. The Western Hemisphere, potential source of nearly all our essential raw materials, remains our ultimate strategic redoubt.

The true explanation for the waning emphasis upon Pan Americanism lies in the United Nations and the world responsibilities which the United States has now assumed. We have stretched the Monroe Doctrine around the planet and underwritten the security of all free peoples. There is no longer any thought of falling back upon the Western Hemisphere and letting the rest of the world go up in flames.

But there is danger now of losing our hemisphere-consciousness. The Good Neighbor Policy has still a long way to go.

'Screwiest' Result Since '34 Possible

On the other hand, most Republicans privately admit that last week's unsuccessful attempt on the President's life by Puerto Rican Nationalist fanatics probably "helped" the Democrats by stirring warm human sympathy for the President.

In appraising Tuesday's election, the fate of a few picked candidates could outweigh the effect of the total election results, unless they are sharply conclusive.

For example, the election or defeat of Senator Robert A. Taft in his Ohio battle for survival against labor-backed Joseph T. Ferguson could affect the face of the Republican Party for years to come, regardless of which party gains or loses seats in Congress.

Just as Vice President Barkley, not up for reelection, is "Old Mr. Democracy," Taft is the prototype "Mr. Republican."

Labor, too, has tremendous stakes in that lone contest. If its concentrated forces can't beat Taft, it may have more trouble than it wants in the Eighty-Second Congress, whichever party is controlling.

SIMILARLY, defeat of Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas in his Illinois race against former Representative Everett M. Dirksen would give Republicans a morale-lifter even if they fell short in their other Senate hopes.

The Republican Old Guard wouldn't derive nearly as much comfort from the single and more likely defeat of Senate Administration Whip Francis Myers in Pennsylvania. Chief beneficiary of a Myers defeat would be the Republican progressive element, looking for a possible 1952 rallying point in Myers' opponent, Gov. Jim Duff.

Progressive Democrats of the Americans for Democratic Action school also have a stake in this election quite apart from the country-wide returns.

If Gov. Chester A. Bowles, now an underdog in the betting, smashes the normal Republican off-year grip on Connecticut to defeat Representative John Lodge, you will be hearing more about Bowles around Republican convention time.

Personalities may transcend the general election results in at least two other major contests for Governor.

Whether or not he has taken himself out of future presidential running, Gov. Thomas A. Dewey, still titular leader of the Republican Party, is in a battle for more than the New York Governor's chair. Prestige lost by the "Hanley affair" and essential to any 1952 "kingmaking" role, may never be regained unless Dewey can lick Representative Walter A. Lynch. The New York Democratic mayoralty split, with likely heavy "bullet voting" for Independent Candidate Vincent Impelliteri, has helped Dewey's chances.

ACROSS the continent, the future of at least two potential presidential candidates is at stake in California's gubernatorial race. Odds-on favorite Gov. Earl Warren may not only nip in the bud the political hopes of James Roosevelt but project his own name for top billing in the 1952 Republican presidential sweepstakes.

Most disconcerting thought to Republicans about this election is the statistical fact that anything short of electing a Senate majority will probably black out GOP control of the Senate at least until 1954.

Only a handful of Senate Democrats outside the South will come up for reelection in 1952, and more vulnerable Republican seats than usual must go to the mat.

So for Republicans, it's a case of taking over control of the Senate this time, or a long, cold wait. If the usual portents prove reliable, they are going to have to wait.

But with doubts plaguing every other Senate race, literally anything could happen. Few flatly rule out the remote possibility that the Republicans could turn the trick. As for the Democrats, they manage an air of credibility when they say this COULD be another 1934. It COULD be the year Democrats finally smashed that old off-year election bogey by picking up seats in both Houses.

Take your choice, but don't wager good money either way.

OF THE 36 Senate seats at the mercy of the voters, only 16 are generally believed entirely "safe" for either party. Eleven of these are held by Democrats in Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, North Carolina (2), Rhode Island and South Carolina. Five are held by Republicans in Kansas, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota and Vermont.

In the remaining 20 more or less doubtful States, Republicans feel surest of picking up Senator Myers' Pennsylvania seat, Senator William Benton's Connecticut holding, Senator Sheridan Downey's old California seat from Democratic nominee Helen Gahagan Douglas and Senator Glen Taylor's old Idaho seat from Democratic nominee D. Worth Clark. This reporter wouldn't count any one of the four "in the bag."

Democrats rate Senator Forrest C. Donnell's Republican Missouri seat as "sure" for Democratic nominee Thomas C. Hennings, jr. They say their other best bets of a pickup are Claude J. Burtenshaw over Senator Henry C. Dworshak in Idaho, and Representative John Carroll over Senator Eugene D. Millikin in Colorado. This reporter thinks the Idaho and Colorado seats still have to be won.

Among the too-close-for comfort Senate contests, the odds slightly favor Senator Taft over State Auditor Ferguson in the Republican headliner in Ohio.

The Democratic feature race between Senator Lucas and former Representative Dirksen appears just as close, with the odds fractionally favoring Lucas.

One Senate seat formerly considered "safe" by Republicans, Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper's Iowa chair, seems in last-minute serious trouble from Democratic Nominee Albert J. Loveland.

In Oklahoma's Western thriller between Representative A. S. (Mike) Monroney (D.), and a red-haired preacher, the Rev. William H. Alexander, Monroney is nosing ahead.

In Utah's mystic race between Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D.), and Wallace F. Bennett (R.), the soothsayers say Thomas, once believed beaten, has a fair chance to win.

HERE ARE the other more or less "doubtful" Senate contests:

Republican now, and still leaning Republican:

New Hampshire, Senator Charles W. Tobey (R.) vs. Emmet J. Kelley (D.).

Indiana, Senator Homer E. Capehart (R.) vs. Alex M. Campbell (D.).

Wisconsin, Senator Alexander Wiley (R.) vs. Thomas E. Fairchild (D.).

Democratic now, and still leaning Democratic:

Maryland, Senator Millard E. Tydings (D.) vs. John M. Butler (R.).

Connecticut, Senator Brien McMahon (D.) vs. Joseph E. Talbot (R.).

Washington, Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D). vs. Walter Williams (R.).

Nevada, Senator Pat McCarran (D.) vs. George E. Marshall (R.).

Israel Seeks to End Child Marriage Evil

JERUSALEM (AP).—Israel's parliament is determined to break up "the evils of child marriage." Immigrants, particularly from oriental countries, who like to marry their daughters off early—sometimes at 11 or 12 years of age—are in for a lot of trouble.

The Knesset (parliament) approved legislation providing a maximum penalty of two years imprisonment and a fine of $1680 for anyone permitting, or aiding the marriage of any girl under 17 years of age. Parents, guardians and rabbis all are included for punishment.

Moch Personifies France's Fears

ment to direct and control the continental European army.

Underlying these objections, demands and conditions is the deep-rooted French fear of their German neighbors, a fear that still obsesses some French politicians' minds almost as it did in the days of Clemenceau. The man who expresses and personifies these fears today is Jules Moch, the Minister of Defense, whose son was tortured to death by the Nazis.

WHEN MOCH said goodby to Defense Secretary Marshall at the end of a previous visit to Washington earlier in October, General Marshall looked at him compassionately and said, in effect: "I want you to understand that I understand your personal tragedy." The general had had his share of personal tragedy during the war, and he spoke from the heart.

Moch, deeply touched, thanked him, but said he never let personal bitterness influence him in doing what he thought best for his country and for peace. He meant it sincerely, but when the other Defense Ministers encountered him a fortnight later they found him like flint on the German issue. Moch was unyielding, not only for himself and his cabinet, but for the powerful Socialist Party, of which he is one of the most trusted and persuasive leaders. His thesis was something like this:

"Suppose we all rearm and create what Secretary Acheson has called 'situations of strength.' Suppose that after five years we have built up such strength that we can negotiate with the Russians and reach a tolerable understanding with them.

"What then? You Americans and you British will go home, and you will leave us in France, only 45 million of us, facing 70 million Germans again.

"Three times in the memory of men now living the Germans have invaded us and all but destroyed us. If we put them back into uniforms, and form German divisions in a western army, what would prevent these divisions from turning on us a fourth time?

"Surely you must understand that if German troops are used, it will have to be in such small units and under such non-German control that they can never hurt us again."

THE AMERICAN case is that the immediate danger is the Soviet danger. To cope with it and contain it, the Western World must hurry to form a defense line as far east as the Elbe; and this will require a minimum of 50 divisions by 1953.

According to the Americans, backed by most of their allies, the North Atlantic countries simply cannot raise and maintain this strength without using German manpower for a portion of it. Surely, the Americans argue, there will be no danger in organizing German divisions so long as they are under international command, and so long as there is no German national army, general staff or war industry.

Secretaries Acheson and Marshall assured the American press last week that this disagreement could be settled, for the simple reason that it had to be settled. High military officers of the 12 countries, plus the, tired hacks who are on the 12-nation Council of Deputies, will try to settle it at joint meetings starting this week, probably in London.

But it stands to reason that military men and subordinate officials cannot settle it by themselves. The chasm between the French and American viewpoints is as wide and as deep as the Atlantic itself. The problem is one of high politics and political psychology, and its solution will require a determined effort at the highest level in the respective governments.

POSSIBLY there can be a compromise on the size and type of the units into which German troops can be organized. Perhaps, if Western Germany agrees to the Schuman coal-steel plan, the French cabinet will abandon or defer its demand for a European defense minister and a European parliament, which the French themselves know are unattainable now.

Perhaps, too, if there is no agreement in a month or so, the Americans will be willing, after all, to go ahead with the appointment of a supreme commander and the stationing of additional American troops in Europe. For all its risks, such a course would at least make the concept of combined defense come alive in the public mind.

But all these possibilities are what President Roosevelt would have called "very iffy." They imply a give-and-take greater than the French or the Americans have shown since this controversy over German troops began. If there were plenty of time for leisurely negotiation and compromise, one could look forward to an eventual agreement that would make the dream of combined defense come true.

THE STARK FACTS of Soviet strength and Western weakness leave no time for the usual slow minuet of diplomacy. Public confidence is a capricious thing, and the American public, in particular, may grow weary of unending meetings of North Atlantic committees and subcommittees that produce so little action.

It might help if the French and American ministers remembered a bit of advice that is 350 years old:

"There is a tide in the affairs of men
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries."

Cuba Out Of Order

How the President of Cuba and the Cuban House of Representatives could stray so far from the bounds of propriety as to ask Governor Munoz to "guarantee the lives" of the Puerto Rican plotters is almost inconceivable. In the first place, Puerto Rico is an integral part of the United States and any note concerning activities there should have come to the State Department. Secondly, the arrest of Pedro Albizu Campos and his followers cannot possibly be regarded as an act of political suppression or as having any connection with the legitimate independence movement in Puerto Rico. What has occurred is the putting down of armed insurrection and a dastardly plot on the President. Albizu and his associates are entitled to the protection of the law and a fair trial—but they would have these anyhow, irrespective of Cuba's ill-timed and irresponsible intercession.

Battle Of Fairfax

Amid the exchange of verbal blows over the county-executive versus the county-manager system for Fairfax County, only the proponents of no change at all stand to gain. It is significant that the Virginia Democratic machine reportedly is instructing its adherents to vote "no" on the first question at the November 7 referendum—whether there shall be a change in the county government—and then to plump for the county-executive plan on the second question concerning the form to be selected if there should be a change. At the same time, a number of the members of the study commission which recommended a change to the county-executive form have repudiated this stand in favor of continuance of the status quo. These facts do not necessarily discredit the county-executive plan, but they certainly are a warning to Fairfax citizens interested in modernizing their antiquated government to look sharply at the propositions before them.

Neither change, of course, would eliminate all possibility of machine control. This newspaper's preference for the county-manager plan stems from two factors. First, it would give the manager authority commensurate with responsibility. No administrator worth his salt would stand for supervisors peering over his shoulder in the hiring and firing of department heads and other routine matters of county management. Former City Manager Braden of Falls Church views the proposed county executive as a mere "errand boy" for the county supervisors.

Second and more important, the county-manager plan would give all the residents of Fairfax County a chance to vote for all their supervisors. As it is now, 17 percent of the population has the exclusive right to vote for three supervisors who wield equal power with the other three representing 83 percent of the people; that disparity would be continued under the county-executive plan. Under the county-manager plan, supervisors still would be chosen from each of the six magisterial districts, but would be elected by county-wide vote. The argument that this system would discourage personal acquaintance with the capabilities of candidates seems to us specious in light of the ease with which county-wide meetings can be held. Small cliques are now able to dominate each magisterial district. The best way to bring better and more responsible government to Fairfax County is to make each vote count equally.

Relations With Spain

The President's statement that it would be a "long, long time" before this country sends an Ambassador to Spain came on the very heels of the recommended rescision of the 1946 U. N. Assembly resolution banning ambassadorial relations with Spain. The recommendation was the work of the special political committee of the General Assembly, and the Assembly yesterday accepted it. What, then, did the President mean? It may be that the President is still put out by the assiduity of the Spain lobby in its attentions to Congress—an assiduity that was rewarded a few months ago by a vote in favor of a loan to Franco. This was a remarkably inept piece of business which at the time seemed as if it would put back the clock in the restoration of relations.

However, the President may have been merely putting the newsmen on notice that he intended to take his time in finding the right man for the Madrid post. If this is the interpretation, we are glad of it, because the post is a delicate one, and requires a man with a peculiar combination of talents, one of which is to be first, last and all the time American. The step ought not to be long avoided, for the gap requires to be filled, and the Assembly has already acted. Incidentally, this did not automatically open the doors of the United Nations to Spain, as was left to be understood from our comment on Friday. Entry has been afforded only to the U. N.'s specialized agencies, the words in italics having been left out of the editorial.

Juvenile Court Survey

Judge Cockrill has placed a heavy responsibility on the four citizens chosen to survey the policies and administration of the Juvenile Court. Their task will be to determine and report whether the court is effectively serving the community, and, if not, to recommend changes in procedure or policy. They must necessarily concern themselves with the basic function that the court performs—that of turning wayward youngsters from delinquency to good citizenship. The question is how well the court is performing this function. Is it faithfully carrying out the policy laid down in the Juvenile Court Act? Does the law itself need changing? Is the court handicapped by lack of funds? Is the court properly organized and is it efficiently managed in the public interest?

One problem that demands special attention is the relation of the court to the community. The Juvenile Court operates behind closed doors for the sake of protecting the children who come before it from publicity that might interfere with their rehabilitation. But this secrecy creates another series of problems. In shielding the child from publicity the court is denied a healthy routine play of public opinion upon its work. In these circumstances, what is to prevent a judge from acting arbitrarily? Or how is the public to know when the court is failing in its duty? In recent years the Juvenile Court Advisory Committee has undertaken to interpret the community to the court and the court to the community. At present, however, the relations between Judge Cockrill and the committee appear to be strained. The committee is no longer close to the operations of the court. At no time, moreover, has it succeeded in keeping the community aware of what the court is doing. If this unofficial committee resigns or is abolished, however, certainly some other means of keeping a check upon this vital institution will have to be established. One important step toward this end would be to provide some system through which the public could obtain full information about the work of the court—short of publicizing the names or otherwise identifying the children who come before it. Judge Cockrill has taken one step in that direction by ordering the release of monthly statistics on the prevalence of juvenile delinquency.

We assume that the survey committee will probe deeply into this problem. Fortunately, it has an expert on juvenile delinquency from the Children's Bureau, William H. Sheridan; a representative of the Department of Justice, Col. W. W. Naramore, and two able local citizens, Charles C. Glover 3d and Mrs. Robert E. Freer. It must be taken for granted that the committee will be given free access to the court's proceedings as well as to its records and that its report will be made public. Judge Cockrill is to be congratulated on requesting a thorough survey of the court by an independent group, but this step is likely to be meaningful only if it is followed by full cooperation with the committee and by wholehearted efforts to correct whatever weaknesses may be exposed.

Half-Light On Lobbying

A blast from the minority members of the House Lobby Investigating Committee points up some rather shabby aspects of the report recently put out by the majority members of that group. In a previous editorial we supported the general thesis of the report—that the public is entitled to know the source of funds used to influence public opinion so far as it is feasible to get these facts on record. However, the report is seriously deficient in dealing with other aspects of the lobbying problem. The minority complains, moreover, that the report was released without having been submitted to the full committee for review or discussion. That is an atrocious practice which will inevitably undermine the influence the committee might otherwise have had in guiding legislation in this important sphere.

No doubt it would have been difficult to have obtained committee review of the report at this time when Congressmen are busy campaigning. But why was it necessary to issue the report just before the election? We confess that we can see no reason other than politics. And, of course, that is an unsound reason for issuing a report which is supposed to deal with a legislative problem transcending partisan considerations. While the report deals realistically with lobbying by corporations and various associations, it is also deficient in that it ignores lobbying by labor organizations and whitewashes lobbying by governmental agencies. The release of another lengthy report on Friday on the United Savings and Loan League appears also to have been politically motivated.

The committee draws a valid distinction between private spending to influence legislation and governmental activity for the same purpose. Our system of government clearly contemplates that the President and his official family shall advise Congress, and many laws require executive agencies to carry on public educational activities. Only fanatics challenge this exercise of executive influence upon the legislature. But there is a type of executive lobbying that goes beyond the pale and that is the use of public funds to bring pressure to bear upon Congress by circuitous or underhanded means.

The law prohibits the use of appropriated funds to pay for personal services or communications intended to influence a member of Congress. But it is widely reported that organizations drawing benefits from the Government are activated by Federal officials to bring pressure on Congress. Has the committee really probed into this abuse of power? Its whitewash of Secretary Brannan for plugging his farm subsidy plan at the St. Paul meeting of the Production and Marketing Administration committeemen (whose expenses were paid by the Government) suggests an unwillingness to face the problem of an administration entrenching itself and bringing about acceptance of its programs through use of its superior channels of information and influence. We have supported the committee in its proposals to turn the light on lobbying and the shaping of public opinion, but certainly the light ought to be turned on impartially.

ECA And Britain

The marked improvement in Britain's economic position, the rapid rise in the sterling area's gold and dollar reserves, and the fact that dollars are being advanced to help finance Britain's rearmament program—these factors appear to justify a reduction in ECA aid and possible suspension of all ECA payments. Administrator Foster's announcement does not, however, go so far as that. He simply makes it plain that any future grants will be used primarily to relieve the strain on Britain of the rearmament program. There is no intention of abruptly terminating dollar aid at this time in view of the uncertain outlook.

This is as it should be. Since the burden of rearming falls chiefly on the heavy industries, on which Britain relies principally for production of export goods, rearmament will cut down exports. At the same time more dollars will be needed to finance imports of strategic materials for defense purposes. To curb price increases which would further reduce exports the British government will be compelled to retain some controls that it had hoped to abandon and may have to reimpose others. If, for any reason, it fails to prevent a rise in living costs and wages, the trade balance will be adversely affected. The current high prices of various essential foods also adds to the drain on dollar reserves.

It has to be kept in mind, too, that post-Korean increases in Britain's gold and dollar reserves are due in part to an influx of dollars into the London market in search of speculative profits. Moreover, a large part of the gold and dollar reserves acquired during the past year are surpluses earned by sterling area countries other than Great Britain. Although United States purchases of strategic materials will, no doubt, continue at high levels for the indefinite future, it is by no means certain, as Mr. Foster warns, that the dollar reserves hereafter acquired by supplying countries will move easily to Britain and western European countries, since rearmament will probably "preclude shipment of manufactured goods which normally pay for raw materials purchased from less developed areas."

For the reasons given, there is thus no assurance that the British will not again encounter economic and exchange difficulties that may force them to turn to the ECA for help. That is why ECA officials for good cause want to keep the British recovery program on a standby basis—so as to be ready to render timely assistance, if or when a new emergency arises.

Home To Roost

In the course of a hearing held by Judge Sylvester Ryan prior to the second trial of Judith Coplon in New York, it was developed that the FBI had extensively tapped the telephones in her apartment and in the home of her mother. It had even monitored conversations between her and her attorney. Worse still was the fact that the attorneys for the Department of Justice had attempted to conceal from the court that the FBI had resorted to wire-tapping. This deception had succeeded in Miss Coplon's first trial in District Court here. But Judge Ryan ordered the FBI to bring into his court records of all its wire-taps in the case—only to discover that a large portion of those records had been systematically and deliberately destroyed.

Miss Coplon's lawyers contend that the Government's case against her was based on information secured through illegal wire-tapping and therefore inadmissible in a Federal court. The Department of Justice argues that the evidence was obtained from sources independent of the wire-taps. The appellant makes the additional contention that the FBI should have and could have obtained a warrant for her arrest before arresting her. The Department of Justice claims that the documents found on her person justified arrest without a warrant. Some extremely searching and caustic questions were asked on Friday on these two points by Chief Judge Learned Hand and his associates on the Court of Appeals.

While it is desirable that Miss Coplon be punished for the crime of which she was convicted, it is equally desirable that the Federal police be required to keep within the laws which it is their business to enforce. It is well that the FBI's conduct in this case is now being subjected to careful judicial scrutiny.

Montgomery Taxes

My attention has been invited to the mischievous and false statements put out by the Montgomery County "Victory Committee" in regard to taxes and assessments. The flat statement is made that: "During the two years of the present County Council's administration, the county's tax has been increased by more than $100 million."

This statement, which is not more than $97 million in error, is on a par with the explanation of assessments, beginning with the statement that: "Assessments are controlled by the county assessors and the County Tax Appeal Court. Don't ever let anyone kid you into believing that assessments are controlled by anyone other than these local authorities."

The facts are:

(1) All assessment procedures and methods in the State of Maryland are completely determined by State law and the State Tax Commission.

(2) The chief assessor of the county is appointed by, is accountable to, and can be removed by the State Tax Commission only. The County Council has absolutely no authority over him, or his subordinates.

(3) The only function the County Council has in regard to assessments is the power to turn over to a duly constituted Tax Court, appeals from the actions of the assessors, which it has done.

(4) The Tax Court hangs suspended in the thin air between the State Tax Commission and its local agent, the chief assessor, for the county. Its decisions can be, and are reviewed by the Tax Commission whenever the local assessor is not in agreement with them, so that the final answer is always with the Tax Commission.

Autocratic Religion

In his address at the opening rally of the Protestant Festival of Faith, the Rev. Robert J. McCracken of the Riverside Church in New York is quoted in your issue of October 30 as follows: "We shall have to protest against the corruption of the Gospel which is inevitable with an autocratic institution greedy for power and self."

The speaker does not clearly identify the monstrous institution but from the context and the occasion of its utterance it may be fairly surmised as to the institution he has in mind. The charge is as untrue as it is dishonest in its manner of expression, without even a pretense of offering evidence.

If the speaker would have the blessing of Christ upon what he considers to be a great undertaking in behalf of Christ's cause he might next undertake an apology for his uncharitable and false insinuation. If he does not perhaps he might look into the state of his own soul to find a very important reason why as he says later of his followers that they "do not care, or do not care enough, or do not let others know that they care."

Anything undertaken in the name of Christ should certainly have both the spirit of truth and the spirit of charity: "Now there remaineth faith, hope and charity, these three, but the greatest of these is charity." I Corinthians 13-13.

Parking Dilemma

The following steps, I suggest, could do much to ease the parking situation in Washington which is a quite unnecessary misery to visitors and residents alike.

Immediate changes which are needed include: (1) parking on both sides of all one-way streets; (2) many more one-way streets; (3) parking on both sides of all the broad streets except on the busy side of the street in rush hours; (4) parking to within 30 feet of the intersection; (5) a campaign to urge motorists to edge their cars up to within 3 feet of the car ahead and so make the best use of the space available on the streets; (6) through alleyways made one-way and parking allowed on one side; (7) parking on one side of many small streets; (8) parking at right angles to the sidewalk allowed in many broad streets (New York and 15th, for instance).

Long term plans should call for the erection of multi-floor structures on all parking lots and construction should be authorized for a series of under-road parking lots in a number of selected downtown locations.

The main thing, however, is that the police should lead a progressive attempt to improve the nightmare of parking which quite destroys any pleasure in motoring in Washington. Any easing of the situation would of course release many thousands of cars at present left outside the city which is why the long term plans are as important as the immediate steps.

R. G. WORCESTER.

Brute Force

It is a coldly cynical proposal made by the representative of one of the U. N. great powers that any regime which has secured control of a member country and can force the majority of its people into obedience should be seated as the legal representative of that country in the United Nations, regardless of any other considerations. That surely is the glorification of brute force.

Fortunately there are still ideals and principles that influence mankind. Significantly it was a representative of one of the small states that voiced the plea for international morality. His suggestion that the criteria for recognition should include "ability and willingness to achieve the purposes of the Charter, to observe its principles and to fulfill the international obligations of the state" was like a breath of pure air in a poison-laden atmosphere.

It was gratifying also that the United States representative challenged the "brute force" proposition.

During World War II the country whose representative now stands as the exponent of the amoral plan for U. N. membership served as haven for many governments whose countries had been overrun by ruthless aggressors, who through concentration camps and other means forced obedience from the luckless populations. There was no thought then in that country of recognizing the brute force of aggression as the legal representative of the countries it terrorized. But that country, in its finest hour, had a different government from today. And a great statesman was its leader.

ETHEL M. JOHNSON.

Rearming Germany

You report that the North Atlantic Treaty Defense Ministers have postponed the formation of a unified armed force until France can be persuaded to drop her objections to certain features of the plan. The very real threat of Communist aggression has apparently convinced our defense planners that German soldiers, organized in divisions and led by German generals, must be retrained and rearmed to become part of our defense. Under the plan, "adequate safeguards" are to be provided "against German militarism getting out of hand." Two questions arise: How good a defense will the Western world have with German divisions in its columns? Will the Germans cooperate on our terms?

What assurance do we have that German divisions will fire eastwards, not westwards? Would Germans gladly fight on our side because they hate communism as we do? The German military mind found it attractive only a few years ago to team up with, not against, Communist military power.

Could we rely on German divisions, individual soldiers and German generals, placed throughout our forces, when survival of all may depend on them? Are we to share with them our battle plans? How many divisions will we have to hold ready to watch the German contingents? Can we assign them to crucial positions?

Hearing us proclaim the indispensability of German manpower to our defense, Germany's political leaders and retired generals impatient to resume their profession know this: If they docilely sell us German "cannon folder" on our terms, meaning for just as much or as little military and political equality and independence as our planners are willing to concede, and with as many restrictions—"safeguards"—as our planners feel are needed to "keep German militarism from getting out of hand," they will be considered traitors to the German cause. But if they make the most of the trump card which we tell them they hold, they will be Germany's new heroes.

A large German element today is understandingly tired of fighting and does not want to go back into uniform even against communism. This element will have to be wooed to march again; yet how will German leaders, persuaded by us that without German manpower the democracies may be lost, succeed in wooing the German people back to arms if not by obtaining for them far greater rights and powers far sooner, with far fewer restrictions and safeguards, than we so one-sidedly propose today to reassure our friends and our own good sense?

How much more realistic is the French proposal to build a civilian organization before rearming Germany, while we seem to insist on putting the cart before the horse in the gradual process of restoring Germany to world citizenship. If, however, the emergency is so acute that there is no time to try to make the German a citizen before making him once again a soldier, can we expect Stalin to wait until we train and arm German divisions, anyway?

K. N.

W. are expected to provide more billions, sacrifices and lives by assuming the largest share of the burden of protecting Europe, because France and Britain are afraid of having Germany rearmed. They should know that a mere knowledge of arms handling would never be sufficient equipment to wage modern warfare.

In my travels in Europe last summer, Germany impressed me as being the Nation most deserving of help, and that it would give us the best return for our investment. The people are the most industrious and self-reliant and treated us with the most kindness, consideration, gratitude and downright honesty!

In Paris, on the contrary, we were told that it is unsafe for a man in a United States Army officer's uniform to go into some sections as it might be torn off his back! In Rome some men-in-the-street had never heard of the ECA, others only vaguely.

Deadlock Over West Defense

By Andre Visson

A Bad Week

TO QUOTE a high Washington official, "the only good news we had this week was that President Truman escaped the senseless attempt on his life by the Puerto Rican terrorists." This indeed appears to be the only good news, just as the terroristic act itself appears to be reminiscent of the political climate of the nineteenth century. Communists may have had a hand in instigating the Puerto Rican nationalists. But Communists themselves rather shun individual acts of terror involving too great personal risks. They prefer mass terror and mass assassination under the protection of their political police and their Red armies.

Even when it comes to open aggression, the Moscow Politburo prefers to use foreign Communists. The Korean Communists failed to achieve the objectives assigned to them by Moscow. So they are now getting reinforcements from the Chinese Communists. These reinforcements appear to be substantial enough to make the task of the United Nations forces in northern Korea much harder. But it does not look—for the time being at least—as if the Chinese Communist intervention in Korea is going to develop into an all-out war with Red China in the near future.

This is the present estimate of the situation by both military and diplomatic observers. They hope their estimate is correct, but they do not conceal the fact that they are following the Chinese intervention in Korea with considerable concern. At best, it means protracted and costly guerilla warfare.

DIPLOMATIC observers—especially non-Americans — believe that the best way to prevent the spreading of hostilities in Korea would be for the Western powers to approach the Chinese Communist regime in Peiping—directly or indirectly. Western European diplomats still feel that there is a possibility of driving a wedge between the Chinese Communists and Moscow. They feel that while the Chinese Communists are really anxious to get into the United Nations, Moscow's game is to render this impossible. Moscow's objective, western European diplomats argue, is to reduce to a minimum all contact between Red China and the Western World. Isolated from the West, Red China would have to depend entirely on Moscow.

This may be the case. But it may also be argued that Moscow may have deliberately set out to create such an impression in order to induce the Western powers to make overtures to Red China. And should such overtures result in a betterment of economic conditions in China, Moscow may find it much easier to exert political control over the Mao Tze-tung regime.

On the other hand, the best diplomatic contact with Red China up to now was established by India. And this contact did not prevent the Chinese Communists from invading Tibet. Communist aggression in Tibet may bring Nehru closer to present-day realities. He may realize that to practice idealistic, nineteenth century Tolstoyan nonresistance to evil in the twentieth century, which communism is trying to transform into a new dark age, is an anachronism.

AS MUCH as the free nations all over the world love peace, they have been brought to realize that the only way to preserve peace is to resist the Communist evil. But the trouble with the Communist evil is that it is a two-faced Janus. There is a Communist evil and a Soviet evil, and it is not easy to draw a line between the two. It is hard to determine which of the two evils is the greater. It appears, however, that the evil forces of the Soviet Union are dominant over the evil forces of communism, and are using the latter for Soviet objectives.

Western Europeans are convinced that they can cope with the Communist danger, but admit their obvious weakness in the face of the Soviet danger. Despite this admission, however, the French have blocked the indispensable organization of the North Atlantic defense under a supreme American commander. This was done because a considerable number of Frenchmen believe that the Soviet danger should not be eliminated at the risk of reestablishing the old German danger.

Jules Moch, the French Minister of Defense, was the spokesman for this theory. Few Frenchmen did more than Moch to curb the Communist forces in France. But in discussing with the 11 ministers of the North Atlantic Pact the harassing problem of using German manpower in the common defense against the Soviet danger, he displayed the same intransigence with which he fought the Communists in France.

Despite the fact that all responsible men in Washington and in Europe feel that some compromise will be worked out—it being a question of life and death—the present deadlock is causing very great concern.

George Bernard Shaw

Now that George Bernard Shaw is dead the question of the publication of his famous love letters to Mrs. Patrick Campbell will naturally arise. As is well known, Mrs. Campbell recognized the great literary value of these compositions and after the lovers had drifted apart she requested Shaw's permission to publish them in the interest of students of fine English as well as the public generally.

However Shaw refused permission to have them published in his lifetime, and his caustic reply to Mrs. Campbell's request is a classic. "I refuse to play the horse to your Lady Godiva," he told her.

Issues Clear Cut in Colorado Race

By Drew Pearson

IN A LOT of State elections the issues are extremely confused, some of them purposely. But out in Colorado, the issue in the Senate race is clear cut and the outcome will be a barometer as to whether the Nation is going conservative or liberal.

In Colorado, two men, both extremely able, both honest, both sincere, but both believing in diametrically opposed political philosophies, are battling it out for the Senate.

One is Senator Eugene Millikin, Republican millionaire, personally one of the most delightful members of the Senate. The other, Congressman John Carroll, Democrat, is a liberal, and one of the most capable and respected members of the House.

The basic issue between them came out during their own debates on the tax bill at the last session of Congress. Both happen to be members of the taxwriting committees of Congress—Millikin of the Senate Finance Committee, Carroll of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Millikin vigorously opposed an excess profits tax on Korean war profits, also opposed closing tax loopholes against the insurance companies; and in contrast opposed lifting the excise tax on baby oil and baby powder.

Thanks in part to Millikin's powerful arguments inside the Senate Finance Committee, the Senate passed a tax bill strongly favoring big business, while thanks in part to Carroll's strong stand in the Ways and Means Committee, the House passed a bill favoring the little taxpayer. When the two conflicting bills got to conference committee, Millikin was genial, efficient but absolutely adamant against any important compromise.

At one point in the debate over the tax on baby oil, Congressman John Dingell of Michigan half-jokingly remarked:

"Gene, if you don't support us on this, woe to you when you go back to Colorado to campaign this year."

Millikin chuckled but said nothing. In the end, the tax bill passed largely as the Senate wanted it, and now he is back in Colorado facing the predicted showdown.

Toward the end of Congress, Millikin voted almost as if he didn't care whether he were reelected. He even cast his vote with isolationist, rabble-rousing Senator Jenner against Gen. George Marshall as Secretary of Defense.

Now, however, Millikin is campaigning for all he is worth, and heavy campaign contributions—part of them from Eastern interests—are flooding Colorado to help him. Politicians all over the country will be watching the race.

WHEREAS LABOR has piled money into Ohio to defeat Senator Taft, coauthor of the Taft-Hartley Act, it hasn't done much for Senator Elbert Thomas of Utah, author of the bill to defeat the Taft-Hartley Act.

Smear tactics against California's Congressman Clyde Doyle have been so unfair that one third of the Long Beach lawyers, both Democrats and Republicans, have rallied to his defense. The opposition has put out literature with the hammer and sickle after Doyle's name, despite his record against communism.

RED BAITING has got so fashionable that even Senator Joe McCarthy, the No. 1 red-baiter, is complaining about it. In fact, he even went to bat for the Farmers Union recently when it was unjustly smeared by another Republican Senator.

Ironically, that Senator was his friend, Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, who tried to stamp the Communist label on the Farmers Union. "The leadership of the Farmers Union has attempted to turn that organization into a Communist front," Bridges had charged.

This was going too far even for McCarthy, who dictated the following letter to Bridges, mailing a copy to the Wisconsin Farmers Union:

"I understand that on the Senate floor you discussed at some length the alleged Communist infiltration of the Farmers Union," wrote McCarthy. "While I have never had extremely close contact with the Farmers Union in Wisconsin, I do know the president, Kenneth W. Hones, very well by reputation. He has the reputation of being militantly and intelligently anti-Communist. I felt in fairness to Mr. Hones this should be made clear.

"I am not well acquainted with many of the officers of the Wisconsin Farmers Union," McCarthy continued, cautiously. "However, I have no information to indicate that any of them are communistically inclined nor do any of them, to my knowledge, have such a reputation."

SECOND TO TAFT'S, the most interesting race in Ohio is in the jumbled suburbs around Cleveland, hitherto a silk-stocking district which has sent wealthy, capable Mrs. Frances Bolton, Republican, to Congress. But now, city dwellers, including labor, have moved to the suburbs, and the question is, will the silk-stocking district remain silk-stocking.

Mrs. Bolton is opposed to dynamic, live-wire war veteran Chat Patterson, whose cohorts have made a house-to-house canvass, registering voters, some of whom remember Mrs. Bolton's key vote against curbing commodity speculation in the last Congress.

The Federal Reserve Board had asked for commodity controls to stop inflation and protect the housewife's dollar. But Mrs. Bolton, after first voting to curb inflation, switched her vote. The House, which had previously defeated the bill and voted to curb speculation, then reversed itself and voted against commodity curbs—thanks to Mrs. Bolton's flip-flop.

JUDGING FROM the reaction received in congressional offices, the McCarran antisubversive law will be amended substantially this winter. The plight of hundreds of deserving visitors to America held up at Ellis Island while the Russians roar with delight is having its effect.

Three significant statements showing the trend are:

Senator John Stennis of Mississippi, a sober, conservative former judge, told associates, "I feel the law is unworkable and must be changed. I will vote to amend it."

Senator Joe O'Mahoney, a member of the high and mighty Democratic Policy Committee which failed to uphold the President's veto, is now saying, "This experience proves the law must be amended."

The Rev. Charles Keenan, managing editor of America, a national Catholic weekly published by a group of Jesuit fathers, wrote: "It took a great deal of political courage for President Truman to veto the bill . . . The President was stressing a firm confidence in our free institutions . . . if free men cannot win the war and remain free, then freedom is already in danger."

Our Political Economy

Top Income Class Loses Ground

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

OUR UPPER income group is getting a smaller and smaller share of American income. This is the conclusion of Simon Kuznets in an important new study for the National Bureau of Economic Research.

In 1929, the top 5 percent of income groups received 26 percent of countrywide income. By 1945, the last year for which Kuznets has figures, they received less than 18 percent.

This still reflects great differences in incomes, though inequalities are less than appear at first glance. For one thing, Kuznets found that families move into and out of the top 5 percent from one year to the next. When he checked up on only those who stayed in the upper group for four consecutive years, the total share of the top 5 percent in country-wide income shrank by one seventh.

Progressive income taxes take their toll, too. The upper group's share shrinks further when you figure their tax bill.

WHO ARE the top 5 percent, and how do they differ from the rest of the population?

They are not as rich as you might suppose. In 1945 the bottom income layer in this group had a per capita income of only $1719 (for a family of two, $3438; for a family of four, $6876).

More than half are in business or the professions. They are older than the average income earner by quite a few years, and they are well-educated. Nearly half of them have been to college, compared to 15 percent for the population as a whole.

Kuznets believes that considering the maturity, education and working experience of the top 5 percent, income inequalities are less striking than they appear to be. Before a man reaches this income level he has invested many years and perhaps considerable deferred income in education and apprenticeship.

Kuznets also believes that the top 5 percent do somewhat better as income recipients than they do as consumers. This is because of where they live and how small their family units are.

A larger than average proportion are big city dwellers. This means that you have to balance higher incomes against higher costs for rent, food and transportation.

Another factor making for higher living costs is that two-thirds of the group are either single persons or members of two-person families. Overhead is very high for single persons, as it is even for couples.

THE MOST intriguing question raised by Kuznets' study is why the upper income groups are getting a smaller share of American income. Between 1929 and 1945, their share declined a third.

The answer is probably to be found in their sources of income. As a group, the top 5 percent have received the lion's share of interest, dividends and returns from property. All three of these have suffered a sharp relative decline since 1929.

Between 1929 and 1949, the share of personal incomes going to dividends dropped from 6.8 percent to 3.8 percent; the share going to interest dropped from 8.8 percent to 4.5 percent. But the share going to wages and salaries rose from 59 percent to 64 percent of the total. In short, the upper income groups are no longer getting the investment income they once did. At the same time, wage and salary earners are doing better. We are seeing a compression of incomes from the bottom and top of the scale into the middle-income brackets.

KUZNETS draws no conclusions from the trend. But there is probably a good reason for what is happening, and it is to be found in the development of the American economy.

Investment capital was once very scarce in this country. When the United States was young and growing, it desperately needed money for highways, railroads, factories and machines. Because capital was scarce, the rewards to capital were very high. People with money could count on big dividends and high rates of interest.

But today capital is more plentiful, and it is labor which is growing relatively scarce. The result, as you would expect, is a lower share of income to capital and a higher share to labor.

The trend is reinforced by strong labor unions, which can induce artificial labor scarcities. Furthermore, as menial tasks have been taken over by machines, manpower has been released for skilled and better paying jobs.

We may see another effect from present trends. Since it grows less profitable to save and invest, the future may see more of American incomes spent on consumption, and less on plant and equipment. This could lead to a slowdown in our growing productivity. With our defense needs as high as they are, it might also lead to years of creeping inflation.

The Magazine Rack

By Orval Hopkins

"ONE FOOT in the White House" is the explosive title somebody on Flair has thought up for William Lowe's study of Averell Harriman. Old Washington correspondents, Lowe finds, consider Harriman essentially a lightweight. "But these statesmen-journalists don't know Harriman," he scolds. "They haven't done their legwork."

No one in American public life today, Lowe says, "has held as many offices of great responsibility over as long and continuous a period of time as has this tall, stooped, lonely, often inarticulate and deadly serious man."

As to that title: Professional politicians, Lowe reports, "answer any suggestion that Harriman has never held an elective office and that he will be 60 years old in 1952 with the reminder that Mr. Truman may need a running mate in two years and the Democratic Party a candidate in four."

Also in Flair is "An Appreciation of Louis Armstrong" by Tallulah Bankhead. It appreciates Tallu about as much as it does Satchmo, which, of course, won't surprise anybody.

LAURITZ MELCHIOR (with Joe Alvin) says in Parents Magazine that if you think your child can sing, the first thing you should do with his voice is leave it alone. "The proper time to begin the training of the voice is 16 to 17 years of age for the girls and 17 to 18 for the boys," the great tenor counsels.

J. George Frederick, also in Parents, advises fathers to take the kiddies to the office once in a while so the children won't be forever going around saying, "What does Daddy do?"

A SORT of "rules of the road" for divorcees is set forth in Cosmopolitan by Allen R. Simpson. Among the tenets are, "If you have children, be extremely careful to speak well of their father, the bum, and spare them from prying and tactless relatives," and, "Don't be so eager to rebuild your life that you rush into the arms of the first man you meet. Don't pass up more than two, however—the shortage of this vital commodity being what it is."

Richard Crowe tells, also in Cosmopolitan, how he was trying to maintain a mansion, two cars, a boat and a country club membership on $6000 a year. He got a little behind, so he stole nearly a million dollars from the bank he worked in.

They nailed him in Daytona Beach, Fla., where a cellmate told him he was lucky to have been caught. "The minute that story came out in the newspapers," the thug told him, "every big gunman in the country headed for Florida, looking for you."

HAROLD L. ICKES pens a eulogy to Henry L. Stimson in the New Republic. "No one can insist," writes the Old Curmudgeon, "that there would have been no Second World War if President Hoover had accepted Stimson's advice (about being firm with Japan), but it is not unlikely . . . If his advice that we could not hold the Philippines had been followed, the course of the war in the Pacific might have been different—and better."

TWO OF THE FIVE-CENT (repeat, five-cent) women's magazines have interesting items this month. Woman's Day lists and illustrates 59 Christmas gifts you can make. They'll cost from approximately nothing to $8. And in Family Circle, Olive L. Earle tells 14 ways in which you can have a "garden" right in the kitchen through the use of sprouts or seeds planted in your old earthenware and bric-a-brac.

JOSEPH WECHSBERG has written a thorough piece in Saturday Evening Post about the Soviet soldier's life in Germany. The Reds like it fine in Germany, Wechsberg reports. "The Red army soldiers are overwhelmed by the water faucets, towels and electric light bulbs of Germany's dreary, depleted, devastated Soviet zone. . . . The shambles of half-kaput Eastern Germany still are a paradise compared to the abject poverty in which most Soviet soldiers were brought up."

"The CIO's Hatchet Man" is an article, also in the Post, by Elise Morrow. It's about Allan Haywood, vice president and director of organization of the CIO.

NOBODY DIGS COAL because he wants to, says William J. Slocum in Nation's Business. Among misconceptions about coal mining, Slocum lists the following:

That coal digging is back-breaking labor. It's not. Most of it is done sitting down. That coal digging is dangerous. It is neither as dangerous as John L. Lewis claims, nor as safe as the operators insist. Somewhere in the middle is the truth (Slocum adds that mining will be a lot safer the day the unions and some operators cease their mutual flouting of safety laws and agreements in the interest of jobs for union men and profits for operators). That coal miners are well paid. They're not. What with strikes and shutdowns, a $3000-a-year miner is a rarity even in good times.

CHOCK-A-BLOCK seems to be the condition of Harper's Bazaar this time. In addition to the usual women-only items like "Lingerie in a New Pastel" and "The Jeweled Foot," there are articles about James Thurber (by Lewis Gannett) and Soutine, the artist (by Monroe Wheeler), plus a story by Truman Capote. "It is quite possible," writes Gannett of the mostly blind Thurber, "that, sitting alone in the dark, gazing at the spots before his eyes, he sees things that two-eyed people do not see, and certainly the darkness has sharpened his senses of both hearing and touch."

LO 'N' BEHOLD if there isn't a little piece about Soutine in Vogue, too. Seems a Soutine show is opening in New York. Vogue also has a bright article entitled, "C Is for Stalin," by Richard Lauterbach.

FRANK SULLIVAN has a reminiscent report in Good Housekeeping. All about his mother's buttermilk pancakes.

"It is possible," says Bianca Bradbury, also in Good Housekeeping, "to live in the same house with television and live in peace." By and large, she says, "I think that television is Mama's friend."

IT MIGHT be a good idea, or at any rate a convenient one, for us to recognize Red China, says Felix Morley in Pathfinder. If we should do so, however, we ought also to recognize fully Franco's Spain and Peron's Argentina, Morley adds. "If these three governments are given full recognition," Morley writes, "criticisms from different groups of Americans will tend to cancel out."

CONTRARY to old wives' tales on the subject, working clear up to the birth of her baby may be beneficial to the expectant mother and to her progeny as well, says Ellen Raymond in The Woman. Mrs. Raymond, who held down a job throughout pregnancy, cites her doctor's belief that such a work program can ease many of the economic and personal fears which complicate childbirth, and also keep the mother in top physical condition.

JOHN CROSBY, radio critic of the New York Herald Tribune and The Washington Post, blasts radio in Life with an article entitled, "Seven Deadly Sins of the Air." Among the adjectives Crosby applies to radio are "avaricious" and "cowardly."

Matter of Fact

Democrats Write Off a Deficit

By Stewart Alsop

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S Fair Deal is not a real issue anywhere in the Midwest. By definition, an issue requires disagreement. And in the Midwest, there is no disagreement about the Fair Deal. Everybody is against it.

In the area of domestic policy, there are just two ideas for which the Truman Administration is solely responsible. These are the Brannan Plan for agriculture, and the Ewing plan for health. Everything else in the Truman program is essentially a warmed-over item from Franklin D. Roosevelt's capacious New Deal icebox. Thus the Brannan and Ewing plans are the Fair Deal. And in the Midwest, the Fair Deal has no defenders at all.

TAKE ONE example. When this reporter arrived in Indiana, he found Democratic faces still white and Democratic hands still shaking. It seems that President Truman's Social Security Administrator, Oscar Ewing, sponsor of the Ewing health plan, is a Hoosier by origin. Ewing had let it be known that he planned to descend on his native State to "help" Alexander Campbell, Democratic candidate for the Senate. He had finally been persuaded to stay as far as possible from Indiana, but in Democratic circles the shock of this threatened murder of all Campbell's political hopes had not yet worn off.

Or take another example. The scene is a club in Chicago. Harry Truman's Senate Majority Leader, Scott Lucas, is making a campaign speech. He devotes the first two-thirds of his speech—although his tone is more in sorrow than in anger—to making it "clear" that he is dead set against both the Ewing and Brannan plans. In brief, the Fair Deal majority leader is spending much of his time campaigning against the Fair Deal.

Or look at Iowa. Iowa was supposed to be the great testing ground for the Brannan Plan. Democratic Senatorial Candidate Albert Loveland, former Undersecretary of Agriculture, arrived in Iowa prepared to base his campaign squarely on support for the brainchild of his former chief. But in recent weeks he has been running from the Brannan Plan just as fast as his nimble legs will carry him.

In short, the Truman Administration's only two original ideas on domestic policy have proved resounding flops. And the reason is obvious. The Brannan and Ewing plans might be exceedingly powerful vote-getters in a depression America. In the boom-time America of 1950, they simply have no political relevance whatever.

IF THE MOST important segments of the Fair Deal program are considered pure political poison by the Democratic candidates themselves, what are the Democratic assets? You sense one answer to this question when you talk to Democratic and Republican organization men.

On the one hand, you find thorough-going professionals, men who understand the mathematics of politics. On the other hand you find enthusiastic, well-heeled amateurs, prone to forget that the very rich do not constitute a majority of the voting population. Thanks partly to the efforts of Democratic Chairman William Boyle, the Democratic Party is organized professionally on a Nation-wide basis far more effectively than it was in Roosevelt's day, while the Republican Party is still often run by businessmen playing at politics.

Another Democratic asset is, of course, labor. The days when labor's political effort consisted largely of party line pamphlets and propaganda are over. Since the CIO purged its Communists, and the AFL dropped its lofty indifference to politics, labor is more and more effectively organized to get its people to the polls—which is the only kind of organization that really means anything.

IT IS THUS hardly to be wondered at that every Democratic candidate in the Midwest, while eagerly abandoning the Fair Deal, has announced in favor of repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act. But it is also significant that, especially in the rural areas, Democratic candidates have been remarkably mouselike in supporting Taft-Hartley repeal. Organized labor is, after all, only a relatively small minority of the voting population, and not too popular a minority at that.

The fact is that the country has never been more basically conservative, as suggested by the rather comical response of the Democratic candidates themselves to the Brannan and Ewing plans. Thus this year should be a year of Republican opportunity. November 7 will reveal whether this opportunity has been effectively exploited.

But it is hard to escape the impression that the "anti-me-too" Republican campaign in the Midwest has tended to stimulate precisely those fears which are the real and basic Democratic asset—fear that the gains of large voting groups under the New Deal will be canceled out, fear of another depression, fear of a suicidal return to isolationism in foreign policy.

March of Science

Eating to a Healthy Long Life

By Alton L. Blakeslee

NEW YORK.—Science offers six general rules to help you eat your way to healthy long life. They are summed up by Dr. Charles E. Dutchess, medical director of Schenley Laboratories, Inc., who has long been interested in gerontology, the science of aging.

The time to start the rules is now.

If you are young, good nourishment means more chance of keeping body organs up to par and avoiding breakdowns. If you are 40 or over—and about 45 million Americans are—it is even more important to protect your body mechanism against the wear and tear of age.

THE RULES, plus reasons from scientific evidence, are:

1. Plenty of high-quality protein, such as lean meat and egg white. Proteins supply the building blocks of nerves, muscles and other tissues, all containing protein. Proteins also help maintain the normal metabolic rate, the rate of energy use and buildup and breakdown of tissues. Your metabolism tends to slow down with the years.

2. A plentiful supply of vitamins, especially A, B and C. You get them from meat, milk, eggs, vegetables and fruits. They also come in vitamin pills.

3. Get your essential minerals, including iron, calcium, phosphorous, manganese and copper. You find them in a variety of the basic foods.

4. Cut down on carbohydrates, the starches and sugars that mainly supply calories, the units of heat and energy. Since your metabolism is slowing down, you need fewer calories than in youth. An excess of calories causes fatness.

5. Guard against obesity, for it shortens life. Probably, says Dr. Dutchess, you should try to keep the ideal weight for your height recommended for you at age 25 or 30 on modern health charts.

6. There's evidence that substances found in certain foods can help prevent this kind of hardening by keeping down the amount of cholesterol appearing in the blood, Dr. Dutchess said.

They include three B-complex vitamins, choline, inositol and pyridokine, and a protein-building block, methionine. They are supplied naturally in wheat germ, yeast, lean meat, eggs and milk. They also are produced synthetically and supplied in tablet form. Another aid being studied is rutin, a chemical from buckwheat and other plants, which helps keep capillaries from becoming too fragile.

'Detroit Plan' Has Loopholes Here

By Harry N. Stull

TWO SUGGESTIONS recently have ben made to improve traffic conditions. The Traffic Director has suggested publication of the names of persons whose driving permits are revoked or suspended. The other suggestion involves the so-called Detroit plan of mandatory jail sentences for drunk driving.

STULL

The first suggestion undoubtedly will receive considerable support. The publicity might serve as a deterrent and might otherwise be in the public interest by identifying those who have forfeited the right to drive on the public streets.

The rule of mandatory jail sentences for drunken drivers might fail here, though it has been highly successful in Detroit. It certainly would fail if there were any exceptions to the rule. Unfortunately, there are many persons residing here who, because of congressional or diplomatic immunity, could not be included in the program. It is also highly improbable that persons of prominence would be put in jail. It stretches credulity quite a bit to visualize a court imposing a mandatory jail sentence on the son of a prominent Senator or Cabinet officer.

It will be generally agreed that the prevention of drunk driving is most important to the safety of the public, but any remedy must be applied without fear or favor to be effective. In the past, the charge often has been reduced to some less serious offense to lessen the consequences, and this device could conceivably be used to avoid the incarceration of those who sit in high places. This city is unique in many respects, not the least of which is the overpowering influence of the Federal Government. The fact that sentences have not been uniform, however, lends weight to the argument that some new preventive must be found.

THE ADVENT of the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November brings again to the minds of the thousands of loyal Americans residing in the District of Columbia their complete political impotency.

For many years, the Democratic and Republican organizations of the District have provided headquarters for the convenience of those among us who cast absentee ballots because they have retained voting privileges in the States. This year, the League of Women Voters of the District (composed largely of non-voters) has set up a similar headquarters.

No matter what yardstick is used, the residents of the District measure up to the citizens of the various States. There never has been any lack of patriotism on the part of Washingtonians, whether it be in supplying manpower to the armed services in time of war, in the amount of Federal taxes paid, or in the amount of bonds purchased. The large number of fixed income persons here makes possible a constant contribution to the Nation's welfare.

Denial of suffrage is not a result, as is sometimes suggested, of the people's failure to agree on what kind of suffrage they want. Every plebiscite and straw vote taken among District residents has shown an overwhelming desire for full suffrage, comparable, so far as possible, to that enjoyed by other citizens of the United States.

One proof that unity of the people will not bring results is the repeated failure to secure a constitutional amendment granting District residents representation on the floor of Congress and a vote for President. Sentiment for the adoption of a joint resolution to bring this about has been overwhelming, but for more than half a century Congress has refused to be convinced of the necessity of such legislation.

No one can forget the recent gallant fight to secure passage of legislation which would grant the people of the District the right to elect their own municipal officers. Though sentiment for this was not unanimous, it passed the Senate and would undoubtedly have passed the House had it not been caught in a political trap and buried.

The residents of Alaska and Hawaii seem to be in a position to win Statehood before residents of the District take the logical first step toward becoming a part of the Union—the right to choose their own city officials.

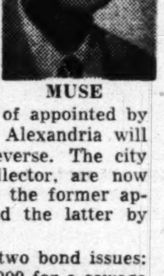
Tuesday's Fireworks Will Be Local

By Benjamin Muse

IN SPITE OF a little exchange of charges and answers between Tyrrell Krum, Republican candidate for Congress from the Eighth District, and Democratic incumbent Howard W. Smith, and a last-minute Republican spurt in the Ninth, the outcome of the congressional elections in Virginia is regarded apathetically as a foregone conclusion. The two constitutional amendments, also to be voted upon Tuesday, have aroused no controversy. With some of the locality referendums, however, it is quite a different matter.



MUSE

The City of Falls Church is all hot and bothered over a referendum on the proposal to have its city attorney elected, instead of appointed by the City Council as at present. Alexandria will vote on a similar proposal in reverse. The city attorney there, and the city collector, are now elected. The proposal is to have the former appointed by the City Council and the latter by the city manager.

Arlington County will vote on two bond issues: $7,450,000 for schools and $2,617,000 for a sewage disposal plant; also on a County Board member. Defeat of the independent incumbent, Chairman Daniel A. Dugan, by Democrat Fred W. Bach would give the Democrats a majority, now held by independents, on the board.

PRINCE WILLIAM COUNTY is voting on a $2,400,000 school bond issue, plus, in Occoquan sanitary district, a $147,000 water system bond issue. The school bond issue proposal is being bitterly contested against a long background of school squabbles and personalities. Failure to approve the bond issue, however, would result in a considerable mess. Construction of new school buildings would have to wait on driblets of loans from the State Literary Fund, with increasing jealousy and discontent in the sections which have to wait longest for theirs.

Then there is Fairfax County, whose good citizens are torn asunder over the question of county government reform. In spite of a heavy volume of spleen and recrimination coming to the top in that fair region, in the opinion of this column the contest has been a superlative example of democracy functioning with intelligent patriotism.

The numerous leagues, committees and associations plugging for county manager, for county executive or for no change appear to have favored the writer with a copy of each of their numerous essays, digests, treatises, manifestos and other pronouncements. These fill a big box, and they have all, at least in part, been read. They will be kept as valuable reference material.

They are not cheap campaign literature. They are scholarly studies of county government, and, taken all together, they represent as comprehensive a treatment of the subject in all its angles as has been made in Virginia.

HOW WILL the election come out? Some point to the fact that most of the no-change people will probably indicate a preference (in case of change) for the county executive plan, giving that side the votes of two groups. It is this column's prediction, however, that the county manager people have one point which will outweigh all others when the votes are dropped through the slot:

The county manager plan would do away with the present fantastically unbalanced pattern of elections to the Board of Supervisors. The five sixths of the voters of Fairfax County who are now underrepresented on the board will find it hard to vote against a righting of this injustice.

In Loudoun County, it is a question only of the county executive plan, which is being submitted to the voters for the second time. There the county officeholders and their friends have long been banded together in a fierce determination to keep things as they are and, through their local newspaper organ, to discredit anybody who suggests a change.

The predicament, therefore, of the courageous ladies of the League of Women Voters, and the many civic leaders who have braved freely flung aspersions to join them in the movement for reform, bears some resemblance to that of Daniel in the Lions' Den. But they will one day be thanked by the people of Loudoun; the people should register a vote on Tuesday at least sufficient to pave the way for adoption of the plan next time.

Party Peace—Lane Finds It Wonderful

By James P. Connolly

EVENTS OF THE WEEK have put Governor Lane's election prospects in a much brighter light. The Governor cemented his peace with his primary rival, George P. Mahoney, and as the week ended the Democrats were facing the election Tuesday with a firmly united front—superficially, anyway.

CONNOLLY

If there were any seriously soreheads in the party leadership, they did not show above ground. (After the developments of the week before, maybe they did not dare.) Jack Pollack and Mayor D'Alesandro, who were doghoused by the Governor the week before in his wooing of the Curran faction, seemed to be taking their disciplining in stride.

Both were proclaiming their everlasting loyalty to the party, the ticket and the platform, and the evidence was that in that respect, at least, they were sincere—although there was no doubt that, privately, personal feelings were ruffled. (You should have heard some of the asides.)

However, for practical purposes the Governor appeared to have brought both wings of the city leadership into line. But one question remained—the same one that plagued the Democratic candidates in their primary campaign: Can the leaders make the rank and file stay hitched?

THE QUESTION is broader than the Maryland election. It is a question whether political leaders anywhere still can steer the small fry by the hand and control or influence the vote as they used to do. In recent years some of the country's oldest and strongest machines have been shellacked by newcomers and amateurs.

Here at home the Curran organization was upset by Governor Lane when his popularity was fresh (not that he was any amateur) four years ago. A year later the same apple cart was overturned again by Mayor D'Alesandro, who rode into politics on it originally. And in the recent primary the Pollack Fourth District organization, formerly able to give a margin of 7000 for or against a favorite or a foe, was able to give Governor Lane an advantage of only about 1500.

What goes here? Are the voters feeling their oats or sowing some wild ones? Some persons think the older machines merely are being succeeded by newer ones. True, in the nature of politics, organizations we probably shall always have with us.

BUT EVIDENCE points to more voters and the fact that more of them are learning to stand on their own hind legs or two feet and act their age. Registration almost everywhere is up; in Maryland it is up now to 928,000, an increase of almost 60,000 over 1948. And more voters are turning out at the polls. The turnout for the last Maryland primary was one of the heaviest in the State's history. In Baltimore it was 66 percent, an unprecedented proportion.

And, of course, the heavier the run on the polls, the more independent the vote is apt to be. In the days when primary turnouts averaged only about 35 percent, consisting largely of a backbone of jobholders, the politicians found control comparatively easy.

But those dear, dead days may be dead forever. If they are, maybe their demise was due to the influence of wider education and the advent of closer communications—radio and television. The same forces probably played an important part in the rise of Labor. It is likely that they helped needle the voter to pick his own man at the polls.

HOWEVER, to get back to the matter of Democratic harmony in the election at hand—whether by chance or design, the Lane-Mahoney peace was stage-managed to make the most of it. In the first place, the rapprochement looked improbable, not to say impossible. Gov. Lane and Mahoney were personally as well as politically on the "outs."

True, Mahoney pleaded at the State convention for party unity, but he was reported to have made it a condition of his appearance that he would not be asked to greet the Governor. Behind the bringing of the two together may be two others—William Curran and Robert B. Ennis, chairman of the State Central Committee—the same two who, in the Ritchie administrations, managed Baltimore City for him.

Anyway, the Governor and Mahoney did meet and—wonder of wonders—shake hands about two weeks ago at the banquet of the United Democratic Women's Clubs. A week later they were shoulder to shoulder eating oysters—practically out of each other's hands—at an oyster roast and then came Gov. Lane's resignation from the Democratic National Committee and Mahoney's nomination by Bob Ennis to succeed him. That did it.

As the week drew toward a close, the party seemingly was solidified all around. Mahoney and his leaders were hard at work in campaign headquarters and in an indorsement Thursday Mahoney exhorted his followers to support Senator Tydings as well as the Governor. In the primary, the Senator and the Governor had gone separate ways.

The Tydings indorsement from Mahoney was hardly unexpected but it seemed to be the final touch needed to rally the whole Democratic family for a neighborhood fight.

Boswell 'Journal' Worthy of Fuss

By Lee Grove

BOSWELL'S LONDON JOURNAL, 1762-1763. Edited by Frederick A. Pottle. Preface by Christopher Morley. McGraw-Hill. 370 pp. Ill. $5.

THE NOW FAMILIAR story of the recovery from ancient houses of the bulk of the voluminous papers of James Boswell, after nearly two centuries of obscurity and neglect, is so romantic—and the interest, even excitement, that has attached to the plans for publication of the material has been so great—that it is gratifying to report that the initial volume leaves no sense of anticlimax.

Not only is the "London Journal," printed for the first time as the first volume in the Yale Editions of the Private Papers of James Boswell, a supreme revelation of the background of Boswell's "Life of Samuel Johnson"—the greatest biography in the English language—but it is in itself a human interest document as intriguing as the autobiographical works of Pepys, Cellini and Rousseau.

Samuel Johnson and James Boswell, from the jacket of "Boswell's London Journal"

James Boswell was the eldest son of Alexander Boswell, eighth Laird of Auchinleck, an Ayrshire estate that had been in the Boswell family since it was given by James IV of Scotland to a Boswell, who later died with the King on Flodden Field in 1513.

The eighth laird was a man narrow in outlook, who wanted his son to take up the legal profession like himself and who despised professional writers.

The son had other ideas. He dabbled in letters, was interested in the theater and wanted to get a commission in the Footguards, figuring that to be the best way to support himself as man-about-town in London. He was in London for several months, returned to Edinburgh and battled with his father for three years, and finally was enabled by the grant of a small allowance to return to London.

JAMES BOSWELL'S London Journal, covering a period of about nine months, begins when he was 22 and was starting for London. His practice was to write several days' entries at a sitting and to send the journal to a friend his own age in weekly instalments.

In London, Boswell yearned to shine as a polished gentleman, was a small town boy who never lost his wonder at the sights of the big city, was at once brash and the victim of an inferiority complex. He retained his fear of ghosts. He worried for fear he would not get along in the capital and would have to return to Edinburgh with his tail between his legs, and he managed to meet many of the great persons of London.

He visited the taverns and the theaters, saw a cockfight and an execution, heard George III open Parliament, and prowled the streets and parks.

Young Boswell was prudent with his money, drank sparingly, but women were another matter. His initiation as a libertine seems to have occurred during his first visit to London. He had an illegitimate child in Scotland.

Early in his journal he speaks of having been "some time" in London without a woman; "some time" was only 10 days after his arrival. His escapades were numerous, on a low plane and, with one exception, only briefly noted. The exception was "the fair Louisa," a young actress to whom Boswell laid siege with some craftiness, only to have the victory rebound in unhappy fashion.

Curiously enough, it seems to have been Dr. Johnson with his common sense and talk of principles who exercised a good influence in curbing young Boswell's "Paphian" proclivities.

IT WAS ON the sixteenth of May, 1763, that Boswell was having a cup of tea in the back room of the Covent Garden Shop of Tom Davies, an actor turned bookseller, when Johnson, who in general had a high regard for booksellers, arrived.

Davies introduced Boswell to the man whom he had so long wished to see, and the great man was abrupt with poor Bozzie. The fledgling, who told the story in the "Life" with a little more finish, noted that Johnson "has great humor and is a worthy man. But his dogmatical roughness of manners is disagreeable."

Despite Johnson's shagginess the day that Tom Davies was midwife to a great moment in literature, Johnson and the not easily discouraged Boswell within a few weeks were hitting it off together. It was on July 14, when the pair had their two pints of thick English port at the Mitre, that Johnson took the other "cordially by the hand and said, 'My dear Boswell! I do love you very much.'" One can share Boswell's emotions as, recording it in his journal, he adds: "I will be vain, there's enough."

Two days later Johnson, not knowing that Boswell had anticipated the idea, advised the Scot to keep a journal "fair and undisguised."

"I told Mr. Johnson that I put down all sorts of little incidents in it. 'Sir,' said he, 'there is nothing too little for so little a creature as man. It is by studying little things that we attain the great knowledge of having as little misery and as much happiness as possible.'"

JOHNSON TOLD Boswell that keeping a journal "would be a very good exercise."

In both the thought of knowledge and exercise as writing, Boswell had anticipated Johnson. At the beginning of his London journal, Boswell said: "I have therefore determined to keep a daily journal in which I shall set down my various sentiments and my various conduct, which will be not only useful but very agreeable. It will give me a habit of application and improve me in expression; and knowing that I am to record my transactions will make me more careful to do well."

Boswell not only took his journal very seriously, but enjoyed keeping it. Before he left for London he kept a journal briefly as practice for this one. In London, on February 9, 1763, happily aware of his growing proficiency as a writer, he says: "I am really pleased with myself; words come skipping to me like lambs upon Moffat Hill; and I turn my periods smoothly and imperceptibly like a skilful wheelwright turning tops in a turning-loom. There's fancy! There's simile!"

A great deal of skill went into the writing of the journal. As Frederick Pottle notes in his admirable introduction, Boswell uses here the stage directions that gave drama to the "Life of Samuel Johnson." Usually writing several days after the events recorded, he selected his material for inclusion with storyteller's skill and never let his knowledge of subsequent events spoil the day-to-day suspense.

YET FOR ALL his care in writing the journal, Boswell seems to have had no thought of its being published, certainly not in his time. His thoughts of a writing career were vague and half formed.

When David Garrick told Boswell, "You will be a very great man," Boswell noted in his journal, "I think there is a blossom about me of something more distinguished than the generality of mankind. But I am afraid that this blossom will never swell into fruit."

Speaking then of his daydreams of greatness, he says they are "of having a regiment, of getting into Parliament, making a figure and becoming a man of consequence in the state." He did not mention authorship.

But Boswell had something more than skill in writing. Oliver Goldsmith remarked it, and Boswell wrote it down: "He said I had a method of making people speak. 'Sir,' said I, 'that is next best to speaking myself.' 'Nay,' said he, 'but you do both.'"

ANOTHER MUG FOR THE BIER. By Richard Starnes. Lippincott. $2.50.

NEWSPAPERMAN Barney Forge and his Alexandria neighbor, Dr. St. George Peachy, take on a poisoner who grows his own wolfsbane and uses it to extinguish several odious inhabitants of Washington and vicinity. The first and foremost victim is a columnist and radio commentator whose legmen know all and he spills all. What he is about to spill when he is given a lethal mickey is a gas field swindle against the Government, and this ties in several other scurvy specimens, including a rich society woman. There is also the nymphomaniac daughter of a Senator who puts horses over impossible jumps so she can shoot them when they fall and break a leg.

Mr. Starnes, a local newspaperman, knits together this estimable cast with a skein of zany dialogue, then does some fast unraveling of methods and motives at the tag end of his yarn. His Dr. Peachy, expert in morbid anatomy and connoisseur of old bourbon, is omniscient as ever, the while he lights his pipe with kitchen matches scratched on the coccyx of a handy skeleton. The book is a lot of fun.

Fiction Based on Fact

Machine Swallows Man: A Frightening Picture

By John Barkham

THE TWENTY-FIFTH HOUR, by C. Virgil Gheorghiu. Knopf. 404 pp. $3.50.

THIS NOVEL comes to the United States preceded by the hosannahs of European critics, who have hailed it as Europe's greatest postwar novel. Not to beat about the bush, "The Twenty-fifth Hour" is a deeply moving, biting, frightening, satiric commentary on a phase of contemporary civilization.

Whether it is a novel at all is open to question: the author is obviously writing from his own personal suffering. But that its form is fictional and its content fact does not detract from the searing truth of its message.

The central theme is that civilization has entered the age of the machine, in which man is no longer an individual but a cipher, a card in a filing cabinet. The time is the Hitler era, before and during World War II.

Johann Moritz, a Romanian peasant about to emigrate to America, is arrested as a Jew because a police sergeant who covets his wife wants him out of the way. Nothing he does can reverse the official charge—although he is not a Jew. He is sent from one concentration camp to another. His dossier grows bigger and bigger, and the bigger it becomes the more impossible to correct the initial error.

Mr. Gheorghiu makes his point with simple but devastating eloquence. Although he is speaking of man's inhumanity to man, no hint of anger creeps into his story, which immeasurably enhances the compassion of his writing.

He calls his book "The Twenty-fifth Hour" presumably because he thinks Western civilization has already passed the point of redemption. But Mr. Gheorghiu's experience did not flow from Western civilization. The hell he pictures was created in that part of Europe where technology was wedded to totalitarianism in a horrifying symbiosis.

Here in the New World, man is still an individual, free and reasonably happy in his association with a technology far greater than anything Europe ever devised. Having written his poignant epitaph to Europe in delirium totalitariens, Mr. Gheorghiu should now come to America and see how man, freer than he is anywhere else, has learned to live contentedly with the biggest machine on earth.

Lover, Come Back

THE INFINITE WOMAN. By Edison Marshall. Farrar, Straus. 374 pp. $3.

MR. MARSHALL'S "infinite woman" is none other than Lola Montez, that passionate pilgrim who made good before several of the crowned heads of Europe a century ago. Since Montez has danced and loved her way through a good many previous stories, Mr. Marshall is a brave man to put her through her paces again. What's more, he has made things considerably more difficult for himself by letting Lola tell her story in the first person. We know she was passionate, and this novel makes her literate; hence these pages should be scorched by the great flames that lighted her love-life.

If they aren't actually scorched, they burn with appreciable heat. Mr. Marshall's Lola was born Lucia Riley, who was taken out to India by her parents in childhood. A beautiful child, she started early by coveting her stepfather. "Since I was going on 10, and ripening fast in the Indian sun, it was a big order to feel daughterly to a man of 25."

The real Lola became mistress of King Louis I of Bavaria. Mr. Marshall's Lola made a play for King Ludwig I of the same, and hooked him with a bluntness not customary in court conversaziones. "I've seen only a few kings in my life, and have never been kissed by one," confesses the luscious lady to a somewhat startled Ludwig at their first meeting. "I thought how wonderful it would be to have him choose me for his sweetheart and take me to his bed." What man could resist that? Ludwig didn't.

Nor will the customers who like their novels spiced with plenty of sex and salacity.

THE FRONT IS EVERYWHERE
Militant Communism in Action
By William R. Kintner, Lt. Col., U.S. Army
THE COMMUNIST PARTY — in name a political party — is in actuality a military system made for unremitting battle. This book is a calm, scientific, penetrating analysis of the world Communist organization and its plans for the revolutionary overthrow by force of all capitalist governments. Here is an inside look at these revolutionary groups — men with a dire goal who have already taken over in Europe and China, provoked war in Korea, and are awaiting their chance in America. A Writer Recaptures a Writer

A Shade of F. Scott Fitzgerald

By Harrison Smith

President, the Saturday Review of Literature

THE DISENCHANTED, by Budd Schulberg. Random House. 388 pp. $3.50.

THE YEARS between World War I and the 1929 stock market crash exist in curious vacuum, as if they were set apart by some unique quality which cannot appear again. It is a difficult period for any writer to resurrect; there is an air of unreality about its bootleggers, gamblers, gilded youths on the rampage, all of them, and the country, too, riding for a fall.

BUDD SCHULBERG

In "The Disenchanted," Budd Schulberg has succeeded in bringing it to life against the still feverish background of Hollywood in 1936. In this solid and brilliant novel he has succeeded in another feat at which so many accomplished writers have failed; he has made a creative writer his principal character. When authors step out of their own books into another writer's novel, they are usually uninspiring caricatures of what a writer is supposed to be like.

It is inevitable that the tragic figure of Manley Halliday in "The Disenchanted" should bring Scott Fitzgerald, "the creator of the jazz age," to mind; for Halliday is the epitome of the extravagance, the waste of health and talent through which Fitzgerald brought his flashing career to an end. Indeed, the fictional career of Halliday can be summed up in the words of one of Fitzgerald's titles, "The Beautiful and the Damned."

In the twenties, after two books, Manley Halliday was recognized as a genius; he was incredibly handsome, his wife was as beautiful, in the sleek and provocative style of the period. Fame and money and love were poured out before this young man, to whom the age of 30 had once seemed so old and who had tried to make youth a career instead of a preparation for life.

WHEN THE NOVEL begins, this darling of the gods is 37, but the gods have long ago forsaken him. He is afflicted with diabetes and a bad heart, the aftermath of a long struggle with alcoholism, and, even worse, he is heavily in debt to everyone. He owes his publisher thousands, he cannot pay the rent for his wife's apartment, his son's tuition in an expensive school and the back taxes he owes the Government; he has even borrowed money from the devoted young woman who is living with him in his shabby rooms in Hollywood.

Nevertheless, a remnant of his fame still clings to him. He is given his last chance to pull himself back and perhaps to go on with the novel he has been trying to write for many months. Victor Milgrim, the latest producer to hit the Hollywood jackpot, picks him up for $2000 a week for 10 weeks, during which he is supposed to collaborate with a young writer on a script which is to combine skiing and a New England college in an absurd musical fantasy titled, "Love On Ice."

To Shep Stearns, any association with Halliday seems too good to be true. He has read every word of those novels that were once so famous and that are now out of print, and the decade from which they came has always fascinated him. In the story conferences with him he finds that it is impossible to escape from the '20s, from Halliday's reminiscences and from his own responsibility toward this relic of a past, which he thinks of as "a ball to which he had not been invited, in a ballroom which had been torn down years before he had even learned to dance."

Then Milgrim has an idea. He will take his strangely reluctant writers to the New England college where "Love On Ice" is to be filmed, stage a skiing carnival on a nearby mountain and reveal himself as a benefactor of a famous writer worshiped by every teacher of English literature in its ivy-covered halls.

Halliday had not told Shep his jealously guarded secret, that he is a diabetic and a drunkard who has sworn off. The bottle of champagne they share on the trip to New York is enough to send him to any bottle he can get his hands on. When they reach Webster College, he is in an alcoholic haze through which his penetrating mind and his creative imagination can sense the absurdity of the final disgraceful scene, with Milgrim, "the potentate in the topper, confronting a battered drunk fallen from grace"—the dark pattern of deterioration from which he had been trying to break away. Death, he knew, was only around the corner.

"THE DISENCHANTED" is not a Hollywood novel, though Hollywood was the cause of Halliday's last struggle for survival, hastening the doom which drink and drugs would have soon brought upon him. It is the story of a man whose genius had been destroyed by fabulous success, by embracing all of life in his youth and leaving nothing for his middle age.

Primarily it is about American writers and why so many of them have nothing left to say when they are past 40. It is about the American dream of success for its own sake, of a concept of love that remains adolescent, and a lack of any standard of value.

As a novel it has depth and humanity, and a leavening of humor. Budd Schulberg's two previous novels have been brilliant and satirical Hollywood stories. "The Disenchanted" shows that he is capable of understanding and sympathy for his characters that he has not shown before. At the present time he is certainly one of the most talented and promising of our younger novelists.

"Once I was a fairly successful literary agent—then I began writing the stuff myself . . ."

Distributes Responsibility

Clark's Bluntness Would Help Earlier Memoirs

By Marshall Andrews

CALCULATED RISK. By Gen. Mark W. Clark. Harper. 500 pp. $5.

SO OVERWHELMING has been the flood of post-World War II memoirs that this volume by one of America's younger and more outstanding military leaders takes on almost the quality of afterthought. It is redeemed no less by the unexpected clarity of its author's observations than by the controversy which surrounded him as leader of the Allies' forlorn hope in Italy.

General Clark threads his way through these controversies with a frankness rarely encountered in the writings of officers still in service. And as he does so, he has time and talent for observing such human and appealing matters as the gusto with which Prime Minister Churchill slurped his soup.

IT WAS Mark Clark, you remember, who devised the method of quickly training divisions for the new Army in 1941, who made a spectacular visit to hostile French North Africa by submarine in 1942, who made the deal with Vichy Admiral Darlan which halted French resistance in Africa. It was he who built up and launched the Fifth Army assault at Salerno, who ordered the bloody attack across the Rapido and the bombing of Monte Cassino Abbey; who led the nearly disastrous end run at Anzio, who captured Rome and finally opposed a firm and uncompromising front to Russian ambitions in Austria.

Each of these ventures was a calculated risk whose failure might have been infinitely more momentous than success. And General Clark deals with each in its place, giving each the weight he thinks it deserves, accepting responsibility where it was his and otherwise placing responsibility where he believed it belongs. Nowhere, in any case, does he offer an apology for what he did or failed to do.

Perhaps the heaviest and most far-reaching criticism resulted from Clark's use of the Thirty-sixth (Texas) Infantry Division to attack across the unfordable Rapido River against strong German fortifications. He makes it clear that this attack was deliberately ordered as a means of pinning down Nazi forces which otherwise would have been used to oppose the vital Anzio operation.

It is a commentary on the tribulations of military command in the United States that an officer leading a gigantic diversion in favor of operations elsewhere should have been so violently and publicly criticized for ordering a local diversion to assist the general diversion to which he was committed.

To put it another way, the Italian campaign was designed to hold German divisions from the Russian front and from the eventual cross-channel invasion. The Rapido assault was ordered to divert German divisions from the Anzio landing which, for political as well as military reasons, had been decided upon to speed up the Italian campaign. It was this small diversion to support a greater diversion which brought the wrath of Texas on Clark's head and which he says he could blame on his superiors but won't.

AS FOR the bombing of the Monte Cassino Abbey, Clark says he opposed this desecration from the beginning and only consented because it was demanded by Lieut. Gen. Bernard Freyberg, commander of the New Zealand Corps, whose tender sensibilities the British carefully nursed. As it turned out, he maintains, the bombing accomplished nothing of military value, because the Germans were not using the abbey, and actually impeded subsequent operations because the enemy defended the rubble more stoutly than they would or could have defended the undamaged abbey.

Clark is more outspoken in his opinion of air support than are most combat commanders as, indeed, is he on most other subjects. The effect of "strategic" bombing, he contends, was felt too late to be of assistance to the land campaign, while bombing designed to isolate the battlefield did not appreciably disrupt enemy reinforcement and supply until the campaign was nearly ended.

HIS DEALINGS with the Russians after the defeat of Germany led Clark quickly to the conclusion that, having attained power by force, their leaders understood only force. He found their military commanders comradely enough on their own initiative but unpredictable as the cold wind blew upon them from Moscow. And he has some harsh things to say of the State Department for the manner in which it handled what, to him, was a simple problem of counterattack.

For instance, Clark blames the State Department's Benjamin Cohen for the agreements whereby Russia gained its stranglehold on the Balkan nations. Only his own intervention with Secretary of State Marshall at the Moscow conference, he says, prevented an Austrian treaty which, as Cohen proposed it, would have given Russia the same measure of control over Austria.

Clark writes with a bluntness and a frankness which would have added value to some of the memoirs which have preceded his. And, because of its place far back in the procession, "Calculated Risk" is necessarily repetitious of much which has gone before.

Perhaps it is not too much to hope that what there is to say about World War II from the standpoint of high command has now been said and the historian may be given an opportunity at last to set one interpretation against another and draw some lasting conclusions.

Seldes Is Disillusioned

On Improving the Popular 'Arts'

By Sterling North

THE GREAT AUDIENCE. By Gilbert Seldes. Viking. 299 pp. $3.75.

GILBERT SELDES, author of "The Seven Lively Arts," was one of the first serious critics to insist upon the potential respectability of several of the popular "arts," including comics and the movies.

He felt, no doubt, that he was playing the creative part of a modern Pygmalion in helping to shape several new and vibrant Galateas. But despite his good intentions, the results seem more nearly to resemble a battalion of Frankenstein monsters.

"The Great Audience" is to some extent a disillusioned postscript to his previous book. He still rightly insists that all of these popular media can be handled with integrity. But he admits with an overtone of despair that the major trend is toward increasing intellectual prostitution in all the mass-audience industries.

Worse than this, in their frantic scramble for wider distribution, every one of these forms of communication is helping to manufacture a vast, stereotyped, non-critical audience which can be depended upon to react with automatic regularity to standardized stimuli. Nothing could be more dangerous to democracy.

SELDES ADMITS that, as a man who for many years has worked in radio and the movies, he has no desire to write a blanket condemnation. Knowing that not one of the popular forms of entertainment is likely to disappear, he wisely spends most of his book in suggesting ways to improve them.

He feels that informed public opinion and the group pressure of intelligent citizens have a particularly good chance to make themselves felt at this moment because the producers in all these fields are frightened.

The movies, "conspiring to prolong adolescence until we are in danger of becoming a Nation of teen-agers," have already lost 20% of their audience since 1946, including almost all citizens over 30.

Radio is shivering behind its microphones over the inroads of television.

Television, having helped to undermine all other forms of "entertainment" production, including book publishing, has not yet produced anything like a satisfactory art form or a profitable balance sheet.

And a public expose of a mere half-dozen comic book firms would shake that crime-inducing source of graphic insanity to its rapacious roots.

NATURALLY, the evils are not identical in each of these branches of human communication, nor are the suggested cures always parallel.

Better movies, for instance, in Seldes' opinion would be more mature movies; honest handling of sex rather than salacious and suggestive avoidance; frank and open dramatization of political, social, economic and religious issues; in short, adult entertainment for adult minds. The success of a picture like "Hamlet" shows it can be done. In fact, the solution to Hollywood's dwindling income may lie in producing a few first-rate films.

The author agrees with Pope Pius XI and (ironically) Lenin, both of whom insisted that there is no more potent means of influencing the masses than the cinema. The American contention that movies are sheer entertainment and do not influence people's thinking, Seldes insists is a dangerous illusion.

In the past, and to a lesser extent even today, radio occasionally rises to justify its existence with solid, adult programs, good music, good dramatizations, honest controversy. But it still is geared largely to the "crying woman and the laughing man." A study of the audience which listens to the appalling daytime soap operas shakes one's faith in human nature. And any attempt in the evening to get a good program usually turns up nothing more sustaining than a prize-fight or a crude comedian.

SELDES' LOW OPINION of television (so far) is reminiscent of a recent wisecrack by Groucho Mark: "I find television very educating. Everytime somebody turns on the set I go into the other room and read a book."

Groucho's reaction seems to be far from typical. A recent survey of television homes shows that this medium, seemingly created to promote Milton Berle and the plunging neckline, has virtually eliminated the reading of books in video families, and that children on the average spend more time watching television than in doing their homework.

But Seldes has hopes for television because it is still so young an industry. It is not yet completely frozen at its present moronic level and might conceivably be elevated.

If newspapers can furnish a varied and intelligent fare, Seldes asserts, so can other mass media.

Notes on the Margin

A Publisher Comments on Fiction

By Lee Grove

ARCHIBALD G. OGDEN, editor-in-chief of Appleton-Century-Crofts, was in town last week, willing to talk on the subject closest to his heart—fiction, and its present state.

"Fiction is more exciting to publish than anything else," said Ogden, one of New York's friendliest, best known publishing figures, "because it is like playing roulette rather than, say, gin rummy. If you are good at gin rummy you are bound to make money over a period of time; except, in certain instances, with nonfiction you don't have runaway sales, but with roulette and fiction . . ."

It requires the sale of 7000 to 8000 copies, because of the cost of manufacture, "to get your hat back" on a novel, he said, frankly admitting that the selection of a title by one of the many book clubs often represents the difference between profit and loss on the book.

"But you have to keep in mind when reading manuscripts that there are certain tabus in almost all the book clubs. That doesn't mean that I am a strong believer in the use of four-letter words in fiction, but if all realism has to be toned down you are going to have a milk and water sort of fiction, similar to the movies. The overall effect will be to eunuchize our writing."

Ogden, who was London story editor for 20th Century-Fox after serving as executive director of the Council for Books in Wartime, thinks people at the moment have gotten out of the habit of buying fiction because of the second-rate quality of so much of it. And he promptly named some exceptions, citing "The Naked and the Dead" and "The Widow" among others.

"In one way, we are suffering the way the British are suffering," Ogden said. "Over there all the bright young men who should in their twenties have been serving their apprenticeship in writing were spending six years in the army. Afterward, with a wife and children, they have had to become too concerned with making a living.

"But there's nothing wrong with fiction sales that a couple of 'Gone With the Winds' wouldn't cure," he said, visualizing readers stacked knee deep in the bookshops, all asking for novels.

"I am told by a vice president of Doubleday that book manufacture has reached the point where it is possible for an author to be put in at one end of the machinery and come out a bound volume at the other end. Thus it is possible for a man really to throw himself into his work."—Managing Editor James R. Wiggins, presiding at the recent Washington Post Book and Author Luncheon.

TALKING with Robert Kenyon, operator of the bookmobile sent on the road by the British Book Center, New York, while he was parked last week in front of Sidney Kramer's H st. bookshop, I find I made the following notes:

Slender, dark-haired. 24. Oxford graduate. Born at Ware, Herts., near GBS's Ayot St. Lawrence. Didn't know there was a Mrs. Shaw until she died. No one ever heard of her. (Husband did all the talking.) 1500 Brit. books in car. Traveled 14,000 miles thru 30 States.

Has met occasional impoliteness, no Anglophobia. Occasional Brit. war bride, homesick, wept on shoulder. Man in Laguna Beach ordered 30 books in 20 minutes. Hollywood studio people don't ask, they commandeer. In Palm Springs arrived same day as rodeo opened. Gave up, went to rodeo.

Was "on radio show between puffed wheat and coffee." Southern Calif. great market for books on occult. "Notable British Trials" and war crimes trials popular in Hollywood; people want them for story plots? Librarian in San Joaquin Valley begged bookmobile come. Turned out wanted city fathers to see bookmobile—not books—because she wanted to buy one.

Women squeal for Angela Thirkell books. Wellesley author came to see if any his books in bookmobile. No. Much interest avant garde lit. in Albuquerque, N. Mex. Had scare when found 4 of 6 bolts off wheel on Denver mtn. Bkmobile attracts spiritual college girls.

Lost few books but two chairs. Probably forgot. Stopped twice by highway police, once in Neb., police just curious. Polite.

People pound devaluation conscious. Can't understand why Brit. books cost more here. Forget shipping cost, etc.

Has read half of books. "Primitive Money," "History of Fireworks," liked. "Mythology of Soul" popular. Likes America. Has taken out first cit. papers.

MILESTONES OF MEDICINE. By Ruth Fox. Random House. 237 pp. $2.75.

IN THIS, a sequel to her earlier book, "Great Men of Medicine," Miss Fox continues her humanizing style of dramatizing the lives and works of doctors.

The author has chosen eight turning points where doctors and others advanced life and living. These include the X-ray, radium, drugs, vitamins, diphtheria toxoids, yellow fever control, insulin and penicillin.

MISS FOX

All are oft-told tales aimed at teen-agers, but through the author's style they become feats of human beings, to be read and enjoyed by all. It's not an easy thing to do, this reducing of the accomplishments of leaders in specialized fields to a common understanding.

The little family episodes, such as the pages of dialogue between Physicist Wilhelm Roentgen and his frau one cold November day in 1895, were undoubtedly dreamed up on the author's typewriter. But by such devices the story gets told, and fact does not suffer by the fictionalizing.

—N. S. HASELTINE.

FRONT PAGE FOR JENNIFER. By Jane S. McIlvaine. Illustrators, Beth and Joe Krush. Macrae Smith. $2.50. Girls, 12 and up.

Jennifer, who expects to step from editing her high school publication right into a big city daily newsroom, is disillusioned properly and swiftly by a managing editor who tells her to go get some experience on a weekly.

There she gets a basic understanding of the business of putting out a small town weekly and also learns about the irritants and satisfactions in the lives of rural editors.

Jane McIlvaine, who is coeditor with her husband of the Downingtown, Pa., weekly, also worked as a columnist and feature writer in Washington during the war.

She does not gloss over the problems involved in producing a small town weekly, and does include much useful technical information for girls who hope to work on a paper some day.

There is a paternalistic tycoon, a boy who wants to be a doctor, an impractical scientist, a cynical big city reporter, and other stock characters. There is also one noteworthy scene where several big-time newspaper men congregate in what must be a cocktail lounge. Only one of them orders a drink, and that is a gingerale.

The illustrations are routine.

HAPPY MOTHER GOOSE. By Geoffrey Hall. Triangle Publications. 50 cents. De luxe edition, $1.

IF MR. HALL'S name had been omitted from the title page, one could only have concluded that Pollyanna and Mrs. Grundy had collaborated.

Should this determinedly gay creation gain wide circulation among the hard-riding, fast-shooting, atomic age Jacks and Jills, a whole new generation might gain maturity thinking that "Saturday's child takes joy in living," that "Georgie Porgie, pudding and pie, kissed the girls and said goodbye;" and that "Taffy was a Welshman, Taffy was a chief!"

The worst has been done to the old gem about Dr. Fell which comes out, "I really like you, Doctor Fell, the reason why I'm here to tell."

Mr. Dugan's illustrations would be nice if he hadn't painted the same idiotic grin on every character.

THE GENTLING OF JONATHAN. By Louise Rankin. Illustrated by Lee Townsend. Viking Press. $2.50. 9 to 12.

JONATHAN was known as "Toughy" in his home town in the Sierra Nevadas. He was quick tempered and irresponsible until his new neighbor gave him her beautiful black gelding, Drogo. The job of caring for the horse, the necessity of being gentle with him, and the responsibility of earning money to pay for his keep, soon brought out the best in the 11-year-old boy.

Illustration by the author, William F. Brown, from "Tiger, Tiger" (Coward McCann, $1.)

"No, father, I'm not exactly on the team—not, not exactly manager—no, not exactly waterboy—I scrape the mud from their cleats"

Louise Rankin, who also wrote "Daughter of the Mountains," cared for her own horse as a child, so she writes with authority about how great an education this can be for a youngster.

In Jonathan's case, the experience expands to such an extent that he is eventually credited with the responsibility for the building of the new town hall, which requires a stretch in an adult's imagination, but probably not a boy's.

In any case, Jonathan has an interesting time learning to ride, camping out in the mountains, and generally growing up, and there are some nice people in the story, including the neighbor, Coralie, and a retired cowboy, Shorty. The drawings by Lee Townsend are adequate.

THE MAN WHO DIDN'T WASH HIS DISHES. By Phyllis Krasilovsky. Illustrated by Barbara Cooney. Doubleday. $1.50.

THIS IS A FRISKY book about a man with a high old appetite for food but a diminishing one for work.

He cooks himself a great big supper and then is too comfortable to do the dishes. The next night he's hungrier and more tired (the author avoids the word lazy). The dishes stack up until he practically eats himself out of house and home.

Fortunately, it rains one day. He piles all the dirty crockery on an open-bed truck and providential Nature does his work for him. He vows, of course, that he will never let himself get in another mess like this.

It is probably true, however, that despite the very proper end-of-story moral, many discerning children are going to think that he didn't have a very bad scheme.

The adjective "frisky" fits the pictures as well as the text.

A CAP FOR MUL CHAND. By Julie Forsyth Batchelor. Illustrated by Corinne V. Dillon. Harcourt Brace. $2. 7 to 10.

MOST BOYS in a small Indian village do not have caps; but Mul Chand had been invited by his uncle to visit him in Bombay, and he felt he must have one to go to the big city. He worked hard, with the loyal assistance of his little brother, Bantu, to earn eight annas to buy a cap, but just when he had enough money, the school bully, Lazar, snatched it from him.

The story is well told, and the background of simple Indian life is strongly felt.

Mul Chand is the universal small boy, however, and so his personal experiences are far from uneventful and come to a climax when he saves the shopkeeper's life and is rewarded with the coveted cap. Corinne Dillon's illustrations are excellent and keep pace with the story.

DIESEL-ELECTRIC 4030. Written and illustrated by Henry Billings. Viking. 36 pp. $2.50.

HENRY BILLINGS rode the cab of New York Central's Pacemaker from Harmon to Albany, N. Y., before doing this book. He had 8-year-olds in mind when writing it, but their big brothers, fathers and uncles will also enjoy "Diesel-Electric 4030," a story that is not only entertaining but crammed with information about the operation of trains.

PLAY WITH TREES. By Millicent E. Selsam. Morrow. 64 pp. Ill. $2.

THIS "Morrow Junior Book" is a primer on trees that is both entertaining and instructive. It not only tells how to distinguish one tree from another, but how to plant and grow tree seeds and how to make leaf collections. The many, clear pictures by Fred F. Scherer aid in the easy understanding of the subject.

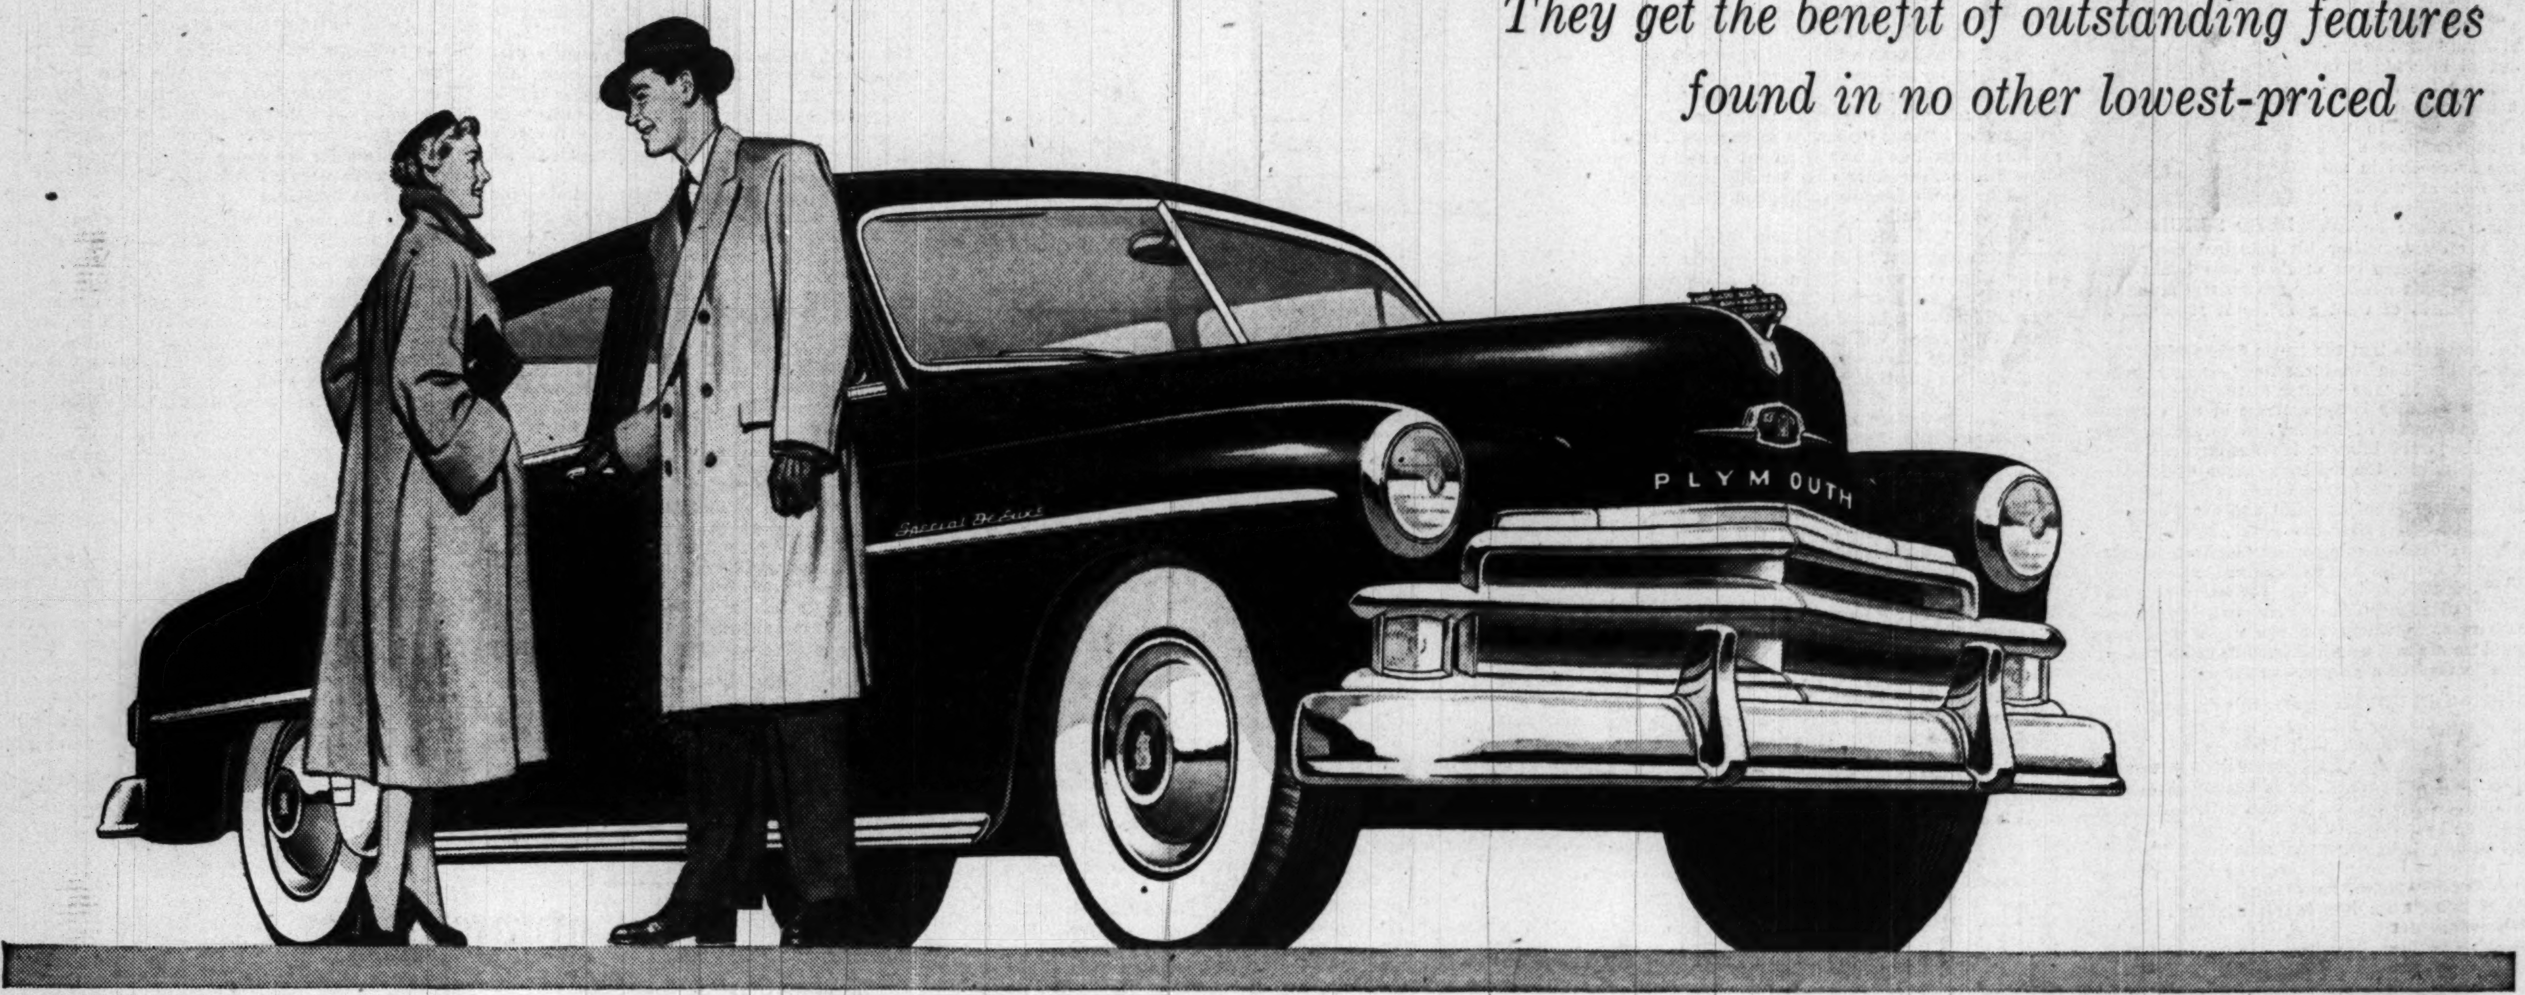
PLYMOUTH OWNERS ARE IN A CLASS BY THEMSELVES

They get the benefit of outstanding features found in no other lowest-priced car

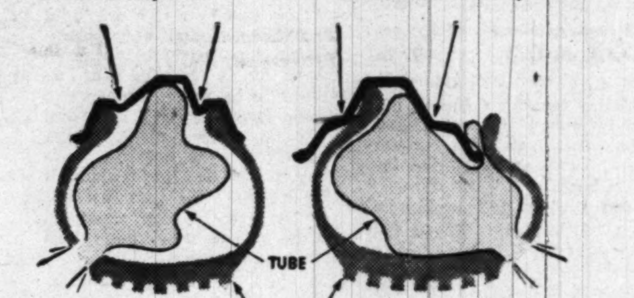


SAFETY-RIM WHEELS

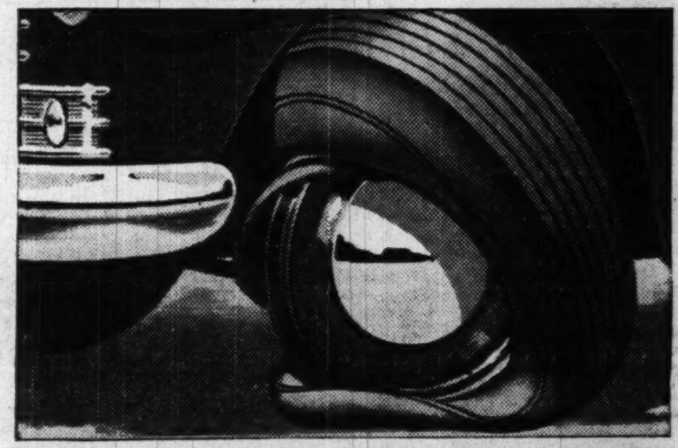
This patented feature gives Plymouth owners positive protection from the danger of blowouts.

SAFETY-RIM WHEEL Protective ridges hold tire on Safety-Rim.

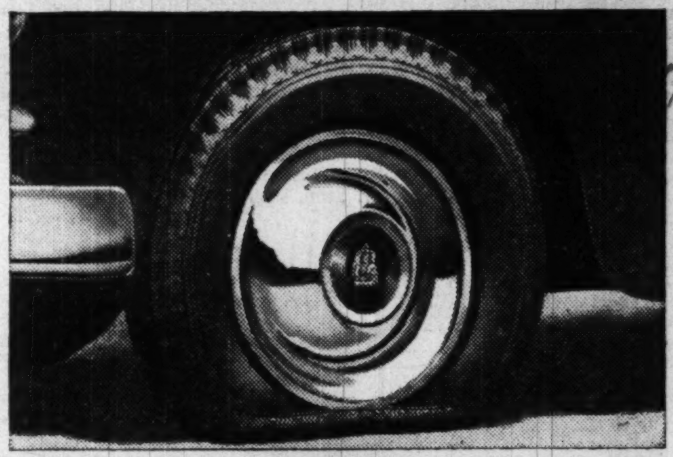
CONVENTIONAL WHEEL No protective ridges to hold tire on ordinary rim.



When a tire on the conventional rim gives way, you get this. The deflated tire twists and whips, sets up a drag on the steering wheel—may come off and may throw your car completely out of control.



When a tire on the Plymouth Safety-Rim Wheel gives way, you get this. The deflated tire is locked firmly to the rim, enabling you to bring your car to a sure, safe, straight-line stop. You have complete control of your car.

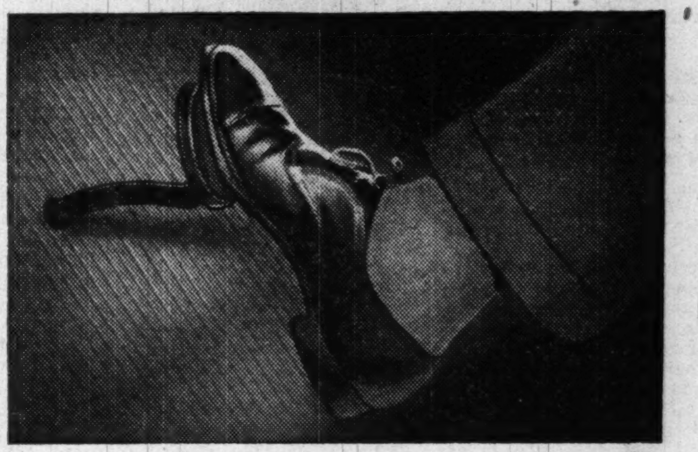


NO OTHER LOWEST-PRICED CAR—ONLY PLYMOUTH—GIVES YOU THIS VITALLY IMPORTANT PROTECTION

SAFE-GUARD HYDRAULIC BRAKES

When a Plymouth owner steps on the brake pedal with a certain pressure, he knows exactly what to expect. That's because Plymouth braking is consistent and precisely predictable.

Plymouth brakes have a total of six hydraulic brake cylinders (four in the front brakes and two in the rear brakes). This places most of the braking action on the front wheels where the most braking is needed. Each of the other two leading lowest-priced cars has only four brake cylinders.



NO OTHER LOWEST-PRICED CAR—ONLY PLYMOUTH—GIVES YOU THE SURE, SMOOTH STOPS OF SAFE-GUARD HYDRAULIC BRAKES

CHAIR-HEIGHT SEATS

When Plymouth owners go motoring, they sit in a natural position with a clearer, closer view of the road. That's because Plymouth is the only lowest-priced car with chair-height seats. You don't slump down on your spine with knees drawn high.

IGNITION-KEY STARTING

Just turn the key—that's all. The ignition is on—the engine is running—the automatic choke is operating—all at once! No starter button or choke to fumble with—no flooding or stalling of the engine.

ALSO, ONLY PLYMOUTH—in the lowest-priced field—GIVES YOU:

The brilliant performance of 97-horsepower engine with 7.0 to 1 compression ratio (highest among the three leading lowest-priced cars) . . . the smoothness of Floating Power, gently cradling the engine in live rubber . . . and many other exclusive advantages.

When service is required, Plymouth owners are in a class by themselves here, too. For Plymouth dealers offer the expert skill of some of the most highly-trained specialists in the industry. Thousands of these men are enrolled in Plymouth's Master Technicians Service Conference. Whether you are looking for a new car, a used car, or for superior service, your nearby Plymouth dealer is a good man to know.

Plymouths are famous for delivering dependable, day-in-and-day-out transportation. That's why—of all standard-built cars used as taxicabs today—there are more Plymouths than all other makes combined!

Terps' Late Power Overcomes G.W., 23-7

ANDY DAVIS OF GW FUMBLES, BALL IS KICKED, FINALLY POUNCED ON BY MARYLANDER'S ELMER WINGATE (51).

Colonials Worn Down After Great 7-7 Stand

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

For one half, fiercely determined George Washington fought mighty Maryland to a 7-7 standstill yesterday—but the strain was too great.

The outmanned Colonials grudgingly yielded two touchdowns and a safety in the second half and lost to Jim Tatum's superior forces, 23-7, at Byrd Stadium before 18,272 spectators.

It was a decisive victory for the Terps, who had to earn it without the services of their No. 1 quarterback, Jack Scarbath, and with only limited help from Bob Ward, their candidate for All-America guard. Both had shoulder injuries.

Bob DeStefano, an inexperienced 19-year-old sophomore from Providence, R. I., stepped into Scarbath's shoes easily, with a smart job of play-calling, ball-handling and passing.

Touchdown Pass

He passed 37 yards to Stan Karnash for Maryland's first touchdown and looped a 3-yarder to Bob (Shoo Shoo) Shemonski for the second. Joe Petruzzo set up the third Terrapin score in the fourth period with a dazzling 44-yard runback to G. W.'s 6 after he intercepted an Andy Davis pass. Ed Fullerton rammed over from the 3.

With darkness descending and rain pelting the field, Maryland got a safety in the last period as GW.'s John Shullenbarger slipped in his end zone and Ray Krouse fell on him.

After spotting the Terps their first touchdown, the Colonials struck back on the passing of Davis and the tricky scooting of 150-pound Bino Barreira. In six plays, they lit 79-yards to the Maryland one.

There, with the Terps holding for two downs Fred Samuelson, a raw-boned 210 pound converted center, was moved into the fullback spot. He piled into the middle of Maryland's line, was stopped, but just barely managed to stick his left foot into the end zone before being driven back to the five. It was a touchdown.

Ward played a lot on defense, but sat it out most of the time Maryland had the ball. However, the Terps weren't wanting for good linemen.

Tackle Dick Modzelewski, dubbed "Little Mo" in deference to his older brother Halfback Ed (Mighty Mo), played a whale of a defensive game as did line backer

Illini Whip Michigan, 7-0

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 4 (AP).—A 6-yard pass from Fred Major to Tony Klimek gave Illinois a 7-0 Big Ten win over Michigan today in a swirling snowstorm before 90,000 chilled spectators.

The crowd saw Illinois brand itself the hottest Rose Bowl prospect in the Western Conference.

The win gave Illinois a record of two conference victories against a lone defeat by Wisconsin. The Illini have Iowa, ineligible Ohio State and Northwestern still to play. The defeat gave Michigan a record of a win, a loss and a tie and virtually eliminated the Wolverines from Rose Bowl consideration.

With the gridiron converted into a skating rink by the steady snow and below-freezing temperature, Illinois worked smoothly for its touchdown, rolling 80 yards in 12 plays, all on the ground, except

Texas Noses SMU, 23-20; Bears Trip Huskies, 14-7

Longhorns Knock Mustangs From Ranks of Unbeaten

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 4 (AP).—Texas arose from the bitterness of five heartbreak years today to knock down Southern Methodist, the Nation's No. 1 team, 23-20, and roar savagely to the pinnacle of the Southwest Conference.

The great Longhorn line battered the Methodists from goal line to goal line and Ben Tompkins, the ace Texas T quarterback, fought fire with fire—the forward pass—as Texas stopped the great Kyle Rote's running and hampered Flingin' Freddie Benners when the chips were down.

Benners was great, his passing carrying the Methodists to all three of their touchdowns, but he was taken care of as never before by the terrific charging Texas ends and tackles. At the finish Texas was still magnificent and Southern Methodist was a battered and weary crew.

Texas, rated No. 7 in the national Association Press poll, committed few mistakes; Southern Methodist made plenty. Never before had SMU dropped so many

California Aerials Explode Washington Rose Bowl Hope

SEATTLE, Nov. 4 (AP).—A meaty, mighty California Bear crushed Don Heinrich and the Rose Bowl hopes of Washington today, flashing unexpected passing power to earn a 14-to-7 Pacific Coast Conference football victory before a record crowd of 55,000.

Two grinding touchdown drives by California in the second and third quarters each stretching just under 65 yards sapped the Washington strength and got the Bears over their toughest hurdle to date in the march toward the conference crown and the Rose Bowl.

Rocked into groginess, Washington still had enough left for a late game, 81-yard march that finally ended when Pete Groger stole the ball out of Heinrich's hand on the California 2-yard line. line.

It was the second key play by the big California center who had intercepted a Heinrich pass to check a second quarter drive.

Huge, loose-limbed Les Richter, 225-pound California guard, spent the afternoon rushing and crush-

Sooners Win, Set Record

BOULDER, Colo., Nov. 4 (AP).—Oklahoma's great football wrecking crew ran into fierce resistance from a courageous Colorado team today, but the Sooners slashed through, 27-18, to set a modern-day gridiron record of 27 consecutive victories.

The Sooners, who haven't tasted defeat since the first game of the 1948 season, got a scare in the first period when Colorado's brazen Buffaloes crashed to the first touchdown, and Oklahoma didn't

Irish Defeat Navy, 19-10

CLEVELAND, Nov. 4.—Against a hard-hitting Navy team and a harder driving, bone-chilling rain, Notre Dame bounced back twice today to outpoint the Middies, 19-10, before 71,074 spectators who were as rugged as the players themselves.

The near capacity Municipal Stadium crowd — 13,000 ticket holders didn't show up—stayed to the bitter end of the bitter battle despite the near-freezing temperature and the incessant rain which fell harder and harder as the fight got fiercer and fiercer.

Playing their best game of a season which so far netted only one victory in six tries, the Middies commanded the situation twice, 7-0 and 10-7, only to have Quarterback Bob Williams and Fullback Jack Landry blight their hopes of upsetting a Notre Dame

High Tickets Go On Sale

Tickets go on sale Tuesday for Washington's big Interhigh Football Championship Game the night of November 24, at Griffith Stadium. The city's big community party to help raise fund for school athletic equipment is sponsored by The Washington Post, Board of Education and Touchdown Club.

McKinley Tech, which has finished first or second in the public high series for the past five seasons, lost no time in assuring its participation in the 1950 classic. The Trainers whipped Roosevelt, 25-0, Friday to clinch the Group II title.

The Group I race is still a wide open affair with Eastern and Anacostia given the best chance, and Western an outside chance.

A colorful pregame and half-time program is already a certainty with the Quantico commandant, Marine band and drill team all contributing.

Places where tickets will be sold are: The Washington Post, 1337 E st. nw.; Touchdown Club, 1414 Eye st. nw.; Champion Sports, 816 13th st. nw.; Sports Center, 8th and D sts. ne.; Fairway Sports, 1328 G st. nw.; and the public high schools.

Army Unveils a New Star, Tramples Penn, 28-13

Filipski Scores Twice On Runs of 29, 73 Yds.

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 4.—Army fetched a new weapon from its football arsenal today, a sophomore halfback named Eugene Filipski with long-range fire-power, and reduced Penn to a 28-13 victim before 78,000 fans in Franklin Field.

Harrassed by a Penn team that was threatening its 25-game defeatless streak, Army sprang Filipski on the Quakers in the second half. The young man from Sacramento, Calif., a third-string left halfback until today, scampered through tackle for 29 yards and one touchdown, then fled 73 yards for another.

His gallops were the difference, in a game that saw Penn holding the Cadets to a 7-6 lead at the end of the first half. In the five times Filipski carried the ball, he accounted for 118 of the 282 yards Army rolled up all day in 55 running attempts.

Unbeaten Army was bucking hard today for restoration to the No. 1 ranking nationally, and virtually immobilized Penn's biggest weapon—Reds Bagnell's passing. The Cadets threw up ack-ack and interceptors that destroyed Bagnell as a striking force in the air.

They knocked down the first pass Bagnell threw, intercepted the second one, and thus served notice that Penn was meeting a new kind of opposition. The Quaker red-head who had none of his 87 passes intercepted in previous games, saw Army defenders drag down three of his heaves in the first half. He completed only three of the 11 he threw.

Penn threw up what amounted to virtually an eight-man line against Army's running game with the backers-up playing close and it paid off in a couple of spots with jarring tackles that created Army fumbles. Twice the Quakers marched to touchdowns after recovering the ball.

Bagnell engineered Penn's first touchdown after Allan Power recovered a fumble by Jim Cain on Army's 32—Adams ate up big chunks on a pair of reverses into the Army tackles, and Fullback Alan Corbo got the last half foot in a smack at center.

But when Herb Agocs fluffed the try for extra point with a kick that was low and wide, Penn trailed, 7-6.

From another Army fumble by Gil Stephens that Roberts recovered on the Army 36, Penn launched its second touchdown drive and got solidly back in the ball game in the opening minutes of the fourth quarter. Bagnell swung around right end for the last four yards with the help of Adams' block on Beck, and the Quakers hauled themselves up to a 21-13 score.

Filipski then cracked the game wide open mid-way of the last

Bucks Score 2 Quickies, Then Coast

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 4 (AP).—Ohio State's quick striking Buckeyes fell off their 45-point pace but still brushed aside fumble-stricken Northwestern, 32-0.

The Bucks, who have been touchdown crazy since an opening 32-27 loss to Southern Methodist, moved to their fourth successive Big Ten win after a 13-point blitz in the first 2:24 minutes of play.

A homecoming crowd of 50,000 at Dyche Stadium saw the Wildcats churn to plenty of yardage but fail to score, mainly because of five fumbles, all of which they lost.

It was perhaps because Ohio State scored their first two touchdowns with such ridiculous ease that the Buckeyes seemed to plod more than prance most of this chill, windy afternoon.

Halfback Karl Sturtz raced 94 yards with Northwestern's game-opening kickoff to the Wildcat 4. Three plays later and with the game only 1:20 old, Chuck Gandee banged across the half-yard stripe.

The touchdown that broke Northwestern's back, however, came 64 seconds later.

Northwestern's Rich Athan fumbled and Ohio State recovered on Northwestern's 44. On the next play, Walt Klevay broke through the Wildcat line and raced 44 yards to score. Vic Janowicz, who had his usual busy, if not sensational day, booted the first of his two successful extra points in five tries to give Ohio State a 13-0 lead. And the game could have ended right there as far as the outcome was concerned.

Just as in last week's 83-21 massacre of Iowa, Ohio State's scoring was widespread. Five different players figured in as many different Buckeye touchdowns spread over all four quarters.

Ohio's third touchdown came in the second period on a 14-yard pass from Janowicz to Quarterback Tony Curillo. In the third period, End Sherman Gandee intercepted a pass to the flank by Northwestern's Dick Flowers and streaked 30 yards for a touchdown.

The fifth and final buck score came late in the last period as Fred Bruney smashed one yard for a touchdown to cap a 55-yard Ohio State drive.

Statistically, Northwestern more than held its own, outgaining the Bucks in first downs, 19 to 16, and in total yardage, 372 to 323.

Rice, Nebraska Win Close Ones

Baylor Beats TCU, 20-14

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 4 (AP). Baylor University swept game Texas Christian University out of the Southwest Conference football race here today, 20-14.

Baylor got its attack going in the second period. Baylor's Jim Jeffrey took a flat pass from Larry Isbell for a 13-yard scoring play.

Hank Dickerson's kick was good. The Bears scored again with more than eight minutes left in the third quarter as Richard Parma plunged over from the 1-yard line.

Then TCU drove back 71 yards in 12 plays, and hard-running Bobby Jack Floyd counted for the Horned Frogs.

In the fourth quarter Baylor roared back, the payoff a 23-yard dash by Halfback Buddy Parker, to clinch the game.

Randolph-Macon Wins 4th Straight

ASHLAND, Va., Nov. 4 (AP)—A pair of Randolph-Macon College backs—Lawrence Shiflett and Ted Keller—running behind a scrappy front wall, paced the Yellow Jackets here today to a 20-0 victory over Atlantic Christian College.

It was the fourth straight victory for Paul Sevein's charges and he used every player on the bench.

Owls Halt Texas Tech Rally, 13-7; Missouri Beaten, 40-34

Regier Juggles Deciding Pass

LINCOLN, Nebr., Nov. 4 (AP).—Nebraska whipped Missouri, 40 to 34 in a homecoming Big Seven football game here today that had a capacity crowd absolutely hysterical as the Nebraskans came from behind three times.

Defense was absolutely forgotten. It was more a matter of one team kicking off, the other team scoring and then the process being reversed. Sensational plays were piled one upon another.

The touchdown that put Nebraska in front to stay was sensational—yet, in a way, only typical of this game.

Nebraska was trailing, 26 to 27, as the fourth period started, with the ball on the Nebraska 45. Fran Nagle passed and Bobby Reynolds ran until Nebraska reached the 15-yard line. Nagle then drifted back and rifled the ball toward End Dick Regier over the goal line. Regier hit the tremendously hard-thrown ball into the air with one hand, then turned and caught it as it came down. Reynolds' place kick then put Nebraska in the lead 33 to 27.

There followed within two minutes the play that was to lock up the win for Nebraska.

Nebraska had the ball on the Missouri 33. It was fourth down and a yard to go. The hand-off was to Reynolds for a wide sweep. He started out around the Missouri left side. He was trapped, forced to turn back. Then Reynolds saw daylight, turned on the speed, swept back toward the left the way he had started and zigzagged down the field for his third touchdown.

This dizzy game started off on an odd note with only three officials. This was because A. L. Haskins of Oklahoma City, who was scheduled to referee, failed to get here. The reason for Haskins' nonappearance was not known here.

Missouri	7	7	13	7—34

Riggs Speeds 31, 51 Yards for Scores

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 4 (AP).—Crippled Rice snuffed out a Texas Tech threat in the closing seconds today for a 13-to-7 victory after speedster Tedy Riggs had given the Owls a two-touchdown first-half lead.

Rice took over the ball on downs on its 3-yard line with 10 seconds to play as a 17-yard, fourth down pass was short by two yards for a Tech first down.

With two of its first string players watching the game from the bench, Rice did not make a serious threat after Riggs, a 172-pound junior halfback, made quick opening touchdown runs of 31 and 51 yards in the first and second periods.

After a fumble and a fourth down incomplete pass had ended threats inside the Rice 10 yard line, Tech got back in the game in the third quarter as Fullback J. W. Thompson scored from the 1 to climax a 44-yard drive.

Navy Sailors Take Lead in Dinghy Regatta

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 4 (AP).—Navy placed one point ahead of Princeton sailors to take the initial lead in the freshman championship Middle, Atlantic Intercollegiate Dinghy Sailing Association meet today.

A heavy rain squall rose up during the third race and four dinghies capsized, heaving captains and crews overboard.

The George Washington University craft was manned by two girls, Kay Thompson and Lorenz Schrend, who came through with spirits undampened—though nothing else.

Colleges and points in order of standing:

American Loses Soccer

Batlimore University defeated Catholic University, 5-0, yesterday in a Mason-Dixon conference soccer match on the American field. Norman Hart anad Stan Rostek scored two goals each and Frank Bellusci one.

Tulsa Jolts Okla. Aggies

TULSA, Okla., Nov. 4 (AP).—Tulsa got a first-half jump on Oklahoma A. and M., then withstood a late comeback by the Aggies to register a 27-13 Missouri Valley Conference football triumph today.

The victory before 15,315 persons gave Tulsa's Golden Hurricane second place in the conference standings and made its game here November 18 with Wichita the one which will decide the championship.

Tulsa ran rings around the Cowpokes in the first half, scoring three times, but was hard-pressed to halt their traditional rivals' fourth-quarter surge. The game ended with A. and M. on Tulsa's 3-yard-line.

Temple Romps Over Delaware

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4 (AP). Paced by Gene Caterina, Temple's once-beaten, once-tied football Owls romped to a 39-0 victory over the University of Delaware today.

Caterina, 155-pound scatback from Vineland, N. J., produced two scores in the first quarter and set up another in the final period.

Grandelius Paces State In 35-0 Win

EAST LANSING, Mich., Nov. 4 (U.P.).—Michigan State's powerhouse that a snowstorm and Indiana couldn't stall, slamemd to a 35 to 0 victory over the Hoosiers today behind the three-touchdown spark of Everett (Sonny) Grandelius.

Some 45,237 chilled fans braved frigid weather and intermittent snow to watch the Spartans power to their fourth straight win and sixth victory of the season.

Grandelius amassed 177 of State's 339 rushing yardage on his scoring sprees. One run was a 25-yard scamper and another took him 16 yards through Indiana's secondary.

Indiana's star sophomore passer, Lou D'Achille, was kept in check by State's secondary which intercepted four passes, one by line-backer Ed Timmerman who raced 60 yards to score Michigan State's final touchdown just seconds before the game ended.

D'Achille threw 32 passes and completed 13 for 159 yards.

Indiana's Sam Winston fumbled the slippery ball on the opening kickoff and Michigan State slammed 39 yards to its first touchdown before the game was three minutes old. Grandelius went over from 16 yards out behind perfect interference. He scored again later in the first period after a 53-yard Michigan State march.

An Indiana fumble by D'Achille was recovered by Michigan State on Indiana's 34 early in the third period setting up the Spartan's third touchdown. Fullback Roy Crane went over on a 7-yard drive.

Another pass interception by Thomas at midfield gave Michigan State its fourth marker a few seconds later. Grandelius went the last 25 yards.

American Trackmen Beat South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, Nov. 4 (AP).—A team of American athletes defeated a squad from the Union of South Africa in a track and field meet here today. The Americans captured 10½ out of 14 events.

Fortune Gordien of the San Francisco Olympic Club again broke the South African shot-put record with a toss of 52 feet 8¼ inches. The old mark was 51 feet 7 inches. Gordien also broke the South African discuss mark with a throw of 168 feet 11 inches.

Iowa Checks Minnesota; Wisconsin Laces Purdue

61,000 See Hawkeyes Blank Gophers, 13-0

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 4 (AP).—Iowa's Hawkeyes, massacred by Ohio State last week, rebounded against Minnesota today to whip the Gophers, 13-0, in a big Ten football game before 61,217.

The grim Hawkeyes put a firm stopper on Minnesota's ground and aerial game.

Iowa used plunges and end runs to tally their initial counter late in the first period. Then, just as the third period closed they combined passes and an end run for the second.

Only once, early in the fourth period, did the Gophers show any signs of getting their attack working. That fizzled out with a fumble, recovered by Iowa on its own 17-yard line.

To hard-working right halfback Jerry Faske fell the task of counting first for Iowa.

Faske combined with Left Half Bernard Bennett and Fullback Bill Reichardt on plunges and end runs to put the ball on the Minnesota 11-yard line. Faske then went through a wide hole on the right side of the line to the 1-foot line. He scored on the next play.

With about a minute to play in the third period, Quarterback Glenn Drahn started throwing the ball. A pass to Left End Dick Meyer put the ball on the Minnesota 22. Right Half Bob Wilson drove to the 20. Reichardt added three yards and then Bennett raced around his right end and through half the Gophers to score. Reichardt converted.

The loss left the Gophers still seeking their first victory. After a weak start with losses to Washington, Nebraska, Northwestern and Ohio State, they held Michigan to a 7-7 tie last week.

Badgers Start Rolling In Last 2 Quarters

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 4 (AP).—Wisconsin, held in check in the first half, exploded in the last two quarters to push Purdue deeper into the Big Ten cellar today, 33 to 7.

Purdue looked good in the first half as it held the Badgers to a 7-to-7 score. But the Boilermakers faded and in the final period it was all Wisconsin.

The win, before a homecoming crowd of 45,000, was Wisconsin's fifth in six games this year and its fourth Big Ten victory. The Badgers have lost only to Michigan.

The Badgers scored after a pass interception had given them the ball deep in Purdue territory in the first quarter. Purdue knotted the count in the second period on a 79-yard march.

Roy Burks, Wisconsin halfback, broke the deadlock early in the third period when he hurdled left tackle and raced 80 yards to pay dirt. John Coatta's conversion put the Badgers in front, 14-7.

A fumble by Dale Samuels of Purdue on the Wisconsin 16, recovered by John Simcic, Badger guard, led to another score. It came on a 13-yard pass from John Coatta to Bob Mansfield. The extra point kick failed and Wisconsin led, 20-7, at the end of the third quarter.

Wisconsin went 40 yards, mostly on Coatta's passes, for another score early in the final period. The fifth Wisconsin touchdown came after a 50-yard march. Mansfield's running and Bob Petruska's passes moved the ball to the 3. Bill Schlesner went over for the touchdown.

Purdue	0	7	0	0— 7

Touchdowns—Strehlow, Burks, Mansfield, Hammond, Schlesner, Schmidt. Points after touchdowns—Coatta (3), Samuels.

Bolling Beats Eglin, 6-0

Fullback Rieman Rheinhart's 6-yard scamper to pay-dirt climaxed an 84-yard drive late in the fourth period to give Mush Dubofsky's Bolling Flyers a 6-0 victory over Eglin Field of Florida at Bolling before 1500 rainsoaked fans.

Only 55 seconds remained when Rheinhart took a pitchout from Quarterback Johnny Martinez and scooted around his own right end into the end zone untouched.

It was Rheinhart and Halfback Art Hage who spearheaded the long drive with several sparkling jaunts together with a four-down aerial from Martinez to Bob Nicholes that covered 23 yards and kept the drive going. The victory was Bolling's fourth of the season.

Hagerstown Hands Blair 7th Loss in Row, 20-0

Montgomery Blair High lost its seventh straight game, 20-0, to Hagerstown yesterday at Blair. The victors scored on a 55-yard run through the middle, an 8-yard jaunt around end and a 50-yard gallop with a recovered fumble.

Patuxent Beats Wilson, 23-0, for Seventh in Row

Patuxent Naval Air Test Center remained in the unbeaten class yesterday by defeating Wilson Teachers, 23-0. It was Patuxent's seventh straight victory.

Joe Plachecki scored a touchdown on a three-yard plunge and Don Derflinger blocked a punt for a safety and Patuxent scored nine points in the first period.

Patuxent went over for 14 points in the fourth quarter. Fred Junker caught a pass that was deflected by a Wilson defender and ran 18 yards for a touchdown. Plachecki later plunged across from the one for his second score of the day.

Charlotte Hall Wins Sixth Straight, 20-8

SPRING GROVE, Pa., Nov. 4.—Charlotte Hall Military Academy of Mechanicsville, Md. chalked up its sixth straight triumph by defeating St. Francis, 20-8, here today. Dave Kline scored two touchdowns for the victors, and Bill Keen one.

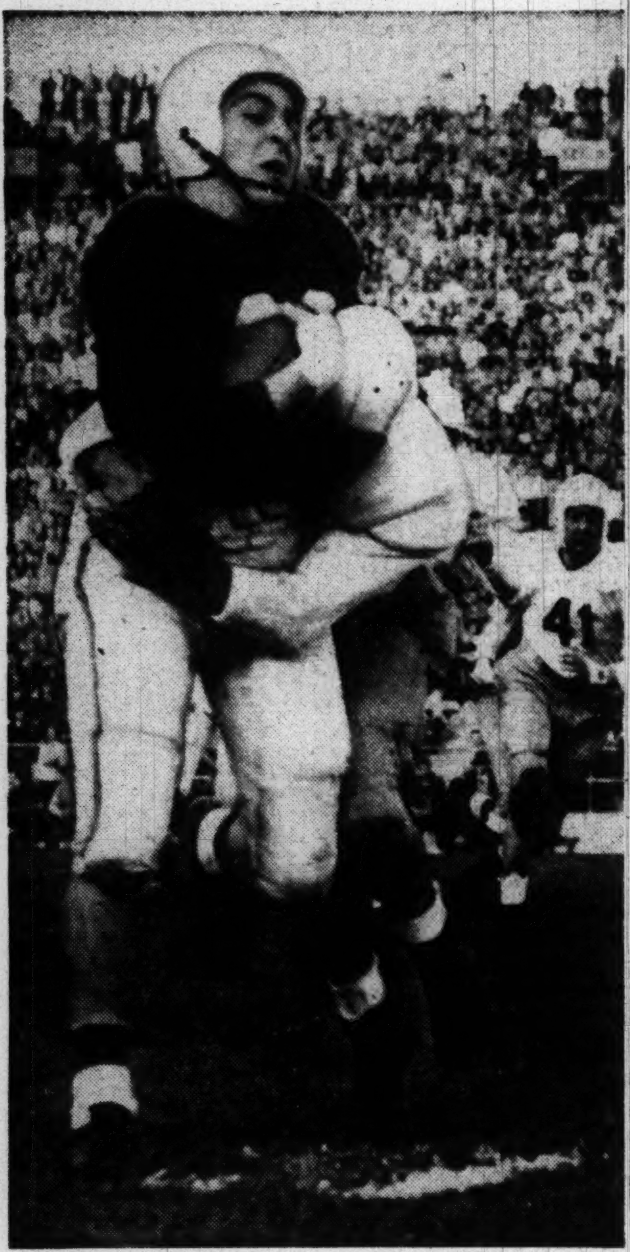
Fabled Terps Come to Life, Outrun Colonials



Fast Stepper— Bob DeStefano, playing in the place of Jack Scarbath, was the outstanding player for Maryland yesterday. Here he steps off 5 yards in the first quarter before being downed by Jim Kline, of George Washington. Other G.W. men ready to bring down the ball carrier are Frank Continetti and Tom Flyzik

Terps Second Half Attack Routs GW

Jake Rowden, who were in Davis' hair all afternoon.

To those folks who have disregarded the startling records compiled by Davis in three years; to those who said Davis couldn't go against a rough top-notch team, yesterday's game was an eye-opener.

He completed 10 out of 22 passes for 130 yards, and picked up 12 more running with the ball. He was a cat on defense, knocking down three passes, intercepting another, recovering a fumble and making jarring tackles.

His aerials set up the only G. W. touchdown. And in the early moments of the fourth quarter when the Colonials were down by only 14-7, he whipped them up again to a 43-yard drive which finally ended with G. W. exhausted and out of gas on Maryland's 3.

The Crowd Loved It

Barreira, a cocky little soph from Hudson, Mass., was the darling of the crowd with his pass catching, ball carrying and pass interception.

In the second quarter, he caught a Davis pass at scrimmage, ran 10 yards to his right, faked Maryland's John Idzik on his face and ran the gain up to 34 yards.

Another time, he defied the touted left side of Maryland's line, smashing in head first, ducking and side-stepping and picking up 24 yards. The fans loved it.

There were other heroic figures in G. W.'s defeat—like those three sophomore tackle-guards, Bob Gutt, Frank Continetti and Tom Flyzik, and seniors Charles Gunner and Jimmy Kline, who rushed in to hold Shemonski, Mighty Mo and DeStefano to a net ground gain of 75 yards.

The defeat was G. W.'s third straight. The Colonials have a 3-4 record with Furman and Georgetown to be faced in the next two weeks. Maryland has a 5-2 record, with North Carolina and Virginia Tech to be met.

The game's first 5 minutes were played around the slippery midfield. Then at G. W.'s 44, DeStefano set the Terps' first scoring drive in motion. He picked up 11 by himself on a keeper play.

After being pushed back to the 37 on two plays, DeStefano threw a long one to Karnash who eluded Davis at the goal line and scored. Bob Deane made his first of three extra points.

G. W. tied it at 7-all in the second quarter with an 80-yard drive. Davis to Barreira was good for 34 yards. Davis to Bill Szanyi moved it to Maryland's 26.

Davis then aimed one at Charlie Jones, but the Colonial end was held up by Idzik, interference was called, and G. W. had first down on the one. The Colonials couldn't budge the Terps in two plays, and then Samuelson was called in. He scored and John Shullenbarger converted.

Terps March to Goal

The Colonials were clinging tenaciously to the tie when the clever DeStefano unlimbered his passing arm and the Terps went 43 yards to score.

DeStefano hit Shemonski for five yards, let Shemonski pick up a first down on the GW 33 and then cut loose again. He spotted Karnash between G. W.'s Kline Davis and Mike Sileo, and hit the big end for a first down on the eight. At the three, DeStefano looped one high to Shemonski who beat defender Sileo to it for the tie-breaking touchdown.

Davis tried to get G.W.'s back up early in the last quarter. His passes to Szanyi for 20 yards and to Butler for 13, put the ball on the Terps' 3. On the fourth down, Andy aimed one at Jones, but the ball sailed over Charlie's head.

After that, the Colonials were dead ducks. When they got the ball, they had to pass. Maryland knew it and was prepared. So it was that Petruzzo picked a Davis pass out of the air and raced 44 yards to set up the last Maryland touchdown at G. W.'s 6. Fullerton went over from the three and it was 21-7.

The touchdown signaled the arrival of a terrific rainstorm and the two teams were sliding and fumbling all over the place. Barreira bobbled the ensuing kickoff and Ed Kensler recovered for Maryland at G. W.'s 17. Then Davis intercepted a DeStefano pass on the G. W. one.

On the next play Shullenbarger went back in punt formation, started to pass, and slipped. Krouse fell on him, and it was a two-pointer for the Terps.

The rain stopped at this point and so did the scoring.

Nifty— Bob Shemonski couldn't ask for better blocking than he got on this run in the third quarter of the Maryland-George Washington game at Byrd Stadium yesterday. His Maryland mates are really tearing down the opposition. Shemonski gained 8 yards before he was run out of bounds by the Colonials. Maryland won as expected by a 23 to 7 score after G.W. put up a stirring battle in the first half

Giants Rated Over Redskins By 10 Points

By a Post Reporter

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—With Sammy Baugh back in the driver's seat as the result of an injury last Sunday to Harry Gilmer, the Washington Redskins clash with the New York Giants in the Polo Grounds here tomorrow.

Despite the presence of the old passing master, the Giants, who Pittsburgh at Philadelphia.

San Francisco at Los Angeles.
Washington at New York Giants.

beat the Redskins earlier in the season, 21-17, are 10-point favorites to do it again and run the the Washington losing streak to six straight.

Whether Gilmer, who injured his right shoulder playing defense against the Eagles last Sunday, will see action won't be determined until just before game time by Coach Herman Ball.

Gilmer didn't throw a ball all week long in practice, but if his shoulder isn't too stiff he'll be thrown into the breach against the Giants, who were knocked out of a tie for the American Conference lead by the Chicago Cardinals last Sunday.

Baugh, who had three passes backfire on him for as many Eagle touchdowns in 2½ minutes last Sunday, has been directing the Redskins' all week with Nick Sebek, recalled when Gilmer was injured, used only sparingly. It is doubtful if the rookie quarterback from Indiana will see action at all.

Since last meeting the Redskins, the Giants have beaten the Cleveland Browns again, but also have been licked by Pittsburgh and the Cardinals to tumble into second place with four wins and two losses.

The Redskins are not only seeking their second win of the season here tomorrow, but may also be fighting to keep Coach Herman Ball's job. Earlier in the week, President George Marshall of the Redskins implied that unless the Redskins win, and in a hurry, there would be some changes made.

Tufts 22-20 Win Ends Amherst's 16-Game Streak

AMHERST, Mass., Nov. 4 (AP). Coach John McLaughry's undefeated streak at Amherst was snapped at 16 games today as Tufts cashed in on a last period safety to squeeze out a 22-to-20 victory.

The two points that gave Tufts the margin of victory came in the final quarter when Amherst quarterback Bob Davidson was trapped behind his goal line as he attempted to pass.

Maryland Park Beats Annapolis, 7-6

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 4.—A placement by Bob Thompson, following a second period touchdown, enabled Maryland Park to beat Annapolis High School, 7-6, here today.

The winner's touchdown came on Johnny Carlucci's pass to Ray Chilton covering 9 yards.

Annapolis' six points came in the fourth quarter. Pat Clark passed to Don Como, and Como lateraled to Charley Hortopan. The play covered 33 yards. Clark's pass attempt for the conversion was incomplete.

Caps Lose To Lakers; 27 for Mikan

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

The Washington Caps fell apart in the third quarter of their National Basketball Association game with the Minneapolis Lakers last night at Uline Arena and lost, 91-85, before 2,743 fans.

The Caps looked great during the first half of the game after suffering from a little buck fever against the Lakers' great George Mikan in the early minutes of play.

The Lakers grabbed a 6-1 lead in the first two and a half minutes of the game, scoring all their points on three king-sized stretches by Mikan who dunked the ball in from under the basket while the Caps gazed hopelessly on. He wound up with 27 for the night.

Earl Lloyd, the Caps rookie forward from West Virginia State, snapped the Caps out of it, however, sinking a rebound and counting a free throw.

From that point until the end of the first half, the Caps were the superior team. Chick Halbert and Don Otten alternated at covering Mikan and limited him to five points for the next 16 minutes of the game.

Mikan who made the Caps job eosier by accumulating four personal fouls in rapid succession, was taken out of the game.

Midway in the first quarter Freddie Scolari put the Caps ahead for the first time, 18-16. Kudelka, Sharmon, and Sawyer put the locals in the lead, 24-21 at the quarter.

The Caps scored 22 points to the Lakers' 18 in the second quarter to lead, 46-39, at halftime.

Minneapolis got hot and the Caps got cold in the third period and the game was lost then. Mikkelsen scored first for the Lakers. After Alan Sawyer pushed in two straight goals to make it 50-41, the Lakers went to work. At the quarter the Lakers inched forward to a 64-62 lead.

Mikan fouled out early in the last period, but the unexpected respite for the Caps failed to materialize.

St. Johns Wins, 26 to 6

St. John's Cadets, behind 6-0 at halftime, scored two touchdowns in the third quarter and two more in the fourth to defeat Bladensburg, 26-6, last night at College Park.

A 22-yard pass from John Shearer to Buddy Baumgartner, in the first three minutes of the game, put the loser ahead, 6-0, but the Cadets started toward their seventh consecutive victory early in the third period, when Fullback Tom Collins went off tackle for 8 yards and a score. Jack Daly passed to Collins for the conversion.

Joe Hands picked up a loose ball on the Bladensburg 29-yard line and raced across the goal for St. John's second touchdown, minutes later. Daley passed to Tom Clark for the extra point and the Cadets led, 14-6.

Collins ripped off 44 yards in the fourth period for the third St. John's score, and the Cadets wound up their scoring with an 8-yard pass from Bob Reese to Hands.

Kansas Downs Utah, 39-26

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 14 (AP). The Kansas Jayhawks' superior ground attack churned out a 39 to 26 football victory over the sparkling passing of Utah's Redskins today.

There was scoring in every period of the exciting game before a crowd of 13,111. The peak thrill was a 74-yard sprint by Wade Stinson, Jayhawk halfback, through the Redskin line for one of his three touchdowns.

Quarterback Dave Cunningham made Utah ever-threatening with his passing. He threw for two touchdowns and made a third himself on the ground.

Risk Pays Off

Ed Salem's Passes Give Tide 14-7 Win

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 4 (AP). Risky, but brilliant, passing by Ed Salem with a wet ball, and an intercepted pass by lumbering Guard Jesse Richardson with a minute to go gave Alabama a 14-7 victory over unbeaten Georgia today.

Georgia, a three times tied team, scored in the second quarter after recovering a fumble on the Alabama 3. From the indecisive way the heavyweight teams had been playing, that touchdown looked good enough to win.

Two Salem tosses shot Alabama into scoring position in the third quarter. Butch Avinger went across on a quarterback sneak. Late in the game, Richardson intercepted a Georgia pass on Georgia's 28 and bulled to the the 10. Tom Calvin scored four plays later for the winning touchdown.

A 64-yard Georgia kick by Pat Field set up the Bulldog's only score. Ed Salem took the ball, handed off to Larry Chiodetti on Alabama's 25. Three Georgians bulled him back to the Alabama 3, where he was tackled hard by Rocco Principe.

Payne Scores Twice as N. C. Falls, 16 to 0

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 4 (AP). Tennessee's Volunteers, playing close-to-the-vest football, turned two first-half breaks into touchdowns today and trimmed North Carolina, 16-0, for their sixth victory in seven games.

A crowd of 35,000, shivering under heavy coats and blankets, saw the hard-tackling Vols add a safety in the dying minutes of the rugged game.

Harold Payne, a 170-pound linesmasher, scored both touchdowns on short plunges in the first and second periods, each following a recovered fumble. Pat Shires, brother of one of Tennessee's great tackles of a decade ago, kicked the two extra points.

The Vols stabbed twice into North Carolina territory in the opening period before they got their opportunity. Just before the quarter ended Jimmy Hill grabbed a Tar Heel fumble on the North Carolina 34. Seven plays later Payne was over from the 1.

Midway in the second period the ball squirted out of the hands of Skeet Hesmer, North Carolina halfback, and the Vols' Bud Sherrod jumped on it on the Tar Heel 7. Payne scored on the third play.

North Carolina made its strongest bid in the third period, when little Dick Bunting took a fumble by Al Kozar and ran it 50 yards to the Vols' 31. But a penalty cost the Tar Heels yardage and they were forced to kick.

A few moments later Kozar brought the crowd to its feet with a spectacular 70-yard sprint through the open field. He was brought down from behind on the Tar Heel 7. There he fumbled and North Carolina recovered.

In the fourth period Tennessee pushed the Tar Heels back to the goal line and Dick Weiss was smeared behind the double stripe for a Vol safety.

Kentucky Beats Florida in Snow, 40-6

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 4 (AP).—Kentucky unloosed battering Bill Leskovar, scampering Wilbur Jamerson and Emery Clark to blast Florida, 40-6, in the snow and rain before 33,000 Homecoming fans here today.

Kentucky, the Nation's No. 5 college football power, struck on the fifth play from scrimmage and went on to ammas a wide 26-6 lead at the half.

The strong Kentucky line held Florida to a minus eight yards rushing while clearing the way for its backs to grind out 340 yards on the ground and another 118 in the air.

Jamerson scored twice in the first period and his mates came back with touchdown marches of 85 and 34 yards for two more scores in the second. Sub Fullback Cliff Lawson dashed 34 yards for Kentucky's fifth touchdown in the third quarter and little Harry Jones completed the route with a 13-yard dash around right end to cap a 70-yard advance in the finale.

Rutgers Trips Brown; Penn State Nips Eagles

81-Yard Pass Play Brings 14-12 Win

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 4 (AP).—Ray Vohden and Fullback Jim Monahan combined on an 81-yard pass and run play late in the last quarter today to give Rutgers a 15-12 victory over Brown in the first Hall of Fame football game.

Vohden's pass was for 26 yards and Monahan then lugged the ball 55 yards for the decisive score.

It was one of two long chance-taking aerials which the Rutgers team worked to beat Brown. The first was a 53-yard pitch from Walt Laprarie to Russ Sandblow on Rutgers' initial offensive play to set up a score. Laprarie made his long toss from his own 32 to Sandblow, who was spilled on the Brown 15. Monahan, Rutgers' most effective runner, took the ball to the 2 and Laprarie sneaked over.

Later in the first quarter, Vohden and Center Leon Root spilled Quarterback Carl Leone behind the Brown goal on a pass attempt for a safety.

Brown got back into the game early in the second period, recovering the ball on the Rutgers 19 when a pitchout with the wet ball went astray. Leone passed 17 yards to Bob McConnell for the score.

Midway through the final period Frank Powers, who had been rushing Monahan's spread formation punts consistently, finally blocked one and Brown drove to the 2. Rutgers got the ball there but Monahan's kick, again partly blocked, went only to the 20 and Leone promptly uncorked a pass to Lee Markoff for the second Bruin touchdown.

Fumble Sets Up Winning Score

BOSTON, Nov. 4 (AP).—Penn State, which had won only one game all season, handed Boston College its sixth consecutive defeat today, whipping the Eagles 20-13 before a scant 8500 damp fans in foggy Braves Field.

A BC fumble on its 18 set up what proved the winning touchdown in the third period when the Nittany Lions scored twice.

Pat McPholand, Penn State end, snatched a fumbled ball in the BC backfield in the third quarter and six plays later Paul Anders cracked over from the 4 for the score.

Penn State scored first, traveling 83 yards for a touchdown at about 4:15. A pass from Vince O'Bara to End Johnny Smidansky covered 65 yards for the score.

The Eagles scored about six minutes later after an 81-yard haul, with Ed Petela, BC's best running back, cracking over from the 6. Petela also added the seventh point which gave the Eagles a short-lived lead.

In the third period, the Pennsylvanians started from their 43 after a Boston punt and held the ball until Anders hustled 13 yards on a play off right tackle for the touchdown. Then came Anders' second "TD" after McPholand's recovery of a BC fumble. Boston scored again on a 14-yard run by Mike Nickulics five minutes before the final whistle.

Scoring by periods:

Penn State	6	0	14	0	—20
Boston College	7	0	0	6	—13

Penn State scoring: Touchdowns—Smidansky, Anders (2). Conversions—O'Bara (2).

Maloy Leads Holy Cross Over Harvard

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 4 (AP). Holy Cross' passing attack bogged down in a drizzle today but Sophomore Sharpshooter Chuck Maloy turned in two scoring sneaks to pace the Crusaders to a 26-7 victory over winless Harvard before 11,000 at the stadium.

The Crusaders tallied once in the opening period, thrice in the second and then went scoreless during the second half.

About midway through the initial session, Mel Massucco saw one of his boots fumbled by Dick Duback and recovered by Holy Cross Captain Tom Donnalley on Harvard's 45. Thereupon Maloy completed the only one of his 16 forward passes to Massucco on the Crimson's 35. Then the Crusaders launched a running attack that ended with Maloy squeezing over from the 1-foot mark.

A feeble Bob Lowenstein punt enabled Holy Cross to start driving from Harvard's 32 and early in the second period, Johnny Turco turned in a 3-yard scoring slam. Massucco contributed an 11-yard touchdown run shortly after and just before the first half ended, Maloy went over from the 1-yard line.

With a 26-0 half-time lead and assured of its first win over Harvard since 1935, Holy Cross was content to play its substitutes during most of the last two periods.

The Crimson scored in the fourth quarter, Lowenstein going over on a 7-yard run for Harvard's fourth touchdown in its five games to date.

Pitt Finally Wins One, 21-7

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 4 (AP).—The converted University of Pittsburgh Panthers won their first T-style game in the mire of Pitt Stadium today by rowing over the Mountaineers of West Virginia, 21-7.

A rain-sodden crowd of only 6125 saw the Panthers register their first victory in six 1950 starts. For the Mountaineers it was the fifth loss against two victories.

Pitt began in the opening period on the West Virginia 34 where a punt by Kent Bartges from his own end zone went out of bounds. Joe Capp and Jim Reynolds on three plays rushed to the two. Reynolds fumbled as he tumbled over the goal line and Mountaineer Kigi Konstantinos recovered on the one.

Bartges again failed to get yardage on a punt and Pitt renewed its drive from the 17. Bob Bestwick flicked a shot pass to Reynolds who splashed to a touchdown.

Later in the same period Reynolds intercepted a West Virginia pass on the Mountaineer 34 and ran to the 21 before he was pushed out of bounds. Capp sliced off left guard to the six then crashed over from the three. The next Pitt score came in the third period when Capp slipped off right guard 56 yards to scoring territory.

Tigers Claw Colgate, 45-7, For 6 in Row

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 4 (AP).—Princeton's slashing single-wing attack cut Colgate's defenses to ribbons today as the Tigers racked up their sixth straight victory by 45 to 7 to remain among the Nation's undefeated elevens.

So lethel was the Tiger assault that the score stood 25-0 after only 12 minutes of play. One of the most horrific hidings ever dealt out by an Ivy League team appeared in the making until Coach Charlie Caldwell abruptly jerked his first-string backs before the end of the first period.

Colgate, previously beaten only by Army, 28-0, was totally unable either to contain the tricky Princeton offense or to launch a sustained drive of its own until the second half, when the Tigers had relaxed the pressure. The outclassed Red Raiders did not register a first down until after the Tigers had rolled for five scores.

No single back stood out for the victors. It was strictly a team effort, and it was as deadly a thing as is likely to be seen anywhere this season.

Jack Davison, the Tiger fullback, hammered over for two touchdowns when the game still was minutes old, piercing the Colgate center for 20 yards on the second score. All the other touchdowns were singles. Bill Kleinsasser turned in the most spectacular play of the one-sided tussle when he broke away on a weaving 63-yard scoring jaunt just as the third period closed.

Culpeper Ties Falls Church

A 36-yard end run late in the second quarter by Buddy Bledsoe enabled Culpeper High to tie Falls Church, 12-12, last night at Falls Church. A 35-yard pass from Joe Trumbo to Noel Lynn had put Falls Church ahead, 12-6, earlier in the period.

Bledsoe also scored the first Culpeper touchdown on a short plunge in the first quarter. Fred Mandess scored for Falls Church in the opening period, also on a short buck.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va. Nov. 4.—Bob Shepherd's conversion following a touchdown in the last three minutes gave Western High of Washington, D. C. a 27-26 triumph over James Monroe here tonight. Shepherd's placement came after Jim Hill tied the score with a 35-yard run off tackle.

Hill also scored Western's first touchdown, when he broke loose for 54 yards in the first quarter. Ted Dayharsh and Jim Chacheris scored the other touchdowns for the visitors. Shepherd kicked all three extra points.

Hansen Goes Over to Earn 20-19 Win

By Jack Hand

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (AP).—Underdog Columbia upset Cornell's defending Ivy League champs today, 20-19, on a dramatic last period touchdown by Fullback Howie Hansen and Al Ward's conversion.

Supposed to lose by 14 points, Columbia came from behind to snatch this tingling rain-swept contest from Cornell's grasp with less than 5 minutes to go.

Trailing, 19-13, with time running out, Bob Ott squirmed atop Rocco Calvo's fumble to give Columbia its big break, on the Cornell 36.

After a Mitch Price-Don McLean pass was good for a first down on the 18, Hansen took over. Hammering the line five times in six plays he smashed over from 1 foot out.

Most of the 20,000 Baker Field customers went slightly off base as Al Ward trotted out to add the all-important winning point by placement.

Price was red hot with his passing in the first half with two touchdown throws but Cornell's Bill Scazzero, a sub for ailing Bob Engel, scampered for two scores on runs for 25 and 10 yards.

After a scoreless third period, Jeff. Fleischmann jarred over from the 1, the eighth play in a 65-yard drive, and Cornell was on top and it looked like the ball game.

A few seconds later when Frank Toner fumbled and Jim Jerome recovered for Cornell on the Columbia 28, it looked even more positive. But Columbia braced after yielding one first down and took back the ball on its 13.

Following Tony Misho's booming punt, came the break. On first play from scrimmage, Calvo was rushed so hard that he let the slippery ball squirt out of his hands. Ott fell on it.

After the Price pass it was Hansen, Hansen and more Hansen until he got the winning touchdown.

The first Columbia touchdown in the first period was a real dilly, one like you see in the movies. Price threw to Don McLean who barely ttipped the ball with his fingers, trying for a catch near the 5. The ball sailed into the end zone into the hands of Wes Bomm, watching the play.

L. S. U. Thumps Ole Miss, 40-14

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 4 (AP). Louisiana State University stomped the University of Mississippi 40-14, here tonight to score its first Southeastern Conference football victory of the season.

Halfback Billy Baggett zipped for 69 yards and 56 yards to score two of the six LSU touchdowns.

Texas A&M Sub Scores 4 TDs

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Nov. 4 (AP).—Texas A and M massacred Arkansas, 42-13, tonight and used a brilliant substitute—Yale Lary—to batter the Razorbacks into quick submission.

Four times in the first half Lary crossed the goal line and a touchdown by teammate Bob Schaeffer and five extra points by Darrow Hooper gave the Aggies a 35-0 half-time lead.

57-Yard Push Pays Off for Dartmouth

By Lou Black

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov 4 (AP). The first time Dartmouth grabbed the slippery ball, the Indians moved 57 yards to score the only touchdown of a hard-fought football battle of a 7 to 0 upset over Yale in the rain-swept bowl today.

35,000 saw Bob Tyler, 170-pound back from Niles, Mich., plunge over from the 4 in 9:06 of the opening period for the lone tally. It was the twelfth play in the game's only sustained onslaught.

The rest of the gloomy afternoon settled down to a battle between two stalwart lines with Dartmouth able to protect its margin and conquer the Boola Boola boys for the third consecutive year.

It was a costly triumph for the Hanover N. H., club which finished the game with Tyler, and two others of its stars sidelined by injuries.

The big green lost John Clayton, its ace field general and passer on the play that set up Tyler's touchdown, a 10-yard pass and run to Vin Marriott, who was dropped on the four. And in the final quarter wound up without Tyler and star punter, Dick Brown.

This thirty-fourth game between these ancient ivy league rivals in which Yale holds a 21-9 edge (four contests ended in ties) was as gloomy and dull as the sad weather. There's nothing pretty about watching a flock of big boys sliding and slipping in mud, and that was the picture.

The big difference between the clubs today was Yale's complete failure to connect with a pass in 15 tosses. Three were intercepted.

Syracuse Tops Lafayette

EASTON, Pa., Nov. 4 (AP).—Syracuse rolled up 363 yards through the air and on the ground while throwing up a tight defense in a 34-0 football victory over Lafayette before a homecoming crowd of 8000.

Lafayette was held to five first downs and minus 18 yards from scrimmage and 49 on passing. Syracuse collected 14 first downs in the first half but had to wait until the twenty-eighth minute to score.

After Andy Browchuck, Syracuse end, recovered a fumble on Lafayette's 42, the New Yorkers went to work. Five plays later, John Colceri scored off right tackle from the 2-yard line.

Syracuse scored three times in the third period.

team, to surpass the modern mark of 26 straight victories established by Cornell in 1921-24.

Claude Arnold and Billy Vessels led Oklahoma's attack, each accounting for two touchdowns, but Colorado's powerful fullback, Merwin Hodel, gave them a battle for top backfield honors as he outshone Oklahoma's All-America fullback candidate, Leon Heath.

Zack Jordan, the Nation's leading punter, booted Oklahoma into a bad hole in the first two minutes when he sent a 38-yard kick out of bounds on the 2. Fred Johnson carried Dick Heatly's return kick back 20 yards to the Oklahoma 20.

Hodel picked the toughest defensive link in the Oklahoma line, left tackle Jim Weatherall, another top All-America prospects, and slammed over him for 12 yards. Eight plays later, Hodel crashed the same spot for a yard and a touchdown. Lee Venzke's kick for extra point was blocked.

Sooners Lead at Halftime

A 46-yard dash by Vessels, after taking a pitchout from Arnold, gave Oklahoma its first touchdown early in the second quarter. With five minutes left, Vessels passed 8 yards to Heatly for another touchdown to give the Sooners a seven-point advantage at halftime.

Oklahoma scored early in the third on a 4-yard plunge by Arnold at the end of a 72-yard drive.

Each team also scored in the fourth quarter. Arnold bucked a yard for the Oklahoma touchdown after a 51-yard advance. Colorado traveled 80 yards for its score. Hodel fumbled as he crashed over from 2 feet out, but Mosher fell on the ball for the touchdown.

period. Substituted when neither Cain nor Pollock could break loose from the left halfback post, Filipski got a handoff from Blaik on the Cadets' 27, veered into Penn's left tackle, and went all the way. He was free beyond midfield and then out-ran Bill Deuber, who made a tardy goal-line tackle.

Army's magnificent line was giving Bagnell little peace on his passing attempts, and save for the Quakers' two touchdown drives following Army fumbles, they could mount no sustained attack. Earl Blaik's defensive tackles, Charles Shira and J. D. Kimmel, guard Ben Brian and backer-up Bill Beck piled up Penn's running game.

When Filipski wasn't breaking away, the Cadets were no raging running force, either, and quarterback Blaik had to resort to a fake-pass-and-run and a short touchdown pass to get Army's first two scores. Stephenson, Martin and Pollock, and later big Al Pollard, were well-contained by Penn's line and wingmen.

Army Pulls Tricks

Filipski, in fact, had an indirect hand in Army's first touchdown. He was playing defense at that point, and pounced on a fumble by Glenn Adams who came to grief on a reverse on Penn's 42. The Cadets then unveiled a couple of tricks to get their 7-0 lead.

Frank Fischl stepped into Blaik's passing role after taking a hand-off, and floated a 25-yarder to Dan Foldberg on the Penn 17. Stopped momentarily by an off-side penalty, Army practically hood-winked the Quakers with the same type of Fischl play Dashing far to his left, Fischl Dashing far to his left, Fichl didn't get rid of the ball, took it outside tackle, and scampered 16 yards to Penn's one-yard line. He bounced off Jaffurs at the 10, to keep moving.

Pollock banged through left guard for the touchdown, and Pollard kicked Army into its 7-0 lead.

Army fluffed a touchdown in the second quarter after Beck intercepted a pass aimed by Bagnell at Deuber, on the Penn 30. On fourth down the Cadets unveiled Pollard as a passer, but with Cain free in the end zone, Pollard over-shot him.

The Cadets were trying for another score after Penn cut their lead to 7-6 with four minutes of the half remaining and reached Penn's 30 on a couple of wide gallops by Pollard, but he fumbled the ball into Penn's hands two plays before the half ended.

Quakers Go In Front

Penn couldn't get out of its deep hole after the second-half kickoff, and Warren was forced to punt from his own goal line. From the Quakers' 41 the Cadets went tothe touchdown that moved them in front 14-6. Blaik got a 17-yard pass completion on a shoestring catch by Weaver, and then from the seven-yard line he pitched one home to Weaver.

The scoring pass was a clever number on which Weaver buttonhooked away from Roberts in the end zone.

Inside of three minutes, Army had another score. Forced to punt when Kimmel smeared Bagnell on a passing attempt, Warren's kick was returned 18 yards to the Penn 42 by Reich. Three plays later, Filipski sprinted the last 29 yards through Penn's line with a zig here and a zag there.

Unable to get to midfield on its own power, Penn got the ball on Army's 46 late in the third period when Roberts recovered a fumble by Stephenson. Corbo was the hero of the drive that ensued. On fourth down from the Army 26, he gambled with a jump pass to Adams and completed it for seven on the Army 20, as the quarter ended.

Filipski's 29, 73 Yd. Runs Sink Quakers

From that point Bagnell whacked the Army line for seven, Corbo got four more, Bagnell four more, and then went all the way on a five-yard swing around Army's left end. Agocs' placement cut Army's lead to 21-13.

Getting nowhere after the next kickoff, Penn survived a poor punt by Warren that traveled only 8 yards and gave the Cadets a first down on the Penn 20.

The Quakers stalled Army's attack at that point, but could not improve its own position.

Regaining the ball on its own 27 after a punt by Warren, Army shook Filipski loose on the succeeding play. He slanted into right tackle from his left half post, after taking a handoff from Blaik. Meeting no opposition at the scrimmage line, he found a convenient block 10 yards later and then was scot-free on his 73-yard goalward trip that was the crusher.

ing Heinrich. With the Washington passing ace bottled, California unveiled a pitching star of its own in Quarterback Jim Marinos. His tosses to Bob Minahen and John Olyzewski picked up long chunks of yardage in the California drives.

It was Washington that cracked the scoring ice for seven points on the second play of the second quarter after a 41-yard advance.

Dick Sprague intercepted a Marinos' pass to start it off. Heinrich hit Sophomore Bill Earley for 14 yards and then called on his gallopers to go the rest of the way in six plays. Early scoring from the two. Jim Rozenzweig converted.

California tied it up without relinquishing the ball after Washington had kicked to the Bear 37-yard line. Washington was checking the vaunted running power of the Bears when Marinos suddenly took to the air and hit Minahen for 12 yards, then for 22 and looped one to Olszewski for 13 more. Pete Schabarum crashed over from the 6 on the twelfth play. Richter converted.

From there until its last-ditch, desperation drive Washington was throttled. Even so—with Richter and others like Groger always pestering—Heinrich completed 11 passes to set a new conference record of 88 completions in a season. It broke by one the record held by Jim Powers of Southern California set in 1949. He also boosted his passing yardage to 1213, just 2 yards short of Powers' distance record also made last year.

California hit the touchdown trail in the third quarter, after an exchange of fumbles gave the Bears the ball on their own 20.

Johnny Olszewski, who was Cal's leading runner, started it with a 13-yard scamper around left end. From there Marinos used his runners to get to the Washington 26, and then pitched a strike to Schabarum.

Old Pete Alexander, Mound Great, Dead

ST. PAUL, Nebr., Nov. 4 (AP).—Grover Cleveland Alexander, a fabulous major league pitcher in his day, died today of a heart ailment.

Death came to the 63-year-old baseball immortal in the one rented room he occupied in a private home here. He had been living of late on a $150-a-month baseball pension.

Alexander got his last big baseball tribute in 1938 when he was voted into baseball's hall of fame at Cooperstown, N. Y.

He had earned it with a remarkable assortment of records chalked up in a career that covered nearly 20 years—from 1911 to 1930.

The 63-year-old hound master had been in failing health in recent years. Alexander's baseball career spanned two decades. In three years, 1915 to 1917, he won 94 games.

One of his best remembered days was October 10, 1926, when at Yankee Stadium in New York, old Pete came in cold from the St. Louis Cardinal bullpen and fanned the Yankees' Tony Lazzeri with the bases full in the seventh inning of a world series thriller to retire the side. He went on to save the game, the seventh, and the series for the Cards.

Alexander got back into the public eye last month when he managed with the help of a St. Paul friend and a Chicago radio show, to get to New York for the 1950 series. In the Phillies, he was watching the same club he helped pitch to its last previous pennant 35 years earlier.

Alexander had been rooming here at the home of Mrs. Josie Navrivy. When the Nevrivys heard no sounds from his room during the forenoon, a son investigated and found him dead. Dr. E. C. Hanisch, sr., said death resulted from a heart ailment and he had been dead several hours.

In his first season with Philadelphia, he won 28 games. He pitched 696 games for three National League teams — the Phillies, Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals — and won 373 of them.

He led the National League in the number of complete games pitched for six years. He set a National League earned-run mark of 1.22 for pitchers working in 250 innings or more.

Mexican Wins Horse Show Special Trophy

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (AP).—Cadet Roberto Vinals, of the Mexican army team, won the International Special Challenge trophy tonight in the National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden.

Vinals, riding Alteno, won the event in the second jump-off over the difficult eight-fence course. Second in the competition between teams from six nations was W. H. White of the British equestrian team.

The Special Challenge trophy was thus retired, having been won three times by Mexico. The trophy was presented by Whitney Stone, former president of the horse show.

A total of 46 horses competed but after the first round only six had completed the course without knockdown. In addition to the 17-year-old Vinals and White, they were Capt. Alberto Valdes of Mexico, and three horses of the United States, ridden by Mrs. Carol Durand of Kansas City and Arthur McCashin of Pluckemin, N. J.

Gail Fenbert of Scarsdale, N. Y., won the equitation championship today, defeating 23 competitors.

The 13-year-old miss, who rides for the Boulder Brook Club, is a Scarsdale High School sophomore, and in winning the event commonly known as The Good Hands, she beat her 16-year-old sister, Deborah.

The Good Hands event is for children under 17 who have qualified in shows all over the country.

Cobham, Va., Horse Tops D. C. Area Entries

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—Watch Me, owned by Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry of Cobham, Va., won in one class, and finished among the top four in two others in the National Horse Show today.

Watch Me was first in the Class 62 Corinthian Hunters, second in the Class 60 Pony Hacks and fourth in the Class 63 Pony Working Hunter Hacks. Another Perry entry, David, took first in the Class 65, Open Pony Jumpers division.

Pop Corn, owned by Gary and Bobbie Gardner, Washington, D. C., finished behind David.

Circus Rose garnered 198 points.

In the Junior Hunt Teams, Blue Ridge Hunt Club of Berryville, Va., finished fifth.

Costly to Penn— Glenn Adams of Penn, in pile at right, fumbles the ball and Gilbert M. Reich (16) of the Army, recovers. Also coming in on the play is Herbert L. Johnson of Army (28). This happened early in the game on Penn's 42-yard line. The Cadets whipped up a couple of tricky plays and scored.

Duke, Trailing 21-0, Comes Back to Trounce Ga. Tech, 30-21

Blue Devils Bring Wade Win No. 200

DURHAM, N. C., Nov. 4 (U.P.).—A courageous Duke team stunned by 21 enemy points in the first few minutes, rallied around the tireless running and passing of Billy Cox today to outscore Georgia Tech, 30 to 21 before 30,000 fans.

After the game, Cox presented the football to Duke mentor Wallace Wade in token of his 200th coaching victory. The dean of Southern coaches said: "The Duke team today showed greater courage than any team I have ever coached."

Drenched by rain and dispirited by Tech's opening burst, the homecoming crowd was ready to go home until Duke banged back in the second period with 16 points. After that, everybody stayed around for the mad finish.

STATISTICS

Georgia Tech		Duke
11	First downs	17
110	Rushing yards	231
113	Passing yards	181
15	Passes attempted	23

Duke's Blue Devils still trailed 16-21 as the final period opened. Cox had punted Georgia Tech back to its own shadows and Tech punted out.

Duke Goes Ahead

Duke got under way from its own 25. Wingback Tom Powers, dodging about on the 29, sailed a zooming 39-yard pass to End Mike Souchak on the Tech 32 and Souchak carried to the 21. Cox passed to End Ceep Youmans to the Tech eight, then bucked into the line to the one. Fullback Jack Mounie slammed over to put Duke ahead for the first time, 23-21.

A penalty nullified a 55-yard Tech play which seemed well on the way to a score and Duke took over again on the Tech 42. Cox passed and ran the ball back to the two and Mounie crashed over again.

Georgia Tech scored in the first three minutes of play. Halfback Bob McCoy bewitched the Duke defense and sailed around end 56 yards to the Duke two. Fullback Bobby North pushed across. Halfback Jim Patton kicked the first of three conversions.

Tackle Runs 50 Yards

Then Tech Center George Morris intercepted a Cox pass and carried to the Duke 25. Patton passed to End Pete Ferris in the end zone for a score.

Cox tried to punt from the 50-yard line, but tackle Marion Akins slashed through and took the kick in his stomach. He kept it there for the full 50 yards he went to score.

Wingback Charlie Smith set up the first Duke score with a 41-yard run to the Tech 20. Cox swept around right end to score.

A 15-yard penalty against tech for roughness moved the ball to the Tech 1-yard line and Mounie slammed over for the second counter.

Tech was moved back to its 15 on a penalty and Duke End Blaine Earon blocked a punt for a Duke safety.

Hogan, Mangrum, Snead Will Play To Help Leo Diegel

INGLEWOOD, Calif., Nov. 4 (AP). Golf's big three, Ben Hogan, Sam Snead and Lloyd Mangrum, are slated to tee off at the Inglewood Country Club tomorrow in an exhibition honoring an old timer who is a pretty sick man.

He is Leo Diegel, national PGA champion in 1928-29, runner-up by one stroke in 1920 for the National Open Championship to Britain's Edward Ray and winner of innumerable sectional crowns in the 1920's and early 1930's. He was also runner-up in the 1930 British Open to the great Bobby Jones.

Movie Stars Clark Gable and Shirley Temple were invited to act as referee and scorekeeper for tomorrow's play.

Diegel has been in failing health from lung cancer for many months.

PERFECT TIMING—Halfback Dave Flood (32) of Notre Dame times his jump just right on this pass and bats the ball away from the outstretched hands of Navy End Tom Bakke (86) in yesterday's game in Cleveland. Irish Halfback Bill Gay (22) checks his stride to watch Flood's leap approvingly. Notre Dame won, 19-10 in a second-half rally

Williams Passes Irish to 19-10 Win

which has already been beaten three times this year.

Williams, the Baltimore senior, pitched for two touchdowns—short shots down the middle, completed on fourth down each time. Landry, whose 161 yards accounted for all but 39 yards of Notre Dame's ground advance, barreled over for the third.

Quarterback Bob Zastrow went over for a second-period touchdown to give the Middies a 7-0 lead and Roger Drew, the Middies' extra-point specialist, kicked a 19-yard field goal to give the sailors a 10-7 third period lead.

The Middies commanded the show for the first half, which ended 7-7, and early in the third period. After that, however, it was pretty much Notre Dame which brought its season's won-lost record to .500.

The triumph was Notre Dame's fifth straight over Navy and the nineteenth in the 24-game series which has seen Navy win only four times.

Shortly before the end of the game, Guard Fred Wallner, of the Irish, and Guard Bob Lowell of the Middies, were banished for fighting. It was a short-lived scrap as officials and players from both teams swarmed in to halt it.

Williams, one of the few leftovers from Notre Dame's national championship team of 1949, pitched the Irish into a 7-7 tie in the second quarter with a 4-yard touchdown pass to Halfback Billy Gay and sent the Irish in front to stay with another 4-yard heave to End Chet Ostrowski in the third quarter.

Landry Runs 54 Yards

Landry, 180-pound senior from Rochester, N. Y., whose 54-yard run paved the way for Notre Dame's first touchdown, personally accounted for the last Irish score. In three trips through the Navy line, which contained all the Irish except Landry today, the former Aquinas High star went the 16 necessary yards for Notre Dame touchdown No. 3. The game's last score. Center Jerry Groom set it up by blocking a Dave Cameron punt on the Navy 16.

Despite the slippery ball, Williams completed nine of his 20 passing attempts and Zastrow seven of his 19. Each had one intercepted and each time a touchdown resulted.

Halfback Billy Powers, a tremendous figure for Navy today, loped 20 yards to the Irish 3-yard line in the second quarter to set up Zastrow's short plunge for the score that gave Navy its first lead.

Three minutes before half-time David Flood, who batted down two Navy passes in the end zone, latched on to a Zastrow pass on the Notre Dame 36-yard line, where he was hauled down, that set in motion a five-play 64-yard Irish excursion that was aided materially by Landry's darting, twisting 54-yard run to the Navy 10-yard line where Franki Hauff finally knocked him out of bounds.

Early in the second period, Zastrow, with a 14-yard run, Hauff, Powers and Fred Franco ran the Middies to the Irish 7-yard line, but at that point Hauff fumbled and the Irish recovered to stem that threat.

Two plays later, Powers Intercepted Williams' pass on the Navy 23, legged it back 20 yards and three plays later Zastrow went over. Drew kicked the extra point to make it 7-0, Navy.

Halfback Murray Johnson caused consternation in the Irish section of the stands by fumbling on the Irish 26-yard line shortly after the kickoff, with End Johnny Gurski recovering for Navy. This time, however, the Irish held and took over on downs on their own 20.

Having given Navy three opportunities to score, the Irish were now in a mind to do a little scoring themselves, and soon did, shortly after flood intercepted Zastrow's pass.

On the first play, Landry bolting through tackle, shook off two Navy tacklers, cut to his left behind a mass of green shirts and plodded a 54-yard path to the Navy 10, where a leaping tackle by Hauff knocked him out of bounds.

On third down, Williams completed a jump pass to his favorite receiver, End Jim Mutscheller, for 6 yards and on fourth down he completed the march by passing to Gay into the end zone for 4 yards and a score. Joe Caprara added the extra point—his only conversion in three tries—and it was a new ball game.

The Irish went 76 yards in 16 plays with the kickoff following Drew's field goal for the touchdown which brought them their 13-10 advantage.

A 20-yard Zastrow pass to Powers featured Navy's 46-yard move to the Irish 19, from where Drew kicked his field goal to give Navy its short-lived 10-7 advantage.

The Irish bounded back with a 76-yard trip, executed in 16 plays, to go ahead for keeps. Williams completed three passes during the march, each to Ostrowski, when the Irish reached the Middie 4-yard line where it was fourth down and 3 yards to go for a first down Williams passed to Ostrowski in the end zone for the score.

On the fifth play of the fourth quarter Groom blocked Cameron's fourth down punt on Navy's 16. Landry moved in again and the Sailors moved back. Landry completed the 16-yard scoring sortie with a 4-yard plunge at guard.

Navy moved to the Notre Dame 25-yard line late in the game, but the irrepressible Flood finally halted the march by batting down a fourth down Zastrow pass in the end zone intended for Powers.

53-20 Homecoming Victory

Glenn Smith, D. C. Boy, Scores Twice as Clemson Routs Dukes

CLEMSON, S. C., Nov. 4.—End Glenn Smith of Washington, D. C., caught two touchdown passes and helped set up another as Clemson's Tigers ripped Duquesne, 53-20, here in today's homecoming attraction before 17,000.

Smith, a 185-pound product of McKinley Tech High in the Nation's Capital, took a pass from Tailback Jack Calvert and raced 38 yards to the Duke's 2 to set up the first touchdown. Calvert scored it on an end run.

With Clemson on top, 21-7, Fullback Billy Hair flipped a 23-yard pass to Smith, who ran 12 more yards for his first touchdown. That one put Clemson out of Duquesne's reach.

But five minutes after the third quarter started the Hair-to-Smith combination clicked for another touchdown, Glenn grabbing Hair's 20-yard pitch on the goal line and striding over.

Hair, 170-pound aerial artist, had a great afternoon. In addition to his two touchdown passes, he ran 65 yards for another when he couldn't find a receiver. He gained 104 yards on the ground, passed 15 times and had six completions for 185 yards.

W&L Romps, 25-7, Nears League Title

LEXINGTON, Va., Nov. 4 (AP)—Washington and Lee's Generals ran and passed in the rain and mud here today to conquer Virginia Tech's Gobblers, 25-7, and move to within a single victory of their first Southern Conference football championship since 1934.

After Sterling Wingo splashed 64 yards to the 1-yard line, Quarterback Bruce Fisher sneaked over for Tech's only six-pointer in the first period. End Ron Raugh converted.

Raugh's conversion wiped out W & L's six-point lead taken a moment earlier when Quarterback Gil Bocetti flipped a 33-yard pass to End Dave Hedge.

Early in the second period, Charlie Smith blocked Bob Gilley's punt, and Guard Conard fell on the leather for the second W & L touchdown.

The Generals got their final touchdown on the first play of the fourth quarter. With the Gobblers in possession of the ball on their 8-yard line, Gilley fumbled the snap from center. The pigskin skidded through the mud into the end zone, and Hedge sprawled on it for Washington and Lee.

Fighter Dies After Knockout

SOUTH RIVER, N. S., Nov. 4 (AP).—Middleweight Boxer Alex Chisholm, 23, died in a hospital in nearby Antigonish early today after failing to gain consciousness from a knockout blow delivered in a fight card here last night.

His opponent in a preliminary in a regular fight card was Kid Sutherland, also 23, of nearby Country Harbor. Both weighed 150. The knockout blow to the jaw was delivered in the first seconds of the second round.

Virginia Pins 34-14 Lacing On Citadel

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 4 (AP). Virginia's Cavaliers cut loose with a powerful running attack, sparked by Fullback John Papit, to defeat The Citadel, 34-14, before an estimated 5500 football fans today.

Virginia scored twice in the second period, added two more touchdowns in the third and another in the final quarter. Papit scored two of the touchdowns and accounted for 157 yards of Virginia's rushing gain for an average og 5.09 yards.

The Citadel scored single touchdowns in the third and final periods with an all-sophomore backfield furnishing the impetus.

VMI Wallops Davidson, 46-6

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Nov. 4 (AP). Virginia Military Institute's hard-charging cadets walloped Davidson College, 46 to 6 here today in a Southern Conference football game.

Joe Stump, a 192-pound senior from Morton, Va., led the cadets in the early stages but was replaced by second and third stringers as the score mounted.

Miss. State Swamps Hapless Auburn, 27-0

STARKVILLE, Mass., Nov. 4 (AP). Four sophomores fired up Mississippi State's football offense after a scoreless first half to swamp hapless Auburn 27-0 today.

Tom Rushing, Pete Polivina, Carl Baughman, and Steve Clark scored the four touchdowns. Auburn threatened only once—an attempted field goal from the Mississippi State 5-yard line in the first period.

St. Francis' Mason Runs 95, 88 Yards, Mounts Bow, 32-6

EMMITSBURG, Md., Nov. 4 (AP). With Halfback Don Mason averaging 18 yards every time he carried the ball, St. Francis smothered Mount St. Mary's, 32-6, today in a Homecoming football game played in a driving rain.

The speedy, 178-pound Mason was especially discourteous to the home team in the third quarter. First he ran the kick-off back 95 yards to score. Then a few plays later, he took a pitch out, cut inside his own left end and splashed 85 yards to the goal.

The Mounts, in suffering their fourth loss in six starts, made their only score late in the first half. Quarterback Marty Green tossed a spot pass from the 20-yard line to End Paul O'Connor in the end zone.

Navy Wins in Soccer

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 4 (AP). Bob Carter's last-period goal gained Navy a 3-2 soccer win over Princeton today.

Carter, Navy's inside right, scored on a close-in shot after taking a pass from Ozzie Fourzan. The goal snapped a 2-2 tie. Center forward Tom Boyce scored Navy's other two goals.

Pino's 75-Yard Run Does It

Boston U. Wins Uphill Battle Against W&M, 16-14

BOSTON, Nov. 4 (U.P.).—A 75-yard run by Sophomore Fullback Sam Pino and a field goal by Titus Plomaritus in the last period gave Boston University a 16 to 14 victory over William and Mary today before 3606 fans in the rain at Fenway Park.

The leg-pumping back from Somerville, Mass., slogged over his own right tackle on the third play of the final period to give Boston the lead for the first time in the game. Plomaritus won the bitter battle that broke a tree-game losing streak when he kicked the field goal 10 minutes later from the 10-yard line.

William and Mary tried hard to overcome that lead but it was too late. Left Halfback Dick Lewis passed his team 74 yards to the Boston 1-yard line from where Fullback Ed Magdziak dived across for the Southerners second touchdown with only a minute and 45 seconds remaining.

For Boston it was a grim uphill battle. The slick William and Mary single wing attack rolled to a touchdown in the first three minutes of play, with Lewis ending a 90-yard march by whisking around his right end from the 6-yard line. Then he kicked the extra point.

Boston struck back in the second period with Quarterback John Kastan dashing for the score after a 45-yard drive was stalled for three plays on the 5-yard line. Plomaritus' kick was wide to leave William and Mary with a one-point margin.

The margin held until Boston's attack reached a climax in the final period. Inspired by Pino's brilliant run, Halfback George Schultz intercepted a William and Mary pass to set off a 54-yard march that ended on the Southerner's 3-yard line. That was when Plomaritus came in to kick the winning field goal.

Stanford Ties USC, 7-7, Both Out of Race

PALO ALTO, Calif., Nov. 4 (AP). Southern California's Trojans and the Stanford Indians fought to a 7-7 tie today in a tough football contest that saw the favored Indians come back in the final three minutes to gain a deadlock.

The Trojans, charging 81 yards in the opening period, scored a touchdown, converted and staved off Stanford rallies until the game neared its end.

On the brink of defeat, Stanford knotted it up when the stadium clock read two minutes and 20 seconds to go. The Indians put the ball into play only 30 yards from the USC goal.

Eight successive ground plays, which included making up a five-yard penalty setback, accounted for the touchdown. Right Half Bob Benson went around right end for the last yard and Quarterback Gary Kerkorian placekicked the extra point.

Southern Cal's first period score came on fourth down. Johnny Williams flipped an 11-yarder to Jim Sears in the end zone. Frank Gifford converted.

The tie eliminated the last chance for either in the Coast title race.

Catholic Wins Home Finale; Ennis Stars

Catholic University ended its home football season on a note of triumph yesterday before 1200 fans at Brookland Stadium downing Gallaudet, 33-0 for its second victory of the season.

Bucky Ennis, star Cardinal halfback put Catholic ahead with a 76-yard touchdown punt return after 5 minutes of the first quarter. Willie Poms kicked the point and Catholic led, 7-0.

Three minutes later, Marvin O. Tuttle fumbled on the Gallaudet 14 and guard Cliff Sisler recovered for Catholic. After four plays Bill De Young sneaked over from the 1. Poms again converted and the Cardinals were ahead, 14-0, after 8 minutes of play.

Gallaudet received and ploughed down the muddy field to Catholic's 9-yard line where the Cardinals stopped them and took over on downs. On the next play, Ennis took a handoff, circled his right end and was off for an 89-yard touchdown. Poms' kick was wide.

The CU offense bogged down until the third quarter. Then the Cardinals took the ball to Gallaudet's 24-yard line where quarterback Joe Maiuri pitched a short pass to Bill De La Vergne in the flat who scampered over the goal. Poms booted his third placement of the day and the score was 27-0.

In the fourth quarter Maiuri broke loose for a 21-yard run to the Gallaudet 48. Bill Holl was thrown for a yard loss but on the next play, Jim Yacobi took the ball for the final touchdown of the day, a 49-yard trip around left end.

20-13 Victory Keeps Bruins In Coast Race

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 4 (AP).—Sophomore Tailback Ted Narleski steered UCLA to a 20-to-13 triumph over Oregon State today and the victory kept the Bruins in the hot Pacific Coast Conference Rose Bowl race.

The smallest crowd of the L. A. college season, 15,323, kept a collective eye on the field and an ear pinned to portable radios for the progress of the California-Washington game at Seattle.

The California win was greeted with cheers down here because UCLA plays the Golden Bears at Berkeley next week and could make the uphill grade to the Rose Bowl by whipping California and following with a decision over Southern California.

Narleski was the big gun in subduing the surprisingly strong Beavers here, clinching the win in the first half with a superlative display of running and passing.

In sending his mates off the field at the midway mark with a 20-7 lead, ever-ready Teddy passed for one touchdown and scored another after setting it up with passes.

The Bruins then settled back to stave off the persistent Beavers in the second half.

The result left UCLA with five wins and two defeats, but only one conference loss—to Washington 21-20.

It's Double Brandy and Three Chasers in Pimlico Cup

DEAR FOLKS: AT PIMLICO

With no steeplechase racing this fall, two of the jumping fixtures will be contested at Middleburg, Va. The Battleship will be run Tuesday and the Manly on Saturday, both being on programs under the wing of the national hunt races at the Glenwood Park course. While the Timbertoppers will draw some support from the horsey set, their absence won't hurt the mutual handle at Pimlico. Jockey Willie Downs recovered quickly from his recent illness. There's no questioning the courage of Joe Culmone, the East's riding sensation. However, there's a thin line between aggressiveness and recklessness. He's a champion, without a doubt, but he should remember that the days when the king could do no wrong have passed by the boards. See you on the rail. BILL.

Tuttle Colt Romps Home By 7 Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Reporters

PIMLICO, Md., Nov. 4—It was a Double Brandy and Three Chasers today in the Pimlico Cup.

C. E. Tuttle's colt with the intoxicating name won by seven lengths in the $15,000 added marathon test of 2½ miles.

Mrs. F. A. Bonsal's Windy was a mild surprise in second position and 25 lengths (count 'em) ahead of Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords Adile. Too far back to mention came the trailing Grandview Stable's Pellicle.

To the weekend crowd of 14,866 there was nothing surprising about Double Brandy's victory. He was the favorite from the first mention yesterday of the entries and returned a $3.20 mutual, with a four-horse field, betting was confined to the straight windows.

Clocked in 4:24

The son of Questionnaire had all the answers today and was clocked in 4:24, about average for the cup at its present distance. Despite a heavy shower a half hour before post time, the track was fast.

Frank Bone, third in the national jockey standings, rode Double Brandy and nursed the big fellow's speed in excellent fashion.

Bone, as well as three saddle riders, appeared well briefed on the number of times around and there was no recurrence of the fiasco of last year when Eddie Arcaro prematurely eased up on Bluehills.

The field was bunched for the first turn of the course with all hands having their mounts under strong restraint. During this period, Windy and Pellicle set most of the pace with Adile easing back Double Brandy trailing.

It was not until a mile and a half that any of the boys turned loose. Bone then put Double Brandy to a light drive and the 4-yearold clicked off his rivals to get to the front.

Pellicle Quits

Pellicle quit and Adile, when roused, failed to respond with the punch anticipated by her backers. Only Windy seemed to hold anything resembling a threat to Double Brandy. Nick Shuk roused the Piping Rock gelding several times during the final half mile but it was no dice.

Double Brandy who carried top weight of 113 pounds, made the cup victory his fifth of the year in 25 tries. He took down $11,025

The turfwriters expected owner Tuttle, retired steel manufacturer and director of the Maryland Jockey Club to send a case of brandy to the press box. Darned if he didn't cross us up with champagne—hollow-stem glasses, mind you, instead of brandy sniffers.

Montgomery J. C. Triumphs, 13-0

Paul Smith passed for one touchdown and scored another as Montgomery Junior College defeated the Randolph-Macon J. V. team at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Stadium yesterday, 13-0.

Climaxing an 84-yard opening-quarter drive, Smith skirted end for eight yards and a touchdown. In the second period he threw a 34-yard pass to Buster Pickett on the Randolph-Macon 10. Yellowjacket defenders deflected the ball, but Pickett hauled it in and went over the goal. Maurice Collins kicked the point.

Turkeys Making Comeback Under State Supervision

By Ralbh Murdock

THE WILD TURKEY is staging a comeback. A dozen years ago, the stock of the big game bird was very low.

Murdock

But now, a wildlife service official says that wild turkeys are becoming more plentiful over a wide area of the United States.

The improvement is mainly the result of conservation steps, such as setting aside and improving special areas for the birds; trapping and transplanting; and raising wild turkeys at state game farms. Habitat improvement has been undertaken in 15 states.

Leaders in this work are Virginia, Texas, Alabama, West Virginia and South Carolina. Virginia raised more turkeys for release in the woods during the last 10 years than any other state.

THE INTERNATIONAL Game Fish Association has confirmed as a world record the 977-pound bluefin tuna caught by Commander Duncan M. Hodgson, Royal Canadian Navy of Montreal, at St. Ann Bay, Nova Scotia recently.

The IFGA investigated all aspects of the catch and today the Canadian naval man is officially a world's champrion.

Hodgson's giant fish was 50 pounds heavier than the previous world record catch. It is the largest tuna ever caught anywhere on rod and line.

The bluefin towed Hodgson and his guide and oarsman, Percy MacRitchie, a distance of 12 miles during the fight, which lasted one hour and 20 minutes.

Here's where angling persistence paid off—Hodgson had been fishing the same area for 19 years. Disdaining a motor-driven boat, he hooked the big bluefin from a skiff.

The champ said, "when that tuna struck, it was like hooking onto the tail end of an express train.

"In all my years of fighting tuna in Nova Scotia, I've never seen such circling. In less than an hour and a half, that fish towed us about 12 miles."

Nine feet, eight inches in length, the record-breaking tuna had a girth of seven feet 10¼ inches. The hefty measured three feet nine inches across the tail. (Editor's note—No measurement between the eyes).

The new tuna angling champion is a son-in-law of Commander J. K. L. Ross, who pioneered tuna fishing in Nova Scotia waters and also raced several outstanding race horses on Maryland tracks, including Billy Kelly and Sir Barton.

Turner Ring Show to Test Video Allure

An answer to the highly controversial question, "Does televison help or hurt the gate?" should be provided tomorrow night at Turner's Arena.

Fight Promoter Gabe Menendez has arranged an attractive card and there will be no video bebause Televisint of the New York Opera.

The main bout pits peppery Jimmy Cooper, one of the most popular fighters developed here in years, against Rudy Pasco, French-Canadian featherweight who has won 38 scraps against a single loss since turning pro in 1946.

Pasco is rated a 6-5 favorite, but Jimmy's adherents, never shy about boosting their man, point out that he upset longer odds against Charley Titone and Manuel Oritz and has been beaten only twice in the last two years.

Coley Wallace, 1948 national amateur heavyweight champ, unbeaten since turning pro, will be seeking his fifth straight knockout in as many appearances here against Doc Bladden of Philadelphia in a five-rounder.

Pat Thomas and Little Dynamite, local lightweights, have been rematched for the third time in a four-round fight. Each has won two of the prior bouts.

Eddie Marshall and Johnny Pratt, former All-Army middleweight champion, will fight in another five rounder. Going the same distance will be lightweight Kenny Leach of Baltimore and Chick McPherson of Patterson, N. J.

DON'T USE GREASY GOO
IF YOU WANT A CLEAN SCALP-HANDSOME-LOOKING HAIR!

Remember, water is no hair tonic. But, on the other hand, don't plaster your hair down with greasy, sticky products which cover hair and scalp with a dirt-catching scum. Healthy-looking hair must have a cleaner scalp. So use Kreml! It's never been duplicated to keep hair perfectly in place—it makes hair look naturally well-groomed. It never looks or feels greasy.

And you'll like the invigorating "wake-up" tingle Kreml gives your scalp. It always keeps hair and scalp feeling SO CLEAN. Also excellent to lubricate a dry scalp and remove dandruff flakes.

SAVE MONEY: Buy the new full-pint-size Kreml—it saves you nearly 50%.

ILLINI—From Pg. 1-C

Illini Down Michigan In Snow, 7-0

the touchdown pass by Major.

The weather completely frustrated Michigan's great Chuck Ortmann. In the numbing cold and driving snow he failed, for the first time in his collegiate career, to complete a pass. No Michigan passes, in fact, were completed the whole afternoon. They tried 11.

Illinois had all the superiority in the vital first half. Fullback Dick Raklovits and Halfback Ron Stevens made up for the absence of Johnny Karras, the Illinois running star who did not play because of injuries.

Raklovits raced 31 yards to the Michigan 49 to start the drive. After alternating for short gains, he and Stevens moved Illinois down to the 28. Here Stevens cut outside his own left end and was spilled 6 yards from the goal by Michigan's linebacking sophomore, Roger Zatkoff. Two plays later Major straightened up behind the tough Illinois line and calmly flipped a high toss to Klimek. Sam Rebecca converted.

Michigan's best effort with the bad weather shackling Ortmann carried to the Illinois 36-yard line.

After the touchdown, Illinois was content to let Michigan do what it could on the snow-caked field. Michigan twice fooled Illinois with Ortmann quick kicks but Don Laz, often punting on first down to protect the Illinois lead, kept the Michigan team from scoring.

The win was the first for Illinois over Michigan since a 13-9 verdict in 1946.

Texas Socks S. M. U., 23-20

passes. Texas clearly earned the victory. It snapped back after telling penalties. It fought at high pitch all afternoon.

Southern Methodist was undefeated and untied until today and for three years had won over Texas, twice when the conference was in the balance. Texas was unbeaten in conference play but had lost to Oklahoma, 14-13, in an intersectional game.

The Longhorns thus are the last unbeaten team in the conference race and overwhelming favorites to rush on to the championship—their first in five years—and to play in the Cotton Bowl New Year's Day in Dallas.

A crowd of 65,498 rocked and swayed with the gripping, vicious game that brought the Methodists, twice conference champions in the past three years, to defeat. It marked the first victory over SMU for Blair Cherry in his four years as head coach of Texas.

Southern Methodist discovered early that it could not run against the great Texas line and played almost exclusively in the air. The Methodists tried 47 passes — a probable record number even for a Southwest Conference team. SMU was held to a minus 68—yes MINUS 68—rushing while Texas got 140 yards. The Longhorns rolled up 139 in the air.

Texas scored first when Byron Townsend, power man of the Longhorn backfield, plunged from the SMU 5 after Tompkins' passing had put the ball down there.

SMU reported back with a 59-yard drive for a tying score early in the second period. The pay-off was a 25-yard throw from Benners to Benny White on the Texas 5 and White lateraled to Rote for the touchdown.

Texas shot ahead with an 80-yard drive with Townsend and Lew Levine pounding great gaps in the Methodist line and Tompkins throwing true to Tom Stolhandske and Ben Procter. From the 4 Townsend climbed over left guard for the touchdown.

SMU got to the Texas 7 late in the second period on a 72-yard pass play from Rote to Pat Knight but with only 20 seconds left in the half Rote tried to jump pass to H. N. Russell, the ball bounded out of Russell's hands and fell into the arms of Texas' Don Barton.

SMU tied it up with a 69-yard surge as soon as it had the ball in the second half. It required just nine plays, four of them passes by Benners. A 39-yard gainer to Champion took the ball to the 1 yard line and Rote plowed over.

Tompkins Passes for TD

Texas got ts third touchdown as the result of an intercepted pass in the third period. H. J. Shands gathered in a Benners throw and ran to the Methodist 11. A 15-yard penalty for illegal use of hands set Texas back but a pass from Tompkins to Procter in the end zone brought the touchdown.

SMU then marched with the kickoff to another touchdown. Benners' passes did the job, a 26-yard throw to White in the end zone being the pay-off.

Tompkins had kicked all three extra points after touchdown and Bill Sullivan converted after the first two SMU scores to make his string 20 straight. But Sullivan missed the third try—the kick was wide.

However, Sullivan was spared the humiliation of being the man who lost the game by that bad kick when Texas got a safety in the last minutes. It was counted when Russell took a pass from Rote behind the SMU goal line and Paul Williams downed him.

Southern Methodist	0	7	7	6—20
Texas	7	7	7	2—23

Southern Methodist scoring: Touchdowns—Rote 2, White; conversions—Sullivan 2; safety—Russell (tackled by Williams in end zone).

Texas scoring: Touchdowns—Townsend 2, Procter; conversions—Tompkins 3.

Ed Mooney's Runs, Passes Beat Spiders

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 4 (U.P). Brilliant runs and looping passes by North Carolina State's triple-threat tailback Ed Mooney powered a single scoring drive today to set the University of Richmond down, 7-0, for its fifth straight Southern Conference loss. The game was played in rain, mud and a thunderstorm.

Fullback Jim O'Rourke bareled over from three yards out early in the second period and halfback Ray Barkouskie converted.

Neither team threatened again but breaks that might have turned the tide kept the scant homecoming crowd of 3000 in their seats to the watery end.

State tailback Ted Potts returned a punt to the Richmond 48 to open the pay-off march late in the first period. Mooney passed to Barkouskie for 14, skirted end for 11 and smashed the middle for 9. Then with the ball on the Richmond 16, O'Rourke blasted over in three plays.

State guard Vince Bagonis blocked three punts by Richmond quarterback Corky Brimm and starred in the rough line battle that left both teams smeared and slippery with mud.

Richmond never penetrated beyond the State 29, where the Spiders were hurled back as Brimm tried frantic passes.

N. C. State	0	7	0	0—7

Touchdowns: O'Rourke. Point after touchdown: Barkouskie.

Referee: H. V. Hooper, Virginia Tech; umpire: Fritz Turner, South Carolina; field judge: Charles Lutz, St. Johns; linesman: T. J. Reams, Clemson.

POVICH—From Pge. 1-C

set-up were it not for his failure, in 1947, to get along with Jackie Robinson . . . only four times in 53 years of football have Notre Dame teams lost four games in a single season . . . pro football's biggest losers this year are the TV sponsors of the Los Angeles' Rams games who contracted to underwrite any loss in attendance, based on the 1949 figures. In their first four home games this year, the Rams have drawn only 85,903, against crowds totaling 151,098 for their first three last season . . . on today's pro football betting front: The Giants are 12-point favorites over the Redskins, Cleveland is 12 points over the Cardinals, Los Angeles 18 points over San Francisco, Green Bay 7½ points over Baltimore, the Eagles 17 points over Pittsburgh, and the Bears 14½ over Detroit . . . the late Walter Johnson was a teetotaler, but in his semi-pro days in Idaho he pitched for a team that was sponsored by the town's seven saloons, and the players were required to mix with the customers as part of their baseball job . . . the Cleveland Indians are making it embarrassing for Lou Boudreau by their refusal to let him know if he will be fired or re-hired as manager of the club.

MARYLAND U.'s freshmen don't start learning Jim Tatum split-T formation until they move up to the varsity. They are a single-wing team, used by the varsity to scrimmage against, because Maryland plays mostly single-wing opposition . . . Mrs. Katherine A. Costello, the nicest lady, and mother of Sports Writer Al Costello, is being widely mourned. She passed away on Friday . . . Clark Griffith is frowning anew on barnstorming trips since learning that one of his regulars, Mickey Vernon, sprained an ankle while on tour . . . when Yankee Manager Casey Stengel learned last week that Phil Rizzuto was voted the most valuable player in the A.L., he could recall, if he liked, that day in the late thirties when Stengel was managing Brooklyn and Rizzuto asked for a tryout. "Forget it, you're too small," Stengel told little Phil, who became the league's best without growing up . . . Sonny Workman, the Washington jockey who rode to fame on Equipoise, has sold his California residence and is domiciling himself in the Capital again . . . a new figure in the operation of the Laurel race track, sold recently to Morris Schapiro, wealthy Baltimorean, will be Joe Cascarella, former right-handed pitcher of the Nats. He's the new track owner's son-in-law . . . the sponsors of the Capital Classic, the football game between Tennessee and North Carolina colored college teams at Griffith Stadium last Friday night, hit a new promotional note when they advertised: "Beware of imitators."

FROM UP BOSTON WAY comes the intelligence that Branch Rickey may buy out Lou Perini's partners in the Braves and take over as veep and general manager . . . Clyde Sukeforth, the Georgetown grad who turned down the job of managing the Dodgers in 1947 and since has coached for Burt Shotton, is the new favorite to succeed Shotton . . . Coach Steve Owen of the Giants approved the Eagles' tactic of covering the Redskins' Bones Taylor with two men on the flank, and will use the same gimmick today in the Polo Grounds . . . West Point's Cadets lined up on the field to give the Army team an honor guard when it trooped onto the gridiron today, in a dead steal from Navy which thought up the stunt . . . Pauline Betz Addie is beating the daylights out of Gussie Moran on their tennis tour because she doesn't know how to ease up . . . Mickey Guerra, the Spanish-speaking catcher the Nats are trying to wangle from the A's in a deal for Al Evans, was Washington property as far back as 1936. He disappeared on a train ride to New York and didn't bob up with the Nats again until 1942 . . . Gene Filipski, a two-touchdown man for Army against Penn yesterday, was so low-rated by West Point's public relations department at the start of the season his name didn't appear in the brochure of the team.

An Important Message from PHILLIP'S
Because our first obligation is to the public . . .
NO INCREASE IN TELEVISION PRICES
while present stock lasts
Manufacturers and government officials have clarified the recent TV Excise Tax ruling to this effect: Prices on TV receivers now in Phillip's warehouse and stores will remain at the same low levels as before November 1. This means every TV set of every make on hand as of October 31 will be sold with absolutely NO INCREASE IN PRICE! We have no way of telling just how long our stock will last, it may be only a few days, it may be weeks. WE HAVE 2000 SETS ON HAND. But play safe! Buy now while you can save, because any replacements will have to carry the increased price due to the tax. Remember, we will not take advantage of ANY PRICE INCREASE until we absolutely must!

Iowa Grandmother Charts New Goals For U. S. Clubwomen

By Norma Lanum

CLUB WOMEN WHO work with Dorothy Deemer Houghton comment frequently: "How in the world does she do it all!"

And the answer is: "I'm two persons."

That's the only way a woman can be really successful, she confides.

President Houghton of the General Federation of Women's Clubs bustles across country (AND globe) keeping constant tab on millions of club women in her regime and keeping the Government informed on their potential strength in National defense and international diplomacy. President Houghton always can be counted on for a new plan to mobilize club women for civil defense or any one of a number of civic projects.

BUT MRS. HIRAM HOUGHTON, 59-year-old wife of an Iowa banker and grandmother of six youngsters, is still another person. As soon as she pulls into her hometown of Red Oak, Iowa (population 7000), "I forget everything else. I'm just a small town wife and mother when I step off the plane."

Actually, it really isn't as simple as all that. Being "just a small town wife and mother" for Dorothy Houghton means being mistress of her rambling 6-bedroom family house and serving on just about every committee her home town and State can offer.

AND THEN "THERE'S THAT perfectly wonderful family of mine." Mrs. Houghton will tell you her devotion to her family won her the title of Iowa Mother of 1948. Her four married children and six grandchildren live nearby in Red Oak and eat Sunday dinner at Mrs. Houghton's house when she's home.

SINCE MRS. HOUGHTON began her administration last spring she's been traveling almost continuously. She attends as many meetings and conventions of the 17,000 member clubs as possible and also has to represent clubwomen on many important National and international committees.

ONE OF HER IMMEDIATE PROJECTS is to get women to the polls on Tuesday. The federation has been conducting an intensive "citizen participation" campaign, designed to familiarize women with the issues, get them to meet and hear the various candidates. As a result of this effort, the federation expects more women than ever to cast a vote in this election. Since the beginning of suffrage, Mrs. Houghton points out, only one third of the eligible women in the United States have voted, but women must be made to realize the importance of showing other nations we care for our right to vote. Actually, the "stay-at-home" bloc is more important in this election than the farm bloc, the labor bloc or any other interest group, she stresses, adding that "the home is women's place, but not her circumference."

DURING HER FIVE-WEEK-TOUR of Europe last summer Mrs. Houghton visited dozens of women's clubs affiliated with the Federation. In addition to making 43 speeches to these foreign clubwomen, President Houghton broadcast on the Voice of America from Berlin and had conferences with several officials of other countries on the potential contribution of American club women to international goodwill and National defense.

Mrs. Houghton is a woman of big ideas. Convinced that club women have a higher function than attending silver teas and book review programs, she's conducting an all-out campaign to convince the rest of the world. And especially the Government.

She never hesitates to urge Government officials to pay more serious attention to the potential strength of the millions of organized club women in the United States.

Also, she's keen on mobilizing her club women for specific local defense projects—such as a blood type tatooing program, or an evacuation program in case this country is attacked.

ANOTHER NEW PROJECT President Houghton is promoting is a Nation-wide network of hostesses for foreign visitors to this country. She wants clubwomen to volunteer to take foreigners into their homes for a few days, or maybe just for the afternoon, "to see how America really lives."

"This might be the best job of diplomacy our country could do," she maintains.

Although Mrs. Houghton is the product of a conservative Republican Midwest family, her ideas for this country's clubwomen are some of the boldest in many years.

She's met only enthusiasm thus far, however, from her fellow club members for her new theories on the duties of a clubwoman.

But some of the ultra-conservative groups of the Federation are expected to protest over at least one of her recent decisions. This one is to change the title of the "American Citizenship Committee" to the "Citizenship Committee."

"We must be citizens of the world as well as citizens of America," she has asserted. And to some clubwomen, these are fighting words.

MRS. HOUGHTON began her club work immediately on returning to Red Oak from Wellesley College. She first joined the local clubs her mother had helped to found—the Tuesday Club of Red Oak and the bridge club, among others.

Then she joined the State Education Committee of the Iowa Federation of Women's Clubs and later became its chairman. That was her start in the "big league." The rest of her club career was just a matter of climbing steadily, one rung at a time.

Along the way she has achieved membership and leadership in at least 18 important State and national organizations. She is a member of the advisory committee of the Midcentury White House Conference for Children and Youth, and of the Alaska Statehood Committee. She is also a member of the Iowa State Board of Education, director for Iowa of the National Association of Parliamentarians, and member of the board of directors of Tarkio College in Missouri.

NOW THAT SHE'S the most important clubwoman in the United States, she may have some even greater plans for her personal future. But the gregarious little Iowa grandmother won't say a word about that.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE EDWARD BARRETT discusses plans for future Voice of America broadcasts to women of Europe and Asia with the Federation president. Shortly after the outbreak of war in Korea Mrs. Houghton herself broadcast to women of the Republic of Korea, telling them the women of America were praying for them. And during her recent trip to Europe she spoke again on the "Voice" from Berlin

RED OAK FRIENDS OFFER THEIR SERVICES to Mrs. Houghton wherever she goes. Here she chats at her desk with Karl Loos, legal adviser to the General Federation who was a good friend and great admirer of Mrs. Houghton's father, the late Judge Horace E. Deemer. Judge Deemer was Chief Justice of the Iowa Supreme Court for 28 years until his death in 1917. And his wife, the late Mrs. Deemer was a club woman almost as active as her daughter

THE VITAL ROLE of women in our National defense program is one of the chief concerns of Mrs. Houghton today. Besides her job as president of the Federation, she's chairman of the newly formed Women's Clearing House for National Defense, which represents virtually all organized "unemployed" womanpower in the United States. In this capacity she visits the Pentagon with the Federation's defense and economic security chairman, Mrs. Ambrose Diehl (right) of San Francisco, Calif. They're pictured here with Miss Margaret Banister, Defense Department liaison officer for the national women's organizations

MRS. HOUGHTON'S DAY ends with a few letters to her family back in Red Oak, written in her bedroom at headquarters. Photos of her grandchildren and the Bible and volumes of Longfellow and Thoreau are on her desk. "I never could have gotten where I am if it were not for my family," she says. They're very generous with me."

BUYING PRESENTS FOR SIX little grandchildren is a favorite pastime for Mrs. Houghton. She often strolls from her apartment in Federation headquarters half a block to Connecticut ave. for a peek at children's clothes and toys. The club official, however, has little time for shopping for herself. Usually she orders her things by phone and letter

Mary Haworth's Mail

Married 10 Years, Youthful Parents Are Trying To Rear Children Wisely, But Man's Discourses On Wife's Blunders Have Caused Serious Quarrel

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Bill and I are married 10 years. We have two lovely children. We both want whatever is best for the children, but so far we have fallen rather short of that ideal. The older child, now 8, shows definite symptoms of lacking a sense of security.

This is our usual pattern of events: One of the children misbehaves. I handle the situation as best I can. I don't lose my temper any more; I once did. And I don't have a rejecting attitude any more. But there is inevitably some tension between me and the child for the time being.

As soon as Bill and I are alone together, after one of these incidents, he will launch into a discussion of attitudes in general, and then point out what was wrong with my attitude during the latest altercation. He says he only wants to correct mistakes harmful to the children, and admittedly this seems a reasonable position, one that a father has every right to take.

Sometimes I'm sensible enough to listen objectively to these "corrective" discourses and try to reconstruct my attitude accordingly. But usually I wax defensive, and this of course leads to all sorts of conflict. After the most recent corrective session, I got defensive enough to make some pretty strong statements about not wanting any more of them. Bill has withdrawn into an independent, love-withholding attitude. So I think it's time I called for outside help. Can you enlighten me as to what's really going on here? F. N.

DEAR F. N.: In asking what's really going on here, you are posing a good question. It signifies that you seriously desire to learn and grow; and that you have the intelligence and humility that are essential to the solution of human conflicts.

Your explosive reaction to Bill's latest preachment probably makes intuitively good sense, in that it blasts into the open a lot of subjective ill will—or "attack" criticism—that he has been packaging into his discourses on how to handle children. Perhaps at long last you've accurately discerned that he has been using your training difficulties with the children as a talking point for ventilating, indirectly, much personal frustration he holds against you.

Bill may have an inarticulate grievance against you for luring him into marriage, into the ball-and-chain arrangement that deprives a man of footloose freedom and loads him instead with tiring obligations, his feelings may say. Or he may have an unconscious quarrel with womankind in the maternal role, dating back to filial dissatisfaction with his mother.

Or he may hunger for a wise, warm, maternal type of coddling from you that he doesn't get, either because you haven't discerned his yen for it, or haven't the time or know-how to humor it. Something of the sort, some inside story unfaced by him, motivates his roundabout harangues, I think.

If Bill were innocently, sincerely intent on helping you, his commentaries wouldn't start quarrels as the usual thing, and you say they do. It's true you admit being mostly defensive in these sessions; but the fact you are conscious of this reaction and try to overcome it—so as to listen objectively and take profit from his views—indicates that your disposition is cooperative. What happens is that your feelings get the impact of his implicit negative purpose, which is to tear you down, and instinctively you "defend" yourself against that.

Maybe Bill doesn't know it, but the spirit of his criticism is "rejecting" and unfriendly, just as his present pouting is; and with this shadow hanging over your dealings with the children, naturally you can't be relaxed in disputes with them. The greatest contribution you can make, as a couple, to their security, is to act in conformity with the principle that harmony between yourselves is more constructive than being letter-perfect disciplinarious. Harmonious parents who loyally love each other and the children, project "security" into the air they breathe, and feeling this, their progeny aren't deeply disturbed by the average experience of blunder-mothering. M. H.

Stephanie Benet, Mr. Mahin Wed

THE WEDDING of Miss Stephanie Jane Benet, daughter of Mrs. Stephen Vincent Benet, and the late Stephen Vincent Benet, noted poet and short-story writer, to Dean Bradfield Mahin of Washington, took place yesterday afternoon in New York City. The ceremony was performed at the church of St. Ignatius Loyola. A reception followed at the Cosmopolitan Club.

Given in marriage by Richard Myers, the bride wore a gown of French silk with antique lace veil forming a train. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. Matron of honor was Mrs. Richard T. Wharton of Whileaway, Newport, R. I., who wore a gown of hyacinth blue taffeta and carried blue and white cornflowers.

The bride was graduated from the Brearley School in New York City, attended Swarthmore and Barnard Colleges and was graduated from the Columbia-Presbyterial School of Nursing. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey Mahin of Neosho, Mo., is a foreign affairs analyst in the Department of State. He was graduated from the University of Missouri and the School of Advanced International Studies in Washington.

Kathleen Rowe To Be Bride

Capt. Thomas Buchanan Dugan, USN, and Mrs. Dugan, announce the engagement of Mrs. Dugan's daughter, Miss Kathleen Wilson Rowe, to Daniel French Slaughter, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Slaughter of Brookside, Culpeper, Va.

Miss Rowe is the daughter of Capt. Lionel Lewis Rowe, USN. She attended the Shipley School at Bryn Mawr, Pa., Holton-Arms Junior College and George Washington University. She was presented to society at a tea December, 1947, at the 1925 F Street Club.

Mr. Slaughter studied at the Virginia Military Institute and was graduated from the University of Virginia, class of 1949. He is now a student at the University of Virginia Law School.

The wedding will take place January 27 in Christ Church, Georgetown.

MISS CHRISTINE QUEEN FELL'S engagement to Lieut. Edward Duncan Middleton, jr., is announced by her parents, Col. and Mrs. Edgar Tremlett Fell of Washington and Baltimore, Md. Lieutenant Middleton is the son of Dr. Edward Duncan Middleton and the late Mrs. Middleton of Washington, formerly of New London, Conn. The bride-elect made her debut at the bachelors cotillion in Baltimore. She was graduated from Bryn Mawr School and attended the University of Maryland.

FOR SUN, FOR FUN—

BERMUDA GOLD CHEMISE COAT COSTUME in silk honan by Wragge. This was one of the hits at Garfinkel's showing of resort and cruise clothes last week in Bermuda. A slim pleated dress is cooled by a loose kimona-sleeved coat that becomes a second dress simply by belting it. Worn here by Bermuda's own Mrs. Llewelyn Gibbon

FOR EVENINGS IN ROMANTIC BERMUDA, Florida or that winter cruise, a luxurious Chinese brocade big skirt in exciting hibiscus red, topped by a soft sea-blue jersey top.

A costume that would be a highlight of any vacation wardrobe. From Garfinckel's collection of cruise and resort clothes, shown in Bermuda last week

NETTIE ROSENSTEIN designed this beautiful white linen short dance dress. Banded with lace, it has a most flattering detachable fichu-collar of lace. This dress was a hit with native Bermudians at Garfinckel's resort fashion show in Bermuda

Becoming Clothes Important for Mother-to-Be

By Ann Laurence
(Sixth day of Betty's beauty program)

NO MATTER HOW MUCH a mother-to-be may learn of proper health habits, of skin and hair care and good facial grooming, there is still one major problem to be solved: Dressing the pregnant figure.

A compact, well-thought-out wardrobe is more important now than at any other time of her life.

Betty needed the moral support of becoming clothes to face her office job and freedom from the old, old problem of "what to wear." Maternity clothes must bridge the seasons, if need be, and must be able to stand a great deal of strain.

Above everything else, they must be attractive. The attitude "it's quite nice . . . for a maternity dress" is a defeatist one. This is something that requires great strength of mind and for that reason, it is important that you do your shopping early.

TAKE YOUR SHOPPING IN EASY stages. Never buy anything when you're just too tired to care. When you are in doubt, wait.

"It is just a cheap dress and the time is so short," Betty remarked on her first shopping tour. Yet a maternity dress may be worn four times a week for four months. That is at least 64 times. How many other dresses does the average woman have in her wardrobe that she wears so often, over such a short period of time?

Decide that you will buy the very best clothes that your budget will stand—just as you do in making ordinary purchases. Don't let the fact that it is a maternity dress reconcile you to shoddy workmanship and cheap material. Know that a dress of good design and fabric will be a blessing now and later. If you don't want to save it for the next baby, the wrap-around section of the skirt may be removed and the front and back joined. If it is really becoming, it may be a welcome addition to your wardrobe. It is the ugly dresses that a woman never wants to see again.

"BUT I CANNOT AFFORD a lot of expensive new clothes," Betty declared.

And so, the compromise is one really bang-up outfit that she is proud to be seen in. There's always the party you hate to miss—and in Betty's case, the daily task of dressing for the office.

What the stores so tactfully call "anticipation" clothes often completely ignore well-known principles of line and balance. One protuberance can be reduced in appearance only by contrasting it with another. A ruffle, a jabot, shirring, or a flower can help to make a profile straight, instead of bulging. White pleating is universally becoming, baby or no.

Betty bought several sets of detachable collars and cuffs, so that she would always look fresh.

LOOSE JACKETS ARE SPLENDID, but you may find that it is better to run your belt through the seams at the sides and across the outside of the back. This will keep you from resembling a barrel and is particularly important if you are short.

Hats should be the most becoming ever. Severe, difficult to wear models should be reserved for other times. Large brims will help to balance the proportion; veils are flattering and will draw attention upwards. If your best friend is sufficiently charmed with your bonnet, her eyes may forget to take their customary dart at your tummy!

Joan Boyle, Lieut. Byrne Are Married

SOCIETY ATTENDED the wedding yesterday of Miss Joan Marie Boyle and Lieut. John Joseph Byrne, USA, at the Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Frank William Boyle of Chevy Chase and the late Mr. Boyle. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Byrne of Dubuque, Iowa.

Officiating clergymen at the ceremony was the Rev. E. Carl Lyon, and the reception following the ceremony was held at the Army Navy Country Club.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her oldest brother, Peter William Boyle 2d, wore a gown of candlelight satin and veil of heirloom lace. Her pearls were a wedding gift of the bridegroom, and the prayerbook she carried was used by her maternal grandmother on her wedding day

MRS. WILLIAM EVERETT was matron of honor. Other attendants were Miss Helen Kemp Devereux of Chevy Chase, Miss Bettejane Mackenzie and Mrs. Jacques Michael Kelly of Washington, and Miss Joanne Shook of Jersey City, N. J.

The bride attended Trinity College, Washington, and the Abbott School of Art. The bridegroom graduated from the United States Military Academy, West Point, New York, class of 1946.

After a wedding trip, the couple will live in Texas while Lieutenant Byrne attends Radar School there.

Serene Shores At Home Await Fighting General

By Elizabeth Maguire

ON THEIR 175th anniversary, the "Soldiers of the Sea" have plenty to be proud of. For one thing, there's the fighting general who is their commandant.

Gen. Clifton Bledsoe Cates, Commandant of the United States Marine Corps, has a career distinguished by bloody battles. But he also has a home made gentle and serene by two lovely ladies—his wife, Jane McIlhenny Cates, and his daughter, Ann Willis Cates.

Commandant's House at Marine Barracks, where the Cates' make their present home, is a sizable brick mansion, painted cream and white. Inside is a jewel box of pretty colors. Jade green, burnt orange, white, and polished tiles make sunlight sing in the solarium, and in the drawing room and music room are subdued tones in shrimp and old Chinese green.

A son, Clifton Bledsoe Cates, jr., is a lieutenant commander—"just fresh caught," his mother says. He is on duty now on a destroyer in the Mediterranean. Mrs. Cates, jr., lives in Newport, R. I., with young Clifton Bledsoe Cates 3d, age 4.

HAPPILY AT HOME at Marine Barracks with General and Mrs. Cates are three dogs. One, a loping English setter, is named Red; another, a short-haired German pointer, is Boots, and a third, a Scottie, answers to Kerchief.

Mrs. Cates, a well-poised, handsome woman, has brown, wide-set eyes, trim figure, and pretty profile. She dresses simply, immaculately, detail-perfect, from her well-groomed nails to her slender slippers. She is most enthusiastic about the beauty of the Commandant's House, but she sometimes finds telephone conversations difficult with airplanes buzzing overhead, and the Marine Band marching about without.

Mrs. Cates and her daughter pose for pictures with graceful resignation, but the general puts on his hat to go, saying, "I'm a working man, not a photographer's model." When reminded the picture was for the 175th anniversary of the Marines, he reconsidered and fell into line.

MRS. CATES is very proud to say her husband has led troops under fire at every echelon from platoon to division. This is considered a record unique even among the corps' most senior officers.

At Chateau Thierry in World War I, the general was a lieutenant in command of a company, when all senior officers had been killed off; in World War II, as a colonel in command of the first Marine regiment in the first Marine division, making the bloody landing at Gaudalcanal; later, as a general he commanded the Fourth Marine Division during the worst fighting at Tinian and Iwo Jima.

His position at Marine Barracks is a four-year appointment, and he has been there nearly three years.

The Commandant's House is full of history. During the War of 1812, many historians believe, the house was occupied by General Ross, head of the British Army Staff and Admiral Cockburn of the Royal Navy. Lithographic prints of Admiral Perry's expeditions to Japan line the walls, and there are aged doctrines well framed for conversation pieces. The house was built for the Commandant of the Marine Corps in 1805, and General Cates is the nineteenth commandant to occupy the house.

"ISN'T IT LOVELY?—And it came from my garden," proudly claims Mrs. Robert Berger (right), chairman of the plant and flower booth at the St. Alban's bazaar, as she shows Mrs. George Warren Offutt some of the plants gathered especially for the event. The plant booth, with potted ferns, fall flowers, and leaves, was an outstanding bazaar spot

Sign of the Season

Santa's Helpers Set A Host of Bazaars

By Dorothea Cruger

IT'S BAZAAR TIME again! With the first week in November have come a flood of festivals, turkey dinners and bake-sales at which the ladies of church groups, clubs and schools meet to display and sell their handiwork, their cakes and cookies, swap "white elephants" and treat the neighborhood to a real old-fashioned good time.

Every day between now and Christmas, at least one church basement or club auditorium will be turned into a village fair, plants and flowers brightening up a far corner, stuffed toys and embroidered aprons decking one booth, meringue pies and fudge loading down another. And somewhere in a prominent spot, to encourage the holiday mood, there will be a Christmas booth, gay with greeting cards, ribbons, decorations and wrappings.

For the Christmas spirit hovers in the air at every bazaar. And this is the great chance to absorb some of that spirit, do a little early prospecting and stow away some unusual, and often handmade, items for the Big Day.

ONE OF THE BEST spots for prospecting is the White Elephant table. You might find an antique brooch, an artistic set of bookends or a china teapot among its treasures. Because of the variety and inexpensiveness of the items, this is a favorite spot for bargain hunters.

Another fascinating spot is the grab-bag corner, which sometimes is fixed up as a parcel-post window, with hundreds of packages actually mailed to the bazaar for the occasion. For 25 cents you pick out a parcel with an intriguing post-mark, and you're likely to get most anything. At one recent bazaar one buyer was rewarded with a little brass pack horse and some rocks from the Big Rock Candy Mountain in Utah, another got a set of party napkins and coasters from Texas, emblazoned with authentic cattle brands, and a third received a hand-painted bridge set from California.

So, as the posters on many a school, club and church building will be announcing, "Come one, come all," to a Christmas bazaar. And here are some of the ones already planned for the next few weeks:

PARCEL POST—When St. Alban's Church held its bazaar October 25, one of the most popular booths was the "St. Alban's Parcel Post," where for 25c, a package mailed anywhere in the United States could be purchased. Here the Rev. Felix Kloman, of St. Alban's, discovers a raffia basket in the parcel he has purchased from "clerk" Mrs. Jack Joslin, while Mrs. Elliott C. Schutz (center) looks on

APRONS, APRONS, APRONS!—Big ones and little ones, organdy and calico, they're always best-sellers at a church bazaar. Prospective customers Mrs. Edmund Kellogg (left) and Mrs. Joseph Bragdon inspect a cheerfully-printed apron held by Mrs. Frederick D. Claggett, of the apron booth committee, while Mrs. Harry M. Howard admires another one. The booth was a feature of the St. Alban's Church Bazaar held October 25

Chateau or No

Vacations Don't Delay Mrs. Robert H. Dunlap

MRS. ROBERT H. DUNLAP, who gives generously of her time and energies to civic and cultural projects during the months she's in Washington, has an escapist's haven in her chateau in France.

But during the four months or so she's away, she doesn't exactly loaf. It's usually at Chateau de Coulennes in Loue that she gets an idea for another book and returns to the United States with her manuscript complete.

The author of "Encore for Love," her first full-length book written in 1937.

Katherine Dunlap has just sent to her publishers, "The Glory and the Dream," love story of Adrienne Le Couvreur, famous French tragedienne, and Maurice de Saxe, son of a Polish king, who became a famous French general. Title of the book came from Wordsworth's "Ode On Intimations of Immortality."

To write this fourth (or is it fifth?) story, Katherine Dunlap spent days of research in the Paris Bibliotheque Nationale, garnering facts about the leading characters, their times, their habits. She even visited the house where General Saxe lived in the French capital, found it occupied by the brother of her gardener, who is one of France's better known painters.

The result of her labors, according to a friend, is a "carefully worked and artfully recounted human story taken from history."

Mrs. Dunlap, jr., widow of a Marine Corps officer, has lived all over the world, writes with the same facility as she talks. She's a great niece of the late W. W. Corcoran who gave Washington its Corcoran Art Gallery, and Washington has been home to her family for five generations.

THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME, especially if there's a refrigerator in it, say Mr. and Mrs. Frank Henius, just back after spending almost four years in Europe.

Author, linguist and traveler, Mr. Henius visited Italy, France and Spain, will tell you that from a tourist point of view Spain is the most beautiful, with eternally blue skies and sunny warm days. Living is cheaper there, too, but an electric refrigerator, a luxury almost anywhere in Europe, is practically useless in Spain. Electricity is rationed in that country, which means that everything on a current stops several times a day.

From the American viewpoint life is lived in a topsy-turvy fashion in Spain, with all business closed from 2 to 6 in the afternoon and reopening from 6 to 8. The dinner hour is usually 9 p. m.; movies open for their first performance at that same time, and it's usually 3 a. m. before anyone thinks of going to bed.

But Mr. Henius became so interested in the country that he delved into its economic status and its folklore, has come out with two books. One, "Help Spain or Lose Europe" is a study of the present economic conditions and the country's future needs. The other, written as a form of mental relaxation from facts and figures, is a collection of Spanish fairy tales for American children.

As a consultant to Nelson Rockefeller when he was coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, the author collected the best known legends and songs of Central and South America, translated and published them into "Songs and Games of the Americas" and "Stories from the Americas." Many of the Spanish tales, he discovered recently, have been carried with the Conquistadores to South America, to appear in various forms with slight changes in locale and legend.

NOTE-BOOK NEWS:

Casualties of the Shoreham Hotel's reorganization to a strictly transit hotel, Mr. and Mrs. J. Donald Halsted have left Washington for East Hampton, Long Island. They own a large tract of shorefront property and are now established in a house on Barnes Lane. The Halsteds can almost be called Washington cave-dwellers, they've lived here since 1931.

One of the objets d'art brought to the embassy by the Yugoslav Ambassador and Mme. Popovic, is the marble head of a young girl placed on a pedestal in a drawing room niche. She's a Partisan, and the three peaks in the cap she wears are a symbol of Triglav—which means three heads—the name of Yugoslavia's highest mountain, a part of the Alps.

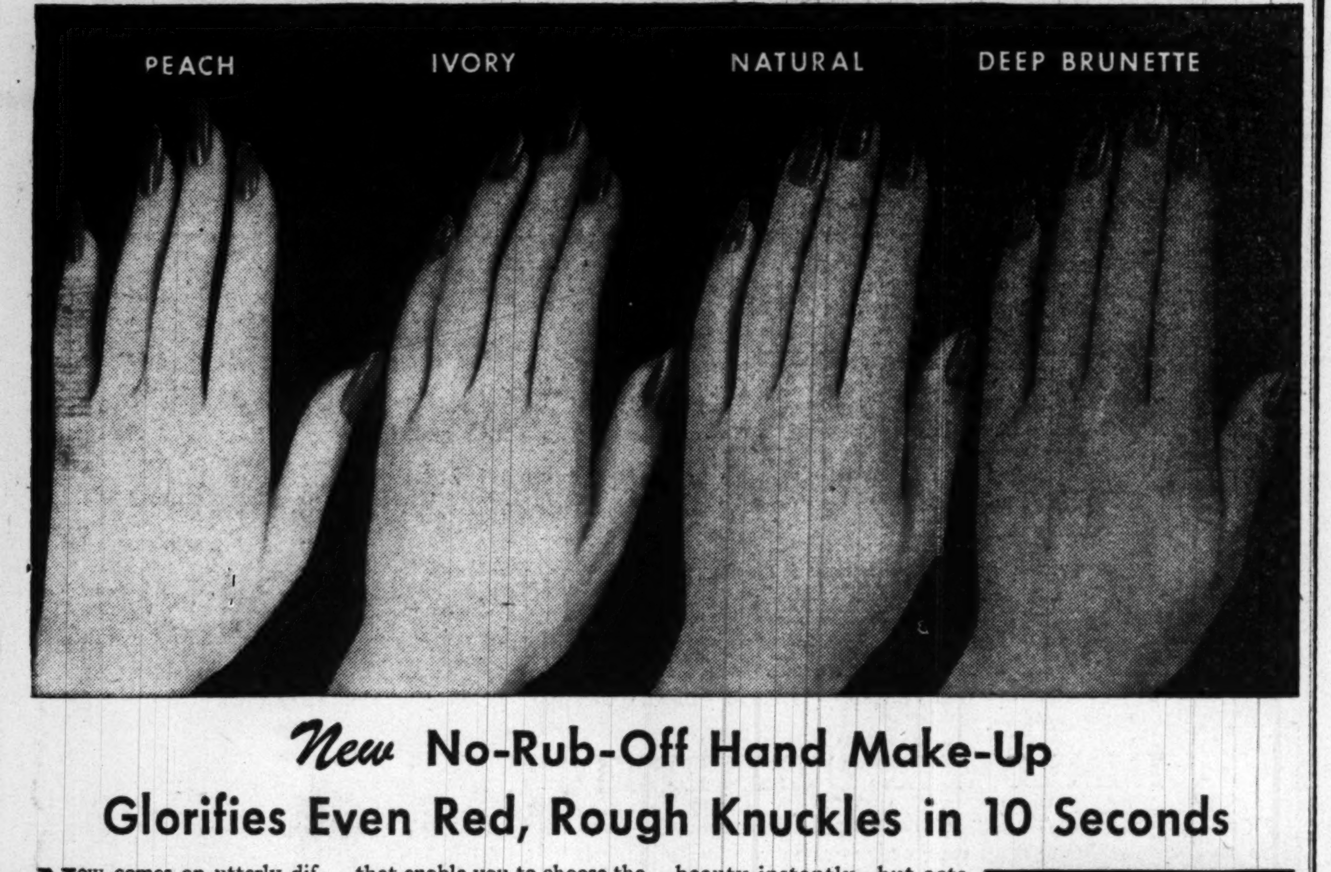
DON'T MISS THESE TREMENDOUS VALUES—TERMS TO SUIT YOUR BUDGET!

CHOOSE THE SHADE OF HAND BEAUTY YOU WANT



New No-Rub-Off Hand Make-Up Glorifies Even Red, Rough Knuckles in 10 Seconds

Now comes an utterly different kind of make-up designed especially for your hands! A natural-looking no-rub-off make-up that glorifies even "Hopeless" hands in only 10 seconds!

No more red, unsightly hands or knuckles. No more "work-worn look" or redness.

Immediately—redness, blemishes and brown spots are toned down and blended out. Age-revealing veins and imperfections are concealed to an amazing degree. Your whole hand is instantly glamorized in a way impossible up to now.

This new creation is called Lady Esther HANDS-UP—A delightfully delicate cream that comes in 4 exquisite colors that enable you to choose the exact shade of hand beauty you desire.

Won't Rub Off On Clothes

HANDS-UP is non-sticky; quick-drying—WON'T RUB OFF on clothes or gloves. Stays on until you wash it off! So it is ideal, too, for neck and shoulders.

Miracle Softening-Action

In HANDS-UP I have added a rare, imported ingredient—concentrated lanolin—for speedy skin-softening action. A new form of lanolin that is 2½ times richer than found in hand preparations previously used.

Thus, HANDS-UP not only endows your hands with new beauty instantly—but acts rapidly to soften and smooth your skin every flattering hour you wear it!

Applied in the daytime, HANDS-UP works continuously to offset the coarsening effects of housework and weather. Applied at bedtime, it exerts its gentle skin-smoothing action all night long—to counteract roughness and dryness.

Yes, with my new HANDS-UP, I guarantee you'll never need any other hand preparation of any kind. For HANDS-UP is the first complete and instant hand-beautifier the world has ever known! . . . At all cosmetic counters. Two sizes, 49¢ and 98¢, plus tax.

Smooths Hands Overnight

Prove Its Miracle Softening-Action Tonight

Tonight, before you go to bed, smooth my new HANDS-UP on your right hand only. Note the instant transformation. See how redness disappears, even from knuckles. See how freckles and blemishes are toned down and blended out.

In the morning, compare the difference in the way your two hands FEEL. Notice how much softer and smoother the right hand has become just overnight.

This is positive proof of the DOUBLE beautifying action of my new HANDS-UP:—(1) Instant new hand-loveliness the moment you apply it. (2) Continuous skin protection and softening every hour you wear it!

4 Flattering Shades

- PEACH—delicate finish for the lightest-toned skin.
- IVORY—ivory-like beauty for light to medium toned skin.
- NATURAL—a flawless look for all medium skin tones.
- DEEP BRUNETTE—sun-tawny finish for olive skin tones.

TRY IT FREE—at leading stores

Because my HANDS-UP is so new it is hard to believe how much beauty it adds even to the loveliest hands. So I invite you to try it free—at any leading drug or department store. Stores have a special supply for this purpose. So simply ask for a free demonstration of HANDS-UP today!

Turning Over an Old Leaf, Couple Decides to Convert It to a Brand New Use

FILCHING A LEAF from the dining table to make a coffee table for the living room is the idea broached by D. D., of Arlington.

DEAR ANNE:

We have no coffee table but do have a large mahogany dining room table with many leaves. At least two of these are never used and I have been wondering if we could make one into a coffee table. Do you think this would do? How do you suggest going about it?

D. D., Arlington, Va.

I think it would be an excellent use for an unused leaf if it is broad enough for the purpose. In fact, I have seen just such a table, made by a cabinet maker in another city. It had four short, stubby legs braced to the top with crosspieces. The new wood had been stained and varnished to match the mahogany top.

This job could best be done by a professional, but if you want to try it yourself, I'd consult an experienced man in a paint store about what to buy to duplicate the finish on the leaf.

DEAR ANNE:

Please, can you tell me what to use on a green wool face rug to remove dried chocolate milk stains? I did not know of them until they'd dried. Have tried a white detergent in water with no luck. Are very noticeable!

Mrs. D. H. W., Alexandria, Va.

Try this slightly more stringent treatment: Mix 1 tablespoon white flour and 1 tablespoon fresh whole milk to form a thick paste. Apply paste directly to stain, covering it completely, and allow it to remain for two to three hours. Then scrape up the paste with a dull knife or spatula and sponge the area three or four times with a clean cloth dampened in lukewarm water, completing the sponging with even strokes in the direction of the pile lay.

DEAR ANNE:

I remember, I am sure, that sometime ago you wrote in your column that there is a place in Washington where one can match almost any piece of material, or, if they do not have it in stock, they can order it for you if it is to be had. Now I would like to match material in a sofa pillow which I have had for some time, as the colors just tie in with some material which I wish to use this fall. Do you think you could supply me either with the name or the telephone number of this company?

M. A. S., Washington.

The firm mentioned only does matching of suitings and other woolen materials. For the benefit of other readers who have inquired about the same place, the telephone number is Republic 0618.

DEAR ANNE:

I should appreciate your advising me of the name of any company which deals in discontinued silver-plated flatware patterns.

Mrs. J. L., Mt. Rainier, Md.

The Silver State Exchange, Post Office Box 695, Colorado Springs, Colo., is one such company. In answer to a recent letter regarding the correct address of the exchange, Hugo C. Kapelke of this firm wrote: "We deal in discontinued patterns of sterling silverware and silver plateware in all makes of silver. We also take individual's silverware in trade on active patterns and also purchase silverware outright from individuals who wish to dispose of it. We are a mail order service."

By Bert Bacharach

ODDITIES: Publicity man Howie Mayer of Chicago wears four wrist watches at once. They tell him the time in Europe, New York, Chicago and Los Angeles... Gift ties from Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson are labeled "Stolen from Olsen & Johnson." . . . John Cameron Swayze, NBC-TV, owns 400 ties and claims he never wears the same one twice.

GADGETS: There's a new pocket-size blow torch that weighs only 10 ounces. Great for soldering, etc. $4 . . . Eastman has a plastic two-way flashguard for photoflash units — one side clear, the other matte — for direct or diffused lighting. 45 cents.

FEMININE COUNSEL: Beautiful Patricia Neal of Warner Bros. told us: "I like to see men wear sport clothes, but many of them are overdoing it. Business suits give an air of competence, authority and reliability. Sport clothes, in the wrong places, make the wearer look like a playboy."

Mrs. Simmons Weds in New York

A WEDDING of interest to Washington society took place November 3 in New York when Mrs. Gense Brashear Simmons became the bride of Laurens M. Hamilton of The Plains, Va. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Peter C. Brashear of Castleton-on-Hudson, and the late Colonel Brashear. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Morgan Hamilton of Sloatsburg, N. Y., and the late William Pierson Hamilton. He is also the brother of Mrs. Arthur Woods of Washington and of Brig. Gen. Pierpont M. Hamilton, USAF, also of Washington.

The ceremony took place in the bride's apartment, Chief Judge John T. Loughran of the New York Court of Appeals officiating.

The bride was educated at Farmington School and is a member of the Huguenot Society and of the Junior League. Her marriage to Zalmon G. Simmons of Greenwich, Conn., was dissolved in 1943. She has one son, Gilbert, a student at Choate School.

Mr. Hamilton is the great-great-grandson of Alexander Hamilton and a grandson of the late J. Pierpont Morgan. He attended Groton School. He was a member of the New York State Legislature for four terms, before moving to Fauquier County, Va., where he was elected Justice of the Peace in 1947. He is now coordinator of civilian defense for Fauquier County. He is a member of the Tuxedo Club and the Metropolitan Club in New York.

The newlyweds will make their home in The Plains after their honeymoon.

Daughter Born in Panama

Comdr. Charles B. Farwell, USN, and Mrs. Farwell, now stationed at Coco Solo, Canal Zone, announce the birth of a daughter, Josephine van Ausdal, on November 1 at the United States Naval Hospital in Coco Solo. The baby is the granddaughter of Capt. Neal B. Farwell, USN, and Mrs. Farwell of Washington.

State Department Aide Will Marry In San Antonio

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Richard of Alexandria, Va., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Elizabeth Mary, to Kendall B. French, son of Mr. and Mrs. U. R. Hellman of New Braunfels, Tex. The wedding will take place November 23 in San Antonio, Tex.

Miss Richard, a graduate of the University of Illinois, has served in the State Department Foreign Service in Madrid, Paris and Manila. Her fiance is a former Air Force officer.

Following their marriage the couple will live in San Angelo, Tex.

Bake Sale

The Women's Club of the Washington Highlands Jewish Center will hold a bake sale at the Standard Super Market, South Capital and Elmira sts., November 7. Mrs. Carl Klein is chairman for the sale.

B'nai B'rith Women Adopt New Project

The Walter Reed Hospital Committee of B'nai B'rith Women, Argo, held a tea at the home of Mrs. Harry Parsons, 3 Montrose dr., on November 1 to hear three Red Cross officials of Walter Reed Hospital speak, and to help form their committee for the coming year.

The project of the committee is to visit Walter Reed Hospital monthly, presenting entertainment for patients. Each serviceman in the ward being visited who has a birthday during that month will receive a gift from the chapter.

Mrs. Edith L. Gorenson, recreational booker for Walter Reed; Mrs. Margaret H. Hahn, field director, and Miss Ruby Patterson, recreation supervisor, addressed the group of approximately 50 women, outlining the work which the group is to undertake. The first party will take place November 13.

Mrs. Parsons is chairman of the committee and Mrs. Sam Levin is cochairman.

This is one of many projects which will benefit from the fund-raising campaign which will culminate in a dinner dance at the Hotel Statler today at 6:30 p. m. Mrs. Theodore Shapiro is president of Argo Chapter and Mrs. Louis Janof is general chairman of the committee for the project.

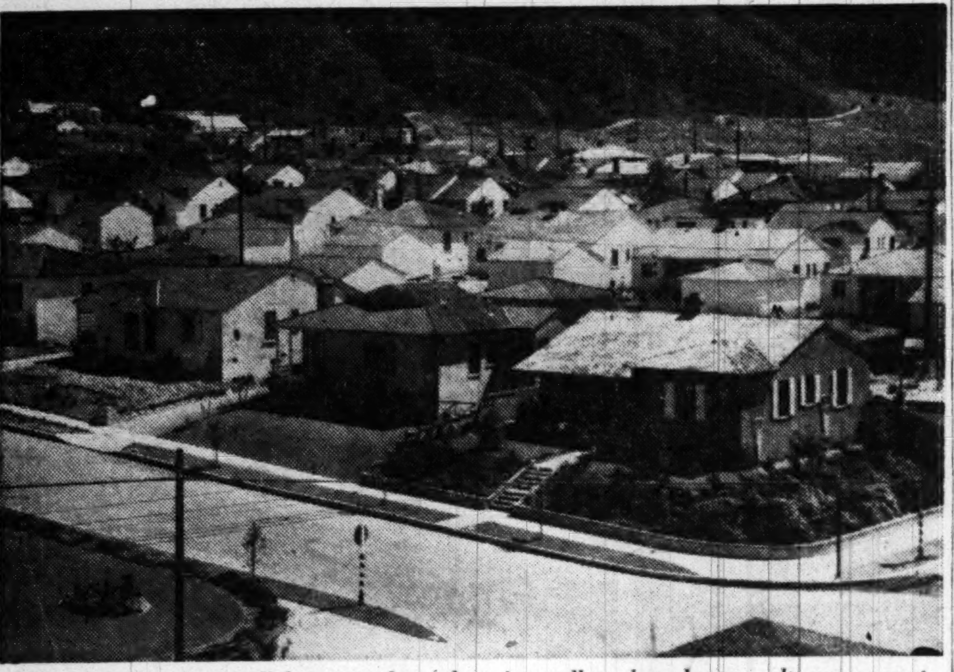
The Resale Market's Fine



Resale market for small homes such as these is excellent hereabouts, realty men report

By Robert P. Jordan

BIG house or little, three bedrooms or two, you can put it on the market right now in Greater Washington and likely do all right by yourself financially.

As a matter of fact, you don't have to sell it today to make out. You can wait for some time to come and still look forward to getting a good price. How long the resale market will remain rosy is unknown, but the demand here is sufficient to keep things humming for quite a while.

This is shown by a survey made yesterday of experts in the real estate field—sales agents, brokers, mortgage lenders. They disagreed on which has the better resale market — the two-bedroom or three-bedroom house—but agreed that both markets are lively.

On an individual basis, they pointed out, there are numerous factors that go to make up the resale value of any house. Factors like its age, location, condition, improvements, equipment.

But generally, they said, the home owner who is worrying now about the resale value of his house is worrying needlessly. There's a buyer for it, it doesn't take long for him to show up, and his offer is a good one.

The sales manager for one large realty firm gave this example:

SIX MONTHS AGO he put several new, two-bedroom homes up for sale in Prince Georges County at $12,950. They were quickly sold out. More of the same houses were built nearby. They are selling now for $13,750.

And still more of the same are under construction across the street. Their sales price: $13,950.

Obviously, the man who bought the first house at $12,950 could get his money back, at least, were he forced to sell now, said the sales manager.

He said that resale values are caught in the rising swirl of prices—that wage boosts and increases in the cost of materials make it impossible to build a house now for what it cost six months ago. One of the best yardsticks for determining the value of an existing house is to determine its replacement cost.

To an official of a large mortgage lending firm here, resale of houses is largely a matter of supply and demand. He argued that the two-bedroom house is the best bet. Like this:

The marriage rate is high. Young couples may live for a time with their in-laws, or in apartments. Then they find that they can buy a small, two-bedroom house—adequate for their needs—at a price that on a monthly basis amounts to less than the rent they were paying. So they buy it.

"Sure the resale value is good," he declared. "The demand for two-bedroom houses is very good around here." If built in volume for two or three years more, however—enough to catch up with demand—the resale market will go down, he said.

HE PREDICTED there would be no dropping off in production of small houses until all Veterans' Administration and Federal Housing Administration commitments made before the Government's credit controls took hold are worked out.

Another mortgage broker, however, contended that the three-bedroom dwelling has the best resale prospects. While the two-bedroom house is popular because of its low price, the three-bedroom structure is the one that people stand in line to buy, he said.

It's that third bedroom that makes the difference, he declared. Young couples want it because

Veterans Led In '49 Home Purchasing

THE Bureau of Labor Statistics yesterday came up with a comprehensive study of home buying in nine of the country's largest cities, including Washington.

Its survey takes in financing, prices and rentals of new, one-family houses in the nine cities for the last six months of 1949. The survey shows:

1. That nearly 40 percent of houses bought with mortgage financing were sold on a no-cash-down basis.
2. That veterans made up 75 percent of the purchasers, and that almost half of the veterans paid nothing down.
3. That most non-veterans put up more than 15 percent cash.
4. That around 60 percent of the houses purchased were sold at from $7000 to $10,000.

The nine metropolitan areas, the bureau reported, included Washington, Atlanta, Boston, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Seattle. The number of houses begun in these areas last year made up about one-fifth of all non-farm, one-family starts in the United States, it said.

On the whole, veterans bought less expensive houses than non-veterans, according to the bureau, "although the modest home was predominant in both groups."

IT SAID that only one-fourth of the veterans bought dwellings selling at $10,000 or more, while half the non-veterans purchased houses for that amount or above it. A relatively small number of non-veterans (slightly more than 10 percent) paid more than $15,000, however.

Only about 15 percent of the houses were bought without Government-aided financing. A third had both an FHA-insured first mortgage and a VA-guaranteed second mortgage. The remainder were about equally divided between those receiving VA-guaranteed financing (30 percent) and those with FHA-insured mortgages (24 percent). Few houses had a second mortgage that was not VA-guaranteed.

The 85 percent of one-family houses with Government-aided loans is roughly twice the proportion for the country as a whole during the July-December, 1949, period, it was reported. This reflects concentration of FHA and VA financing in metropolitan and urban centers, the bureau said.

Current regulations for GI loans require down payments of not more than five percent in the low price range and increase progressively to 45 percent at the highest price levels.

Under these regulations the vast majority (around 90 percent) of the houses secured by VA-

This five-story, 99-unit apartment house will be completed in about a year at 3435 Holmead pl. nw.

$750,000 Apartment House Planned

A FIVE-STORY, $750,000 apartment building for Negroes will be constructed at 3435 Holmead pl. nw., it was announced yesterday.

The elevator-type project, to contain 99 apartments and offices for a doctor and dentist, is the second of its kind here to receive Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance.

Details of the structure were revealed by Milton J. Prassas, its architect. He said the apartments will be efficiencies, one-bedroom and two-bedroom units. Rentals will range from $80 to $115.

The building will have a frontage of 150 feet on Holmead pl. It will be 127 feet deep. Construction will be of brick, with stone trim.

AN UNUSUAL ASPECT of the building will be its two-level basement, which will be 24 feet deep. The depth is nearly half as great as the structure's height from the ground to roof.

The basement will contain parking space for 42 cars, with a ramp leading from the rear of the apartment house to the garage stalls. Excavation of the basement has been completed, according to the architect. He said a building permit is expected to be issued next week.

Prassas estimated it would take about a year to complete the structure. Builder is Charles E. Smith, 923 15th st. nw. The owners are Holmead Apartments, Inc.

Excavation is also completed, the architect reported, for an eight-story, elevator-type apartment house for Negroes to be built at 1825 T st. nw. This project, he said, is the first of its kind to be constructed here with FHA loan insurance.

To be known as Holly House, it will have a total of 67 apartments and a doctor's office. It is expected to be finished by next summer at a cost of about $500,000. Parking faciilties for 26 cars will be located in the basement.

Credit Curbs Could Spur Low-Cost Housing

NO one knows whether the Government's home financing curbs will cut back housing production to the desired 800,000-850,000 new units next year—but this much is clear:

FITZPATRICK

Some builders plan to cease constructing "upper bracket" houses and to turn out low-cost units instead.

So reported B. T. Fitzpatrick, deputy administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, in a speech last Wednesday before the Potomac chapter of the National Association of Housing Officials.

The curbs, he said, are aimed at "relieving the pressure of current housing demand, which is being translated into rising prices," and "making room in the national economy for the military program that is coming." It is hoped they will "restore competition—not for goods and services, but for customers," he said.

Why need they be imposed? The economy has been and is operating at a high level. Now it must take on the military procurement program as well. The controls are necessary, according to the housing official, to make materials available.

FITZPATRICK emphasized that the overall idea is to "preserve the relative proportions of the housing program." The controls, he said, will not "change the direction in which we want to go." They will, however, "alter the speed" of the program.

"No one can say whether the regulation is enough or too little to get there. If we find it pinching in certain spots, we'll ease it up a little."

He said that rigid controls, such as priorities and allocations, were not imposed because they were unnecessary. The United States is much better prepared to go into a defense economy today than it was at the outset of World War II, he said.

According to Fitzpatrick, a trend by builders to erect low-cost housing is "more pronounced" than before the credit restrictions went into effect October 12.

He quoted Franklin D. Richards, commissioner of the Federal Housing Administration, as saying that a number of large-scale builders have announced their intention of getting out of upper bracket house production and into the low-cost field.

$1,250,000 Garage Sale Settled in Three Hours

PERHAPS the largest all-cash realty transaction in the District last week was sale of the Continental Building garage, 1514 L st. nw., to Ducirco, Inc., for about $1,250,000. It was undoubtedly one of the briefest large-scale negotiations on record.

The six-story structure was sold by the Southland Life Insurance Co., Dallas, Tex. Last month, Southland sold the 11-story Continental Building, at 1511 K st. nw., to W. R. Kelley for close to $4,500,000. Kelley is head of the mortgage lending firm which bears his name.

Purchase of the garage was handled by Nathan Poole, president of Drury Realty Corp. Poole said the transaction was "one of the fastest" in his experience. Negotiations were begun and completed in a week, he reported, with actual settlement taking less than three hours.

Ducirco, Inc., owner of the Dupont Circle Building, will continue to use the structure for parking purposes, Poole said.

First four floors of the building were constructed in 1942. Another two floors were added in 1946. Because the structure's floors are staggered, there are a total of 14 levels, including two in the basement. Up to 450 cars can be parked at one time.

The garage adjoins the Statler Hotel, and is widely used by hotel patrons.

This Week In D. C. Real Estate

One of the biggest items on the agenda of the National Association of Real Estate Board's convention, starting next Sunday in Miami Beach, has had relatively little publicity:

It's the proposed three-million-dollar campaign over a three-year period to bring home ownership to the attention of the public.

This "Own Your Home" campaign, according to the current NAREB newsletter, will provide a top-flight radio program supported by a "strong public relations campaign, including pamphlets, newspaper and magazine publicity . . ."

An amendment to the association's by-laws to make the program possible will be submitted for action on November 17 at the convention.

Oliver M. Walker, whose term as president of the Washington Real Estate Board ended recently, tossed a party Friday at the Metropolitan Club for officers, directors and committee chairmen of the board who assisted him during his tenure.

Three Washingtonians have been elected to the post of title officer of the branch office of the Lawyers Title Insurance Corp. here. They are Joseph A. Alexander, jr., Samuel Gillman and Frank W. Marsalek.

New assistant title officers are Anthony W. Roll and Mary Ulrica Donohoe.

Karl B. Frazier has been appointed president of E. M. Fry, Inc., Bethesda firm of realtors.

FRAZIER

Frazier has been associated for the past 18 years with the Edw. H. Jones & Co., realty organization, and has specialized in property management and sales.

E. M. Fry will remain with the firm as secretary-treasurer. Frazier's appointment will enable Fry to devote more time to investment properties, it was reported.

Second Research correlation conference of the Building Research Advisory Board will be held at 9:45 a. m. November 21 in the auditorium of the National Academy of Sciences, 2101 Constitution ave. nw.

Subject will be "Fire Resistance of Exterior Non-Load-Bearing Walls."

Committee Chairmen of the Montgomery County Real Estate Board have been named. They are:

William B. Wheeler, legislative committee; Samuel E. Bogley and Willard E. Beers, appraisal; George W. Robertson, program; Samuel E. Bogley, membership; H. Brooks Perring, finance; Elmer F. Blanchard, multiple listing; H. E. Thompson, jr., associate membership; A. J. Kessinger, arbitration.

CONNER & RYON, INC., realtors, are getting settled in their new office building at 1010 18th st. nw. Need for larger quarters forced the firm to move from its offices at 927 18th st. nw. about two weeks ago.

The modern, two-story structure, with a stone and glass front, is air-conditioned. The property is valued at $50,000. Offices of Cory Construction Co., Inc., also are in the building.

Controls Explained

Credit Controls 'Confuse' Many Prospective Buyers

MANY prospective home buyers, as well as persons already owning homes, are confused by the new credit regulations, according to J. Garrett Beitzell, president of the Washington Real Estate Board.

He issued a brief summary of the controls yesterday to help clear up the situation. As a starter, he observed that the October 12 credit curbs do not apply to all houses one-and-two-family alike.

First off, Beitzell said, the purchaser of a house that was completed prior to August 3, 1950, is not affected by the controls. IF he buys the house "conventionally." A conventional home loan is one made by banks, building and loan associations, mortgage lenders, and so on.

Thus, the owner of an old house—or a new one completed before August 3—can sell his house conventionally under whatever terms the buyer will accept and market conditions justify. If completed since August 3, and sold conventionally, it is subject to the new curbs.

The credit controls—which set up a specified cash down payment to be made according to the value of the house—apply to all houses, new and old, when purchased through loan guaranties afforded by the Veterans' Administration and the Federal Housing Administration.

The thing to remember here is the effective date of the regulations—October 12. Where commitments were made by VA or FHA, either to buyer or builder, PRIOR to October 12, the regulations do not apply. That explains why many homes are presently being offered for sale that are still in the process of being built.

25 Houses Slated In Forestville, Md.

Allen & Rocks, Inc., 437 Washington Building, has filed a permit application to build 25 one-story houses on 78th pl., 79th ave., Marion st. and Boones lane, Forestville, Md.

The dwellings, to be of frame construction, will be 34 by 24 feet each. They are part of a 123-home project.

20 Silver Spring Dwellings Okayed

Donley Construction Co., Inc., has received a permit to build 20 one-story homes in the 2200 block of Luzerne ave., Silver Spring.

They will be 32 by 25 feet and of frame construction. The builder-owner is at 8400 Piney Branch rd., Silver Spring.

Forum Will Discuss Curbs On Mortgages

THE EFFECT of mortgage credit curbs on home building in Greater Washington will be the topic of a forum to be held at 8 p. m. Friday at the Burlington Hotel.

Sponsor of the forum is the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington. According to James W. Pearson, executive director of the association, discussion panels will consider problems of home financing, building materials and 1951 construction plans.

The speakers will be Lawrence J. Lehan of the Joseph M. Zamoiski Co.; Durwood Boeglen of the Cushwa Brick and Building Supply Co.; William Leachman of Johnson & Wimsatt; Warren Gruber of the Hudson Supply and Equipment Co., and Oliver Walker of Walker & Dunlop, Inc.

Government officials who will participate are Thomas C. Barringer, director of FHA's District insuring office; Morgan B. Callahan, loan guarantee officer of Va's regional office, and Gordon O. Johnson, construction analyst of the VA appraisal section, and Stephen R. Barker, chief appraiser, VA.

Clarke Daniel, president of the association, will report on the recent meeting in Houston, Tex., of home builders officials.

Edward R. Carr, past president of the association, will give a keynote address.

St. Petersburg's Growing Pains

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Northerners returning to this winter vacation land are finding 100 million dollars in private and public construction completed or begun since they left for home last spring.

Topping the list in cost and importance is the 21-million-dollar 13-mile bridge across Tampa Bay, on which work was started a short time ago.

Wasted Dollars

The average householder lets 15 cents out of every fuel dollar fly out the window.

That's the estimate of Dr. Waldo Kliever, research director for the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co.

He suggests cleaning and recaulking the heating system, installing automatic controls to turn down the heat at night, and properly fitting storm windows.

Finally, he recommends sleeping with windows closed. Normal infiltration supplies enough air for anyone, he says.

guaranteed loans in these areas would have required larger down payments than in 1949.

Around eight in ten of the houses priced at $6000 to $8000, for example, were purchased with no down payment at all, according to the survey. Houses in the price bracket were 30 percent of all the homes bought with VA-guaranteed mortgages.

THE NEW CREDIT regulations, had they applied to homes bought in the latter half of 1949 in the areas surveyed, would have made it necessary for 60 percent of the homebuyers having FHA financing exclusively, to increase the down payment they made or buy a less expensive house than they selected.

This is true even though down payments of at least 15 percent were made on eight in ten of the FHA houses, and of 25 percent or more on a fourth of them, the bureau said.

Permit Sought For 24 Houses

Modern Properties, 7540 Eastern ave. nw., has applied for a permit to construct 24 two-story and basement houses in the 700 block of Peabody st. and the 6000 block of 8th st. nw.

The dwellings are to be 30 by 26 feet each. They will be built of brick and cinderblock.

Good Home Resale Market Reported

someday they figure their family will need it.

The prospect of a growing family, he said, makes the two-bedroom house economically unsound in the long run.

Hereabouts, a three-bedroom house generally costs from $1000 to $1400 more than the two-bedroom dwelling, a nearby Virginia real estate operator said. Nonetheless, it's a "much better puller." Demand for the two-bedroom house, though, is "steady," he observed.

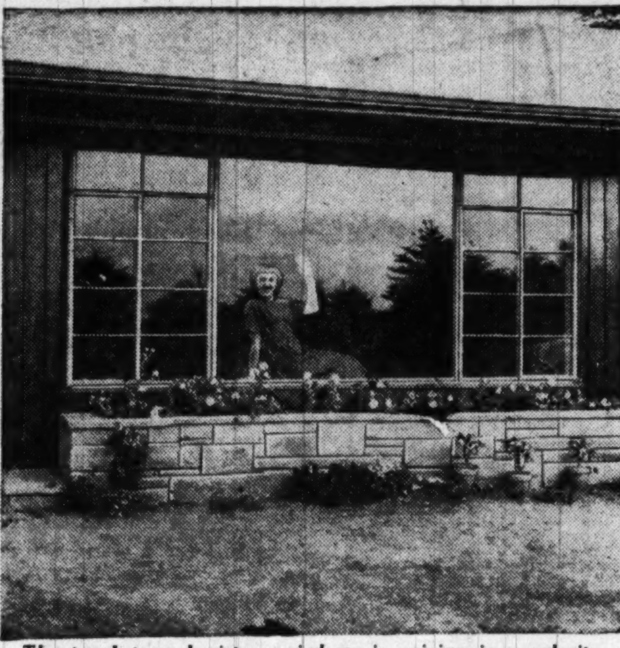
The president of a savings and loan association noted that there is an increasing market for the small home among older couples who prefer to live alone rather than with relatives.

He said, too, that ability to pay is an important market factor for future resale. The small house that can be bought or rented for less will be in demand rather than the more expensive large house, he predicted.

Six Homes Proposed

Marcus Construction Co., 6626 13th pl. nw., has applied for a permit to build six two-story and basement houses on Kingtree and Lytle sts., Wheaton, Md.

Outdoors Comes Indoors!



The trend toward picture windows is gaining in popularity, builders report. Here's one reason why: the wide glass area permits a fine view and makes the living room seem as big as all outdoors

Furniture Fashions of Another Day

At the time of Louis XVI, highly polished dark woods were used for the large pieces of furniture. The lighter pieces were often painted or enameled in white or pale tints—or lacquered in the Chinese manner. Even the harpsichords of the day were often painted a pastel tint overlaid with delicate garlands and Watteau figures.

18 Alexandria Houses Planned

A total of 18 dwellings—row houses—are scheduled for construction in the 600 block of S. Henry st., Alexandria, by B. C. S. Builders, Inc.

Plans call for the houses to be of brick and cinderblock, and two stories in height. Dimensions are 16 by 26 feet each. The builder-owner is located at 2210 Wilson blvd., Arlington. Permit application has been made.

Two Safeway Stores Slated

Sub-bids are being taken on two projected Safeway stores, one to be built by George C. Martin, 6213 31st st. nw., in Annandale, Va., and the other by Victor R. Beauchamp, Inc., 6837 4th st. nw., at 3715 Lee hwy., Arlington.

Permit Asked

Permit application has been made for construction of eight 1½-story houses in the 5700 block of Kingswood rd., Bethesda, by Carl M. Freeman, Inc., 1013 15th st. nw.

Hospital of Tomorrow

Designed for efficiency and set amidst park-like landscaping, tomorrow's hospital will stress patient privacy and comfort, according to a recent survey of hospital adminstrators. Featured in the hospital managers' specifications for the "ideal hospital" were: colorful interior decoration, individual room control of temperature, private and two-bed rooms, fluorescent lighting, acoustical ceilings and self-regulating beds.

25-Unit Apartment Building Scheduled

Permit application has been made for the construction of a 25-unit apartment house to be built at 5001-03 Hunt st. ne. by Jonathan Woodner Co., Ring Building.

The three-story and basement structure will be 64 by 156 feet and of brick and cinderblock construction.

How to Avoid Rot Behind Downspouts

When downspouts are put up before the house is painted, exterior wood rot often occurs. This can be avoided by painting the vertical section of wall before the downspout is put up. Rafter ends primed ahead of gutter installation will also stay sound much longer.

Aubinoe Is Named Chairman Of Architects-Builders Group

Alvin L. Aubinoe, first vice president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, has been named chairman of the group's architects-builders committee.

AUBINOE

This was announced yesterday by Clarke Daniel, president of the association.

The committee will conduct the Greater Washington phase of the countrywide home design contest sponsored by the National Association of Home Builders and Architectural Forum, the magazine of building. Upward of $100,000 in prizes will be awarded.

According to Aubinoe, plans are under way to display the area entries in a public place, such as a department store or a building and loan association. Certificates of award will be presented to the three best local entries and to two honorable mentions.

Immediate purpose of the competition is to bring better design to the small house, including better use of space and materials most generally available, Aubinoe said.

Another purpose is to bring architects and home builders closer together by prompting and encouraging the architects to study the home builder's problems for their benefit and the benefit of the home-buying public, and by demonstrating to the builder the advantages of newer and better professional design, he reported.

The competition is open to all architects and designers, draftsmen, and students who are residents of the continental United States.

Full information can be obtained by calling James W. Pearson, executive director of the association, at REpublic 1174.

Perimeter Heating Puts an End To Cold Floors

The warm air perimeter system combines the principles of floor panel or radiant heating with conditioning of the air.

Warm air ducts are embedded in the concrete slab floors around the outer perimeter and provide a source of radiant heat at the point of greatest heat loss in the house—the outer walls. Research has demonstrated that any structure can be kept comfortably warm if heat from the furnace is delivered to the point where heat is lost—as fast as it is lost.

Thus, by directing radiant heat at the inside base of the outer walls of a house, the perimeter system checks the primary cause of cold floors.

Old Buildings Get New Life

Modernization programs in old office buildings are helping owners maintain equal competitive positions with newly erected structures.

Such improvements as redesign of public halls and lobbies, widening of interior layout by eliminating partitions, improved elevator service, better lighting and installation of automatically controlled air conditioning and heating are making the older buildings more profitable.

About Enamel

Enamel is really varnish to which color, in the form of pigment, has been added. The resulting finish may have a high luster or none at all, depending upon the ingredients. Either way, it's durable, waterproof and easy to keep clean.

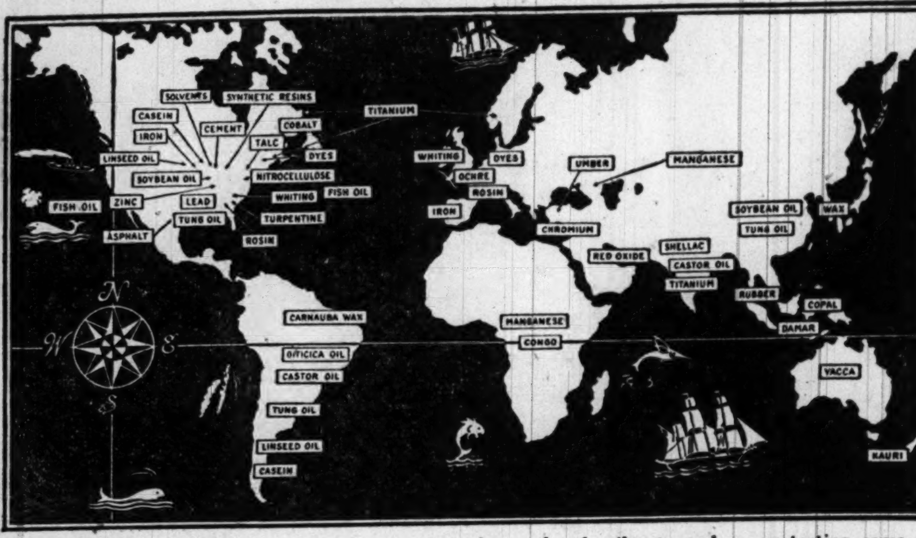
Paint Is a Much-Traveled Product



Paint ingredients are found all over the world. Oils and pigments, resins and waxes that are used in the manufacture of paint may travel thousands of miles to end up protecting someone's house. The United States produces many of these ingredients, but imports many, too

NOT MUCH romance in painting when you get down to the business of prettying and protecting your house with it, but the paint industry goes to the ends of the earth to get it for you.

Oils and pigments, resins and waxes that can be used in the manufacture of the industry's colorful products can be brought from scores of the world's far-flung ports.

In the field of pigments, lead is obtainable from Mexico and Peru, cobalt from Canada and the Belgian Congo. Sienna is available in Italy, whiting in England, and ochre in France. The red iron oxides come from Spain, while Turkey supplies umber.

Coal tar solvents, such as toluene, which are used in the manufacture of dyes and organic pigments, are frequently obtained in England. Mercury, used in mildewcides and antifouling paints for the hulls of ships, is found in cinnabar, brought from Mexico.

AMONG the resins, kauri and damar—which are used in the manufacture of varnish—are frequently obtained in New Zealand and the East Indies. Some are still brought from Malaya and the Philippines. The Belgian colonies in Africa supply Congo resin.

Manganese, the substance which speeds the drying of coatings, comes from Chile, Brazil, India and the Gold Coast of Africa.

One of this country's main sources of wax—carnauba, especially—is Brazil, which also supplies castor and oiticica oil.

While the domestic production of similar materials presents strong competition for the imported ones, some of them, such as shellac from India and the tin for containers, cannot be duplicated on this continent. The main sources of tin, incidentally, are Bolivia, Malaya and the East Indies.

Most foreign nations manufacture their own protective coatings, although the United States has 49 that are its chief customers. Among them are the Philippines, Venezuela, Mexico, Canada, Colombia, Cuba and Belgium.

Last year, American exports in this field topped $26,260,000. This represented approximately 2½ percent of the industry's production. Sixty percent of these exports were of ready-mixed paints.

Permit Issued For 12 Homes

Courembis Construction Co., Inc., 1901 N. 15th st., Arlington, has received a permit to build 12 one-story houses in the 4600 block of 20th pl. N. and the 2000 block of N. Woodrow st., Arlington.

The brick and cinderblock houses will be 42 by 25 feet each.

Making Things Hotter

Seven hundred thousand new gas furnaces installed in American homes in 1949 have boosted the total number of residential gas heating units to a new high of 7,200,000, according to Servel, Inc., gas appliance manufacturer. Ten years ago less than 3,800,000 homes were gas-heated.

Tips to Prevent the Blaze:

Small Fire Can Increase Up to 50 Times in 8 Minutes

SUPPOSE you came home to find your living room rug ablaze. What could you do about it in eight minutes?

In eight minutes a blaze can grow 50 times, according to the National Board of Fire Underwriters. Unless you got that first flame under control immediately, your house could be gutted before the fire department arrived.

The point is not to let the first flame get started. The living room rug might catch fire easily if you neglected to put a screen in front of the fireplace. You shouldn't put your rug close by either, and you'll play it safer if you have a fireplace apron of a fireproof material such as clay tile.

Here are some of the precautions to take around the house. They may save your life:

Dispose of all rubbish from the basement, garage and attic. Large accumulations of combustible material and waste are one of the big causes of fire.

Replace all worn electrical cords. Cords shouldn't run under rugs or over hooks.

Clean the furnace or oil burner before starting it this winter.

Check the areas around the cooking stove, making sure no inflammable materials are near it.

Make sure there are anough ash trays around the house. Careless placing of cigarettes is another big cause of fire.

Don't burn leaves on a windy day. When you do burn them, burn a small bunch at a time.

And, just in case—know where the nearest fire alarm box is, and learn the telephone number of your fire department.

The chromium finish on faucets, valves and other plumbing fittings can be kept shiny by occasionally washing with hot water and soap, then rinsing and polishing gently with a dry, soft cloth.

Build a Grid To Diffuse Fluorescent Light

To diffuse the light coming from an overhead fluorescent light, construct a grid of Masonite quarter-inch tempered hardboard and bolt it to the fixture.

The grid is built like the dividers in an egg crate. Cut notches 1½ inches deep and one quarter inch wide into the narrow edges of the hardboard pieces. The notches will reach half the 3-inch width of the pieces and will be at intervals of approximately 3 inches.

The pieces are joined by fitting the notches together and using brads or glue to fasten.

Inflation, Tighter Rent Curbs Seen

NORMAN STRUNK, economist for the Society of Residential Appraisers, predicts a "substantial tightening of rent control and a return of rent control to many places freed from rent ceilings in the past year."

And, he adds, inflation in real estate is bound to come—although the extent of the price rise is dependent on many factors.

Writing in the current issue of The Review, Strunk says inflation will be in evidence next spring.

"The main inflationary pressures . . . will be felt beginning about early spring of 1951 as the proportion of the gross national product devoted to military effort moves quickly from the 1949-50 rate of 6 percent up to 15-20 percent and possibly to 25 percent."

Strunk says in the article that stiff controls over the mortgage credit for construction of homes will be fully enforced, and that some direct restrictions over house construction may be imposed when the full force of defense spending is felt.

Historic Estate Near White Hall, Va., Purchased

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Mount Fair, historic estate located 3 miles north of White Hall, has just been purchased by Mrs. May R. Carpenter of Charlottesville.

The 337-acre stock farm is a part of the original 1747 land grant of 6000 acres taken out by Benjamin Brown. The plantation later was the property of his son, Capt. Bazaleel Brown, an officer in the Ninth Virginia Regiment. Captain Brown also served with the Revolutionary Army at Yorktown.

Mount Fair, 9-room home, which still has all its original handcarved woodwork, was built by one of Thomas Jefferson's craftsmen.

The Kids Love It

Architect Adapts Old N. Y. Brownstone to Modern Living

By Harriet Morrison

A HOUSE in Manhattan for two small boys, their sister (all under 10 years old), and their music-loving parents was the problem Architect Edgar Tafel solved by remodeling the first two floors of a typical New York brownstone.

The result is a spacious, restful home that is a fine example of present-day architectural solutions to family living problems.

From inside, the house seems far removed from city life. From the street, one sees nothing unusual in the brownstone except a two-story-high window of louvered glass through which light filters but little is visible.

ACOUSTIC plaster, cork floors and carpeting deaden city noises outside as well as children's voices inside. A maximum of adroitly placed built-in storage areas not only provides, needed space for family belongings but also gives rooms a spacious air by reducing loose furniture.

In addition, the built-ins simplify housekeeping problems. A minimum of free-standing furniture means less to move to clean under. It also means that the living area retains a neat look no matter how active the children are. When the storage space and seats are built in, how can playful youngsters disarrange a room?

As opposed to formal parlors of other years, the children are welcome in any part of this house.

They run their trucks on the rug in front of the fireplace or play the grand piano. There is nothing to break or trip over. Plenty of room is there for running or jumping with no chance of disturbing the neighbors.

Adjoining the family dining room is a cork-floored playroom separated from the garden at the rear of the house by large glass doors and glass windows lined with tanks filled with turtles, frogs, fish and the assortment of things city children do not always have space for.

Beside the playroom is an entrance to the kitchen and to the hallway leading to the front door. Through this front hallway the children can enter their playroom or reach their upstairs bedrooms without trekking through the living room.

The comfortable family dining room opens off the playroom. This same room is separated from the living room by a low storage partition that holds a built-in radio and record player as well as books and a fine collection of records. Built-in cabinets along one wall of the paneled dining room offer ample space for table needs.

BY MAKING the living room ceiling two stories high, Architect Tafel increased the spacious feeling of this room, was able to emphasize natural building materials and include some architectural features that are pleasing to the eye.

The fireplace wall is solid brick two floors high. To do this, Tafel tore out plaster and went back to the original brick wall of the brownstone. Other walls are paneled in light cedar and birch for interesting texture contrast.

On a balcony visible from the living room and directly over the dining room and playroom are the bedrooms. These are reached from the front hallway.

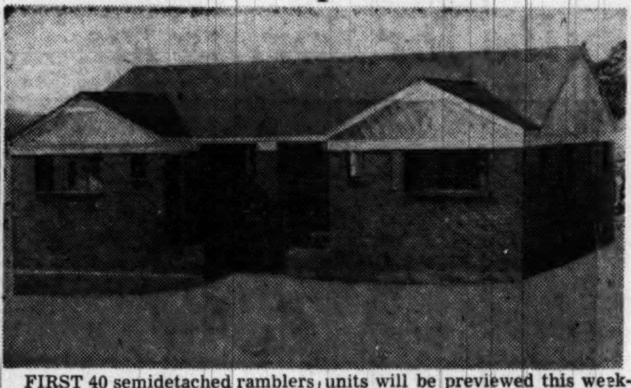
40 Ramblers Up, 102 to Go



FIRST 40 semidetached ramblers of a 142-home project are nearing completion in nearby Maryland.

The two-and-three bedroom units will be previewed this weekend. Of brick construction, they will sell at $11,950 and $12,450.

The project is located 3 miles beyond the Peace Cross in Bladensburg off Defense hwy. Builder is Edwin B. Feldman, Inc. Sales agent is the Woodmoor Agency, Inc.

Kitchens are a feature of the houses. All-electric, they contain a range, refrigerator, dishwasher, and garbage disposal unit. The houses also have full basements with laundry chutes.

Good house paint should have 70 percent white lead content, 15 percent titanium pigment and 15 percent zinc pigment to insure durability and hard, bright surface.

Construction Awards on Decline Here

CONSTRUCTION contract awards in Greater Washington in September totaled $40,014,000—2 percent less than the August figure of $40,763,000, and 39 percent less than the total for September, 1949.

This was reported yesterday by E. H. Keefe, branch manager of F. W. Dodge Corp., construction news and marketing specialists.

September awards brought the total for nine months of 1950 to $286,003,000, or 10 percent above the corresponding total for the first nine months of last year, Keefe said.

Residential contracts at $24,258,000 were 17 percent below August, but public and private works and utilities decreased 57 percent from August.

Two in every three women prefer colored bathroom fixtures instead of white.

For Mortgage Lenders:

New Savings Bond Proposed To Halt Realty Inflation

IF UNCLE SAM wants to halt real estate inflation, the Treasury Department should create a new savings bond for financial institutions bearing a return equivalent to the net on mortgage loans, recommends Arthur M. Weimer, dean of Indiana University's school of business administration.

"The rapid movement in building costs may, in itself, provide some brakes on building activity," according to Weimer. "However," he added, "the 'shortages' we are beginning to feel are the result of the war scare—not the war effort. While some contracts have been let and production on a few items started, there has not yet been enough war production to make an impact on the economy."

New controls brought a large drop in Veterans Administration and Federal Housing Administration home loan volume within a six-week period, he said. If more direct controls are imposed, such as material allocations and price controls, the experience of the building industry may be somewhat similar to what it was under such regulations during World War II.

Controls over new construction credit cover only a small fraction of the market, Weimer pointed out, but the financing of existing property is not controllable by any practical device.

Realtors' Group Reports Gain In Membership

MEMBERSHIP in the National Association of Real Estate Boards on October 1 totaled 44,101 realtors and 1108 real estate boards. This is a gain of 598 realtors and 16 boards over the totals on January 1, Harold J. Grove, chairman of the membership committee, announced yesterday.

Indiana scored the largest increase in realtors with 120 added, while New Mexico with 64 and Illinois with 63 ranked second and third.

New Mexico and California tied in the addition of new real estate boards with six apiece. Three States tied for the second spot with four new boards each. They are North Carolina, Indiana and Florida.

The Rose Is a Life-Long Friend

By Katherine Barrett Pozer

ROSE GROWERS have particular sentiment for some of the old varieties—doubtless because the rose is a lifetime companion. Rose fanciers generally are interested in the newer productions and cannot resist their purchase, but they like to see old favorites still winning top honors.

It was interesting at the Potomac Rose Show to hear the favorable comments on Frau Karl Druski winning "best in the show." This rose was introduced in 1901. It is a pure white hybrid perpetual and will climb if allowed to, although many people keep it trimmed in bush form. Flambeau and Numa Fay, both comparative newcomers, won second and third.

In Alexandria, Charlotte Armstrong was winner of "best," with the well-beloved Eclipse second and Crimson Glory third. Crimson Glory many experts consider tops in the rose world. Etoile de Holland, Peace and Grand Duchess Charlotte won the three first places at the Falls Church show.

THERE IS A WIDE CHOICE for rose growers who wish to add to their list each year. Great interest is being shown in the Brownell roses—a group of very hardy roses which have been developed by the Brownell family for 40 years. They undertook to produce a safer, sturdier race of everblooming rose bushes which would not only survive sub-zero temperatures but hot summers as well.

These roses come in 20 varieties, many of them fragrant. Tree roses in the group are said to have overcome the faults of tree roses and they stand the cold weather very well. Generally they are known as "sub-zero roses." The yellow Victory, the red Queen of Lakes and the pink Princess have been grown here with much success.

FOR A NUMBER of years rose growers have been guided by the All American selection of roses and have looked in catalogues for varieties which have their seal of approval. This year the All American selection jury has issued a list of 10 hybrid teas which they consider the finest roses introduced since 1940.

These roses have been tested under every possible variation of soil and climate and checked for such characteristics as hardiness, fragrance, length of flowering period and number of blooms.

In presenting the list the committee says:

"The color scheme of the top 10 garden shows a predominance of varieties of red. For richness and charm, there are seven varieties ranging from cerise, deep crimson and brilliant current red to soft pink. Among the reds and pinks are Charlotte Armstrong, Tallyho, Nocturne, Rubaiyat, Katherine T. Marshall, Mirandy and San Fernando. For contrast there are the pale gold of Peace and the rich butter yellow of Lowell Thomas. For novelty there is the brilliant bicolor, Forty-Niner, with its dramatic contrast of red and chrome yellow.

"For additional color, novelty and beauty the four 1950-51 winners, Fashion, Mission Bells, Capistrano and Sutter's Gold may be added. These were not considered in the top 10 selection because of their recent introduction, but each is a magnificent plant that will do well in any section of the country. Sutter's Gold adds another brilliant yellow, while Mission Bells and Capistrano bring new variations of pink."

Rose Mirandy . . . richness and charm

IN REVIEWING this list with some of the expert rose growers of the Washington area we find that they agree that many of the "top 10" have been successful here, some of them have been shy bloomers, have not done well so far. They all report Charlotte Armstrong, the oldest of the list (introduced in 1941) is outstanding. Rubaiyat, good once it becomes established, which sometimes has taken two or three years. Katherine Marshall, a lovely rose of good color, but rather shy in blooming. Peace, of course, excellent, as is Fashion. The others, while good roses for the collector or one with a large rose garden, have not proven as hardy or free blooming as some of the older roses.

While it is interesting to have the new varieties in the garden, it is seen that the older favorites still take many firsts in open classes, and in classes reserved for one variety there are always many beautiful entries.

We find Eclipse a consistent winner. It would be difficult to imagine a rose garden without the pink and red Radiance, two roses which have done so much to increase an interest in rose-growing. The fine Kaiserin Auguste Victoria still holds its own with the newer white roses. President Hoover and Talisman, with their fine coloring, are seen in many arrangement classes where their splendid coloring blends so well with the other smaller flowers. Dainty Bess always has a full class, for the beauty of this pink single cannot be surpassed and its hardiness belies its name.

Plants Keep Fishbowl Pure

IT'S OLD-FASHIONED these days to "balance" your fishbowl water in shaky trips to the bathtub or the kitchen sink every week.

It's much easier to "balance" the water with growing plants, and keep to aqua pura a year or more without seining and straining.

So advises Miss Bj Hamrick, director of the Aquarium Institute of America, of New York. AIA is the trade association of tropical fish and aquarium dealers.

The goldfish bowl, says Miss Hamrick, can be left in place, and beautified with any of 25 species of water plants. The plants, averaging 25 cents each, use up the fish wastes, keeping the water clear and clean.

Miss Mamrick reported on experimental studies by the institute in which home aquaria have been so "balanced" for more than 12 months.

Of course, since fish and plant-life are both stimulated by light rays, the thoughtful aquarium owner lights his about four or five hours daily with 40 watts of incandescence or fluorescence, she said.

Our Furniture No Longer Has Foreign Tinge

By Harriet Morrison

THERE'S a new look crystallizing in furniture design. It's as American as apple pie and ice cream. Our foremost designers, inspired by their observation of families at home in all parts of the country, have worked independently to create simple, sturdy chairs and tables that will blend with modern ranch-type houses that are outselling Cape Cod bungalows.

In describing this present movement in furniture design, designer T. H. Robspohn-Gibbings says that it expresses a new kind of luxury. "Luxury to us means peace of mind," he says. "We want to be at ease under all circumstances, to be without pretense, to do what we please." Gibbings himself prefers a wood bowl of lemons in the living room to a Rembrandt.

THE NEW furniture design movement, explains Mr. Gibbings, expresses an informality invented by Americans. "Who else in the world but Americans have teen-age daughters tramping over the hills in blue jeans," he asks, "or who else takes long family automobile tours for granted?"

Low tables are equally good as lamp, sofa or coffee tables. Storage pieces look as well in the living room as the bedroom.

THIS INFORMALITY does not rule out elegance. As Edward J. Wormley says, we have learned that elegance can be unostentatious. We appreciate the eye appealing silhouette of a chair, the play of sunlight around and through slim metal hairpin legs of tables. Elegance to Paul Frankl is the pleasure derived from natural materials such as fine woods, cork and marble.

"And it's selling like hamburgers," exclaims Gibbings, to prove Americans like what is happening to furniture today.

Demand Exceeds Supply

Virginia Terrain Found Favorable for Grapes

BLACKSBURG, Va., Nov. 4 (AP).—Grape production may well be an avenue for additional farm income in Virginia, two horticulturists suggested.

H. B Aroian, Virginia Tech associate horticulturist, and R. C. Moore, assistant horticulturist at the Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station, said the demand for grapes in local markets exceeds the supply and noted that well-managed vineyards in Virginia could be profitable.

Writing in "Grape Growing in Virginia," they said: "It should be recognized that commercial grape growing is a specialized business, which requires thorough knowledge of the problems."

However, the authors noted, Virginia is favorable to the grape industry.

The pamphlet, printed by the Virginia Agricultural Extension Service, said soil for grapes should be deep, well drained and contain ample organic matter. Fertile gravelly or sandy loan is preferred.

Shallow Land No Good

THE TWO horticulturists cautioned against heavy wet soil or dry shallow land.

East slopes provide protection for the vines against the drying southwest winds and gentle sloping land is preferred to steep slopes or land with poor drainings. Methods of planting for vines suggested include plowing and harrowing well in advance of planting. The rows should be placed about 10 feet apart and the vine should be planted about 8 to 10 feet apart in the rows.

During the first summer, the planted shoots will sprout into two buds. Train the strongest bud upward, the horticulturists advised, and remove the other bud after the danger of frost is passed.

After the bud has been removed, scatter 2 ounces of nitrate of soda in a circle around each plant. The authors caution against allowing the chemical to touch the vine.

Cultivate shallow and often and remove all competing weeds in the vineyard, Aroian and Moore suggest.

Vines Need Pruning

DURING the first winter, a trellis should be built to support each plant. The most popular trellis is strung wires along a line of posts 16 to 20 feet apart. The wires, of course, should be parallel.

In April, the vines should be pruned. It was noted that pruning regulates the growth of the plant and the size of the clusters.

Later, when the grapes become ripe, it is suggested that the best clusters be bagged to protect from birds and the many grape diseases

The ripeness of the fruit is determined by the color and flavor. Usually, it is necessary to pick the vines twice to permit full ripening of the fruit.

Usually the grapes are packed into containers as they are picked.

Bold Patterns, Bright Colors Put Old Prints in Demand

A FINE old print doesn't demand a square piano or a marble top table in the same room. Its charm works just as effectively in a simple, contemporary background.

Because of their bold patterns and simple forms, most of the famous old prints are naturals for contemporary settings. Their sizes are in the right scale. Their colors are the deep, vigorous ones that show off best with the bland surfaces of modern woods.

NATURALLY, you have to pick the right print. Almost all bird prints fit into contemporary settings, according to Harry Shaw Newman, who plans to include a special group of old prints for modern rooms in his booth at the annual New York Antiques Fair next week. Because of their bold, sculptured shapes, Newman specially recommends the Audubon birds, though bird prints priced for budget shoppers can be used with equal success, he adds.

Old flower and fruit prints are on the Newman-recommended list for modern rooms. Currier and Ives still-life groups are well scaled. Both fruit and flower prints work well when they are identically framed and hung in banks of 12 to 16 to cover a wall or build up a low piece of furniture.

Old landscape prints often reflect the nineteenth-century artist's fashionable and imaginative dreams of the tropics. Used in a modern room, they echo the modern urge for bringing the outdoors inside.

WATCH the framing of an old print to go in a modern room, Newman advises. Don't use the original frame unless it is simple and beautiful, and the wood color goes with other wood in the room. As a general rule, the best frame finishes are the same as the rest of the furniture, according to Mr. Newman. Bleached oak, pickled pine, off-white or black teak wood are right with most modern rooms, he says. For the most consciously modern interiors, exotic frames of wormy cypress, driftwood or bamboo can be found.

Whether or not to use a mat depends on the size print you need. If you want to use a mat, it doesn't have to be the traditional white, Newman says. You can set your print on rough-textured fabric, like your sofa. You can use color.

Garden Club Notes

ARRANGING FLOWERS will be the subject of Mrs. Ruth Kistner, nationally known lecturer, when she appears before the Yates Garden Club Thursday, November 9.

There'll be morning and afternoon demonstrations, starting at 10 a. m. at the Alexandria Recreation Center. Luncheon will be available at the snack bar. Tickets for the entire day may be obtained by calling Mrs. Harry W. Harris, Temple 7991. They are being sold for the benefit of the garden restoration at the Anne Lee Memorial Home.

INSTRUCTIONS on how to select the best exhibition dahlias will be given when the National Capital Dahlia Society meets Thursday, November 9, at 8 p. m.

The National Museum, 10th and Constitution ave. nw., will be the scene of the meeting, to be held in Room 43. Experts will discuss dahlia selection for the medium-price class, for "A," "B" and miniature dahlias. The public is invited.

GUSTAF MALMBORG, landscape architect of Lancaster, Pa., will be the speaker at the Thursday, November 9, meeting of the Men's Garden Club of Montgomery County, speaking on the planting of the 10,000-foot home site. Men gardeners are welcome as guests at the Battery Park Clubhouse, 107 Glenbrook rd., Bethesda, at 8 p. m.

The MULCH-VAC
Leaf Pulverizer (Vacuum Action)
One Operator Can Sweep Six Acres In One Day!
$435.00

The Mulch-Vac Leaf Sweeper completely solves the leaf problem.

It sucks up all the leaves—new or old, dry or wet, loose or trampled—in a 3 ft. swath. It thoroughly mulches the leaves. Fine mulch is blown to one side, or gathered in a collector.

The leaf mulch disintegrates to a natural fertilizer in a few days. You hardly notice it in the grass. It is 10% better than any commercial fertilizer.

Bulbs for Spring Must Go in Now

Scilla campanulata displayed against a curtain of evergreen foliage

By Alfred Putz

IT IS PERFECTLY natural that gardeners should place great emphasis on a colorful spring garden. The change from months of cold and dreary winter to the inspiring beauty of the spring-flowering bulbs has an exhilarating effect on mind and body.

Results invariably are most pleasing where the gardener follows a definite plan. The best plans are made right on the spot—and that means in the garden. With pencil and pad in hand, view the various garden features, preferably from a little distance to get an over-all picture. Then visualize what is needed where to create a special spring appeal. Jot down the thoughts indicating at least the color most appropriate for each position and the size of the space available for each unit.

The rest of the work may well be done in a comfortable armchair with the help of your favorite bulb catalogue.

Planting in groups is essential to obtain a conspicuous and artistic effect. Five hyacinths, 9 daffodils, 12 tulips—always of the same variety—in each group are minimum numbers. The more there are in each group, space permitting, the more eye-compelling the picture. However, there are exceptions to serve special purposes. A double row of hyacinths, with the bulbs staggered in the two rows, will look mighty pretty along the edge of a bed or border. With tulips or daffodils three rows look twice as attractive as two.

GROUP PLANTING of the so-called lesser bulbs, which include crocus, snowdrops, chionodoxa and scilla, is equally as important. They look best planted in irregular patterns of 25 bulbs or more to each. For a natural effect let them drop from the bag within the allotted area and plant where they fall except for re-spacing those that may touch one another.

Fortunately, bulbs are easy to grow, Even the very novice cannot fail if he follows a few simple rules. Buying quality bulbs is of the utmost importance—bulbs that are healthy, vigorous and large enough to produce full-size blooms. Undersized, weak or diseased bulbs are no bargain no matter how low the price.

Most kinds prefer sun, but some also do well in semi-shade. Many spots shaded during the summer and fall are suitable if the shade is cast by deciduous shrubs or trees, which are leafless when the bulbs are in bloom.

If the location is well drained, even relatively poor soil will yield a good display the spring after planting. That is possible on account of the food stored in the bulbs. But where bulbs are expected to thrive for years there must be enough nourishment in the soil to supply energy for succeeding seasons.

MOST EXPERIENCED gardeners prefer bone meal for enriching the soil for hardy bulbs. It is a perfectly safe fertilizer even if some particles should touch the bulbs. Its food elements become available slowly, and that is to the advantage of the plants. Five pounds to 100 square feet (10 feet by 10 feet) is an average application, but twice that quantity will do no harm. To perform its function it must be mixed with the soil 8 inches below the bulbs, as that is where the roots are active.

A complete commercial plant food also may be used by itself or in combination with the standard quantity of bone meal. Four pounds to 100 square feet is ample. Thorough mixing with the soil below the bulb level is especially important with it, and to prevent any fertilizer particles from touching the bulbs, an inch of fertilizer-free soil is added for them to rest on.

While abundant food is necessary for permanence it is not the sole requirement. The soil also must be porous and well supplied with organic matter. The addition of coarse sand is of great benefit to heavy soils, and virtually all soils are improved by adding peat moss, sedge peat, commercial humus, leaf mold or compost soil. Manure, unless completely rotted, never should be mixed with the soil for growing spring-flowering bulbs. The one exception to this rule is hyacinths. These thrive on rotted manure. Additions all must be thoroughly mixed with the soil within the expected root zone.

MANURE, except fresh, may be used as a winter mulch over the soil. A layer 3 to 4 inches deep is plenty and the time to apply it is after frost has entered the soil. Leaves, straw or marsh hay may also be called upon to serve this purpose.

Where winter changes repeatedly from below to above freezing temperatures, these covers may do more harm, than good. They prolong the effects of balmy spells and that is exactly opposite to what they are supposed to do. Evergreen branches in this respect are much better if placed after the ground is frozen. Their open structure is no impediment to the quick penetration of cold when a change in that direction occurs. They may remain as long as they do not interfere with the spring shoots, but other covers should come off as soon as the shoots pierce the surface.

For lilies, late fall is by far the best planting time. The only exception is the Madonna lily. This should be planted in September. Lilies respond to virtually the same conditions as spring flowering bulbs. They provide a grand show while the latter are taking their summer and fall rest.

New Radiant Heat Panels on Market

TWO new models of radiant heat panels have recently been put on the market. The General Radiant Heater Co. of New York has a British-designed screen panel that gives off electric radiant heat with individual thermostatic control. And the Continental Radiant Glass Heating Corp. of New York is making a junior model glass panel of 630 watts for use in small rooms like dens and bathrooms.

And Happy

A Built-In Play Corner Will Keep Your Youngster Handy

IF YOU have an active toddler moving about the house, here's a suggestion that will save you time and energy, keep the child out of harm's way and train him to be tidy at the same time:

Build him a play corner.

Choose a spot where the youngster can easily be overseen as he plays. A bedroom corner, set off by a folding partition is a good place. So is one end of a hallway adjoining a room in which you are working, or a corner of the kitchen or utility room.

The basis of the entire play-corner is an L-shaped bench set against two walls where they meet in the corner. The bench should be made high and wide enough for the child to sit on comfortably. If there is a window in the corner, so that he can gaze outdoors from his play-seat, he will be further entertained.

The child will use his bench frequently as a table. A simple board shelf, fastened to the wall a foot above the bench, will hold small toys and unbreakable dishes where he can reach them.

The play-bench can be enclosed to make a storage bin for his larger toys. Use a good grade of lumber and put it together smoothly at the ends of the bench. Close off the front with a hinged or sliding door.

This simple device will keep a child's playthings off the floor and reduce the litter that inevitably accumulates around an active child.

A CLEARLY DEFINED separation line is needed to mark off the child's play area from the rest of the room or hallway. Let the floor do this for you. Soil and footprints will be almost unnoticeable on powder blue or rose-beige or soft gray or green flooring.

A space marked off from the rest of the room in this fashion gives the child a place he can feel is his own and he will soon learn to confine his toys and his activities to his own quarters.

Simple additions to the basic furnishings will add interest to the play-corner. A large blackboard on which the youngster can draw, and a bulletin board on which he can pin his favorite pictures will be permanent fixtures which can remain after he reaches school-age. The play-corner can become a study corner merely by adding a small desk and a lamp.

If in the kitchen, it can be converted into a dining corner for the family when it has served its original purpose.

Housing Controls to Bring Boom in Home Improvements

ONE RESULT of the new Federal mortgage controls will be a junior-size building boom in the modernization field, predicts Tom McDonald, vice president of the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co.

Moreover, he said yesterday, many persons now will buy used homes with the idea of modernizing them. He pointed out that the credit curbs do not apply to old houses purchased conventionally.

The new restrictions permit spending up to $2500 on home improvements. That's enough, according to McDonald, to pay for a thorough face-lifting job. Here's how a modernizing program on a six-room frame house could shape up, he said:

An automatic heating system can be installed for about $400. Installation of a modern kitchen, including new counters, cabinets and sink, will cost about $600. An electric dishwasher and automatic washing machine can be added for another $750. A complete painting job, inside and out, will run about $700.

Educated Foresters on the Rise

Forestry in this country is only 50 years old. The first professional forester was graduated from college in 1900. Today there are 12,500 practicing foresters in the United States.

Oregon Timber on the March

In the largest forest rehabilitation program ever undertaken, the State of Oregon has launched a 10-million-dollar program to get Oregon's 750,000 acres of State forest land under full protection.

Turpentine Road

If the trees used in this country for the production of turpentine were planted 50 feet apart, they would shade a road a million miles long, says the National Paint, Varnish & Lacquer Association, Inc.

Conditioning's Required

'Indoor Comfort' Depends On More Than Heat Alone

HEATING and ventilating engineers know that to enjoy true "indoor comfort," the human body requires more than just heat alone. Tests made in research laboratories have demonstrated that for the human body to feel really comfortable indoors it must be surrounded by air that has been conditioned in a number of ways.

Includ-d among these qualities of indoor air conditioning are:

Air at a satisfactory temperature to serve properly the heat needs of the body.

Air containing the proper amount of humidity to serve the body's moisture needs.

Air free of dust, dirt, and pollens to make breathing easier.

Fresh air to serve the body's oxygen needs. Air free of germs and bacteria, or pure air, to provide healthful living.

Plenty of Tubs for Everybody

LOOKS LIKE they're going to make more than two million bathtubs this year.

That will be a new record. Same goes for water closets—total volume is expected to reach more than 3,500,000. Ditto lavatories: the forecast is for a volume near 3,200,000.

The kitchen sink hasn't been left out. Not by about 2,500,000 of them—the number that figures to be built this year.

This intelligence has been turned up by the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau. All predictions are based on the assumption that production continues at the present rate.

The record output of more than two million bathtubs will enable the plumbing industry to take care of the largest home-building program this country has ever seen, according to the bureau. It will also take care of modernization needs, it was said.

Step Saver

For those who are still hand-firing their heating systems but want as many of the conveniences of automatic firing as possible, the answer is a thermostatically-controlled damper operator.

This device automatically operates the drafts under the control of any two-wire thermostat, says the Plumbing and Hea'ing Industries Bureau. It saves trips to the heating boiler or furnace and offers greater fuel economy.

Homemade Paint, Properly Applied, Tints Hardboard

THERE ARE two steps to take in achieving beautiful tints on Masonite hardboards used as wall or ceiling panels or for other purposes:

Make the paint yourself—and brush off the excess immediately after applying it.

Any paint store can supply the materials needed for mixing these tints. Variations are readily obtained by changing the portions of ingredients.

Advantages of this method are that the tint is cheaper than paint, the colors are attractive and highly scratch-resistant, the natural burl of the hardboards shows through attractively, and the coating is so thin that the skin surface of the board is, in fact, the wearing surface.

Typical tints recommended are:

Dark Blue—1 part Prussian blue color in oil; 2 parts turpentine; 8 parts white flat paint.

Light Blue—1 part Prussian blue color in oil; 8 parts turpentine; 32 parts white flat paint.

Light Green—1 part chrome green light color in oil; 4 parts turpentine; 16 parts white flat paint.

Yellow—1 part chrome yellow light color in oil; 2 parts turpentine; 8 parts white flat paint.

Rose—1 part American vermilion color in oil; 4 parts turpentine; 16 parts white flat paint.

Pink—1 part Venetian red color in oil; 8 parts turpentine; 32 parts white flat paint.

Gray—1 part turpentine; 4 parts white flat paint.

Beige—1 part raw sienna color in oil; 8 parts turpentine; 32 parts white flat paint.

As an alternative to doing one's own mixing, suitably colored flat paints, thinned with turpentine, may be used.

Kitchen shelves should not be higher than 82 inches from the floor, since this is usually the maximum distance a woman can reach up and handle an object.

Widespread Use of Home Garbage Disposal Units Forecast

Home garbage disposal units some day may be in almost universal usage, the Federation of Sewage and Industrial Wastes Associations was told yesterday.

Morris M. Cohn, a public health engineer of Schenectady, N. Y., and editor of Sewage and Industrial Engineering, reported more than a half million disposal units are in use. The federation opened a four-day meeting Monday at the Statler Hotel.

"Some communities still prohibit the use of home units," said Cohn. "Some [do so] by ordinance and others by unwritten rulings for reasons of ineffective sewer design, inadequate sewers, overloaded or no treatment facilities."

But Jasper, Ind., he said, has outlawed the garbage can in favor of the disposal unit. The town is "backed by the first State law in history that permits municipalities to purchase, install and finance home waste units as a sanitation utility."

Two Complementary Views of G. B. Shaw

A Master of Mockery, His Supreme Wit Lifted Insult to the Level of Poetry

By Walter Winchell

MAN and superman.

While humanity lowers its head in sorrow over Shaw's passing, it must also stand in awe of a life so gloriously fulfilled. When compared with his monumental accomplishments—even death becomes a minor experience . . . Born before Lincoln was inaugurated, Shaw was a young man when Bismarck crushed Napoleon. He walked through history that included the formation of mighty nations and the disintegration of empires. He witnessed the ascent and decline of numerous despots. His lifetime spanned civilization's most catastrophic events as well as mankind's most incredible achievements.

WINCHELL

Shaw came into the world just a decade after the discovery of anesthesia—and lived to see the miracle of penicillin.

His longevity is impressive, of course. But far more compelling is the everlasting quality of his life's work. No man ever made better use of his years. And his final accomplishment is Shaw's greatest—for it is a triumph over death itself. He was one of the rare humans who lived to see himself placed among the immortals.

SHAW was a master of mockery. He transformed the thumb-on-the-nose into a downright artistic salute. His supreme wit lifted insults to the level of poetry . . . Shaw was a one-man parade in his honor who beat his own drums and could make words march to the tune. He used ridicule like a soldier uses a gun—and he never ran out of ammunition.

HIS greatness is almost indefinable, because it is compounded of so many conflicting qualities. His personality encompassed a wide range of paradoxes . . . Shaw was a pompous egoist in public and privately shy. He was a socialist whose own rugged individualism offered the most effective rebuke to a political theory based on human regimentation. He was a cynic who never lost faith in the essential decency of mankind. He was a hard-headed realist who produced some of the most tenderly beautiful love stories. He scorned sentiment. Yet his devotion to the theater was almost mystical.

Shaw's literary efforts (and books about him) occupy several library shelves. Yet he had the great gift of being able to speak volumes in a single lightning flash of thought. His wit fused a philosopher's intelligence with a sharpshooter's accuracy . . . The lengthiest sermons lacked the pith and power of his observation:

"The liar's punishment is not in the least that he is not believed, but that he cannot believe anyone else."

He summed up a nation's character with one line: "An Englishman thinks he is moral when he is only uncomfortable" . . . He sketched a way of life by noting: "Take care to get what you like or you will end by liking what you get" . . . He expressed a universal emotion with his classic comment: "Youth is a wonderful thing. What a crime to waste it on children."

Shaw joined the select circle of civilization's oracles whose wit eventually attain the timeless quality of proverbs.

YOU could tell the plot of Shaw's life story simply by recounting the infinite anecdotes heard. There was more truth than conceit in his remark: "I often quote myself. It adds spice to my conversation."

For more than a half-century his rapier-retorts provided fodder for books,

Many Men Waxed Dull in Writing About Him; But the Best About Him, He Wrote Himself

By Richard L. Coe

WHEN THE NEW YORK theaterowners this week announced they would dim Broadway's lights for a full minute at the passing of George Bernard Shaw, you could almost hear the youthful old man chuckle.

What a well-meant gesture; and how hopelessly inadequate.

For Shaw changed the world and though he made fortunes for American theater people, he also, among other things, was the grandfather of the present British government, changed people's eating habits, was John the Baptist for the women's suffrage movement, was an authority on pruning trees, popularized Ibsen and Wagner, thereby revolutionizing the theatrical and musical worlds, tackled Nietsche before Hitler was born and Karl Marx when Stalin or Trotsky had hardly let out a peep, was an ardent sunbather, crusaded for simplified English and, in general, was generations ahead of everythiny that's happened in the twentieth century.

So to write about G. B. S. at his earthly death amounts to fatuous presumption.

SINCE he left behind him volumes on every conceivable subject, an obituary in the traditional sense is unnecessary. For some years this writing upstart has been under orders from his managing editor to prepare an "obit" to run, he stated when pushed, "about four columns." In preparation for this task which necessarily failed to make any deadline, my book shelves are cluttered with Shaw's own books, books others wrote about him and clippings running from "alcohol" to "Xantippe."

As a compromise, I'd like to urge you to make your own research about Shaw. You'll never find him dull, though those who've written about him manage to be so at length.

For an introduction, the average reader couldn't do better than Hesketh Pearson's "G. B. S. A Full Length Portrait." Harper's published this one, but the Garden City Publishing Co. reissued it in a popular-priced reprint.

His official biographer is Dr. Archibald Henderson, of the University of North Carolina. One of his books came out in 1911, since which time he's written voluminously. Most likely of Henderson's works to serve your purpose his "Bernard Shaw: Playboy and Prophet," which appeared in 1932.

Controversial and not recommended by Shaw are the works of Frank Harris, whose "unauthorized biography" appeared in '31.

A more recent picture of him, "Days with Bernard Shaw" was published by an Ayot St. Lawrence neighbor, Stephen Winsten, last year. Shaw seemed later to disown this one, though Winsten has since continued his observations, which Shaw once thought "charming," a curious word for him. The Winsten book, however, does seem to contain authentic observations by Shaw in his 90's which ring true.

BUT THE best on Shaw is what he wrote himself. In recent years he seemed to be anxious to set the record straight, a record about him others began to write 50 years ago. William Irvine has pointed out that in his later years Shaw seemed "bored with his biographers if not with himself." These "Sixteen Shelf Sketches" were published two years ago and the second chapter contains Shaw's own view:

"I have had no heroic adventures. Things have not happened to me: on the contrary, it is I who have happened to them; and all my happenings have taken the form of books and plays. Read them, or spectate them; and you have my whole story; the rest is only breakfast, lunch, dinner, sleeping, wakening and washing."

'One Man's Opinion'

Our Orchestra's Looking Good

By Paul Hume

"ONE MAN'S opinion—that's all a music critic is—just one man's opinion!"

How often have you thought that? Or heard it? Or wished you could say it to a critic?

Well the statement is true, for sure. Any critic will agree with it. But here are the opinions of three critics, none of them on this newspaper, and all saying much the same thing. Naturally each says it in his own way. It's a good thing they vary, too, or we might all be accused of collusion.

FROM THE Times-Herald of Thursday, October 26: "Mitchell has himself made progress in his art. He has gained poise and authority . . . and knew his score in the difficult Barber symphony . . .

"He placed great confidence in his fine first bassoon and must have looked with favor on his new first oboe."

Under the Daily News' headline, "National Symphony Evokes Cheers at Opening Concert," the critic of that paper went all out, saying,

"I don't think it is merely a matter of personal opinion that the National Symphony Orchestra . . . outclassed the Philadelphia and the London Philharmonic.

"It's about time Washington faced the facts of musical life. Years of hard work by the late Hans Kindler and now, by Mr. Mitchell, have given the city an orchestra it can be proud of—proud enough to sacrifice, say, a couple of drinks for a concert ticket."

IN THE Evening Star one found opinions expressed in both Times-Herald and Post. Star Critic Alice Eversman said, "Gain has been made in solidity of sound, in sonority and in clarity. The orchestra was made to draw on its tonal resources from the whispered pianissimo to sonorous opulence."

And the headline in the Star was echoed in the Post review. As the head put it, "National Symphony Opening Concert Promises Rewarding Season."

The note of promise, and of achievement, too, was one The Washington Post stressed. Our final line was, "Remembering the brilliance of the Respighi, we look forward to a season of challenging concerts."

NOW THERE you have far more than just one man's opinion. You have seasoned judgment of people who have been listening to the National Symphony Orchestra and those orchestras that visit Washington—listening to all these for many years.

We would agree completely with Milton Berliner of the News in his statement that the National Symphony outplayed the Philadelphia Orchestra. And for the very reason he cited: "Not that the Philadelphia Orchestra musicians do not play with as much or even more polish than the National players. But there is a positive claim that last night's concert had something the others lacked—pulse, vitality, feeling, call it anything you like."

The tone and the technique of the National Symphony Orchestra in the Pines of Rome were as thrilling as anything we have heard in years of concertgoing. The rhythmic drive built up in the finale had a vigorous insistence that many conductors overlook in favor of pure tonal sheen. Both are necessary, and both were present in equal parts on opening night.

In addition to these comments on the playing and sound of the orchestra, a vital factor stands out as the year shapes up at this point: programs planned for the season by Mitchell include some of the world's greatest music, some of its new, and some of its old masterworks.

NOW IT IS UP TO the people of Washington. It is all very well for the Boston and Philadelphia

That Counts on Television

It's Not Talent, It's Stamina

By Sonia Stein

IT'S NOT the talent it's the stamina that counts in television, quothe Elinor Lee at the end of a three-day TV session. Starting last week Elinor added a Wednesday session to her Tuesday and Thursday sessions (WTOP-TV, 3:30 p. m.) and emerged unruffled, but ready to admit that talent is no substitute for strength in this business.

Often at her desk at WTOP by 7 a. m. to prepare her daily radio show ("Home Service Daily" at 9:30), Elinor usually toddles home after 6 p. m. to fix dinner, write scripts and tumble into bed.

Television takes a toll, as radio people have discovered. A TV show takes 10 times the work that a radio show takes—"at a conservative estimate," suggests Elinor—and there are no short cuts. "You have to rehearse which hand you cuddle the frozen broccoli in, although you've handled vegetables since you were a child."

A cooking and home appliance demonstrator before she went into radio 14 years ago, Elinor continued to give cooking demonstrations for radio's studio audiences for a long time. So beating biscuits in full view of an audience holds no terrors. But still she has to beat a batch before the show to give the cameramen a chance to get a perspective on the procedure.

WHERE once a good imagination set a table with colorful china and tempting food for radio, Elinor must now shop for props for TV; imagination must be implemented with the goods on television. "You may be able to get them easily at Murphy's, but you have to go get them," explains Elinor, who works with a minimum of assistance.

Although Elinor prepares something delectable to eat on almost every show, she still has to prepare dinner for her own family at night. Not a crumb nor parsley leaf can be taken home because the TV crew has already dispatched everything in sight. "They descend like Cox' army, armed with spoons, forks, dishes and appetites as soon as we're off the air," Elinor points out—with some pleasure. The crew defends its stand: "We have to watch all the time she's fixing the food and saying how good the recipe is and we just can't help it, that's all."

Elinor often tries out recipes beforehand on her family—a teen-age daughter and husband who is deputy sheriff of Fairfax County. One of her TV associates remarks that the state of Elinor's family is a measure of the show's success: If the family stays healthy and happy, it's probable the TV audience will do so, too.

OF COURSE Elinor is not responsible for whatever indigestible potions and stews are prepared during the period devoted to "the man in the kitchen," when Elinor opens the gleaming white kitchen on the set to a man who has a favorite recipe he'd like to share. George Washington, more familiarly known as Lawrence Ryle, actor, inaugurated the idea. The kitchen now sports a plaque announcing that "George Washington Cooked Here."

Gallop Role

TV Will Be Kind to Narrator

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (AP).—Frank Gallop believes the narrator—the identifying voice—will have an important role in television.

Gallop, whose voice is well known on both radio and television, says the narrator in television can in a few words set the mood and prepare the viewer for the scene that follows.

The narrator also will serve as a point of recognition in the series, he explains. In a weekly dramatic program, for instance, the play and cast change each time. But the narrator remains the same.

Gallop says, however, the amount of time a narrator can take up on television has to be much less than on radio, as the viewers want to be shown rather than told.

The tall, suave veteran of 16 years broadcasting currently is announcer for the NBC daytime serial Stella Dallas and also the ghostly narrator of the NBC television show Lights Out.

Previously, Gallop had been familiar to listeners as announcer on the Cresta Blanca and Prudential Family Hour radio programs and commentator for the Sunday afternoon concerts of the New York Philharmonic.

But the role in Lights Out is in sharp contrast to any tried heretofore by Gallop. Video viewers see only his head outlined in the darkness, and hear him tell—in sepulchral tones—of the spinetingler that's coming up.

Gallop is quite happy over the role and says he would be very pleased to take in television the type parts made famous in the movies by Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi.

ANOTHER suspense-type program, "Danger" seen Tuesday nights on CBS television, became involved in a censorship question the other night in a play about a young newlywed couple.

The movie industry's code of self-censorship is so strict that a man and woman, even though husband and wife, can not be shown occupying the same bed. Television has no formal code but generally keeps fairly close to the movie code.

In "Danger," however, one scene showed a young couple occupying the same bed in a new apartment they had just obtained. That's what the story called for, and no particular thought was

BRADY'S CHARACTERS: Mala Powers and Farley Granger have the principal roles in "Edge of Doom," adapted from the novel by Leo Brady of the Catholic University drama department, opening on Keith's screen Wednesday. Dana Andrews, Joan Evans, Robert Keith and Paul Stewart have other leading roles

'Lend an Ear' Opens Run Tomorrow Night at Gayety

SPARKED by some of the cleverest sketches our revue stages have ever offered, "Lend an Ear" will open a two-week run tomorrow night at the Gayety Theater.

Two of these are the finales for both acts. "The Missing Road Company" titles a musical in miniature of the mid-1920's which has been missing in the provinces for years. It's called "The Gladiola Girl" and shows you what once was cute and sweet in the musical comedy world is now at least incredible. Hit song of this fake show is "Doin' the Old Yahoo Step."

Second act finale is a blithe spoof on operatic librettos, "Words without Song," wherein the inordinately complex relationships of which the singers chant is recited in uproarious fashion.

Other sharp sketches include "Neurotic You and Psychopathic Me," "Three Little

More Theater News on Page 7L

Queens of the Silver Screen," with Mary Pickford, Theda Bara and Pearl White as the imitated ladies, and "Santo Domingo," a "production number" designed to end all such entertainments.

The revue's origin goes back to 1941, when writer-composer Charles Gaynor first produced his dreamchild at the Pittsburgh Playhouse. That summer it grew into a Cape Cod revue titled "After Hours." With the war's arrival, production plans and future production plans were laid aside.

Four years ago, Gaynor got to thinking of his songs and skits in Hollywood, where "Lend an Ear" became an instant hit, going later to New York, where the reception was repeated for most of two seasons. A national tour followed.

Gaynor's less-satirical songs include "Molly O'Reilly," "When Someone You Love Loves You," "Give Your Heart a Chance to Sing" and "Who Hit Me."

In the cast are Max Showalter, a "This Is the Army" veteran who went from the "Show Boat" revival to "Make Mine Manhattan" and television, Jenny Lou Law, William Skipper, Gloria Hamilton, Al Checco, Peter Conlow, Robert Dixon, Jeannie Bledsoe and Joan Coburn.

COMEDY DOINGS: Moira Lister is the lady in the case when Alec Guinness, as a garden editor, has to take charge of showing the town to two Welsh contest winners in "A Run for Your Money," a merry charade at the Plaza recalling "I Know Where I'm Going" and "Tight Little Island"

G. U. Club to Present Wouk's "The Traitor"

"The Traitor," a drama by Herman Wouk which has not previously been performed in Washington, will be acted by the Mask and Bauble Club of Georgetown University Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

The club performs in the auditorium of Holy Trinity Church, 36th and O sts. nw, using the O st. entrance. Anthony Manzi is director.

BRITISH STARS: Ann Todd and Maxwell Reed have leading roles in the new Sydney Box melodrama at the Trans-Lux, "Daybreak"

Arena Holding 'The Judge' A Third Week

ARENA STAGE goes back to its three-week run policy to holdover "The Delectable Judge," which starts its final week tomorrow night.

The E. P. Conkle comedy concerns a colorful figure of Texas history, Roy Bean, a cheerful, illiterate judge who was "The Law West of the Pecos" and who nursed a hopeless passion for the reigning international beauty of the day, Lily Langtry.

Henry Danilowicz has the title role, with David Harrison featured as the small Chinese boy he befriends. Two men, whom the judge once ordered hung, come back to life as angels summoned to take Roy to Heaven, capitally acted by Peter Jerome and Orel Leonard.

Others in the cast include Lois Alexander, Jacqueline Dudley, George Grizzard, Henry Oliver, Harry Scully, Pernell Roberts, Lester Rawlins and Warner Schreiner.

Next on the Arena Stage schedule is Edward Mangum's production of "The Taming of the Shrew." Set as a special Christmas offering is "Alice in Wonderland," opening December 22.

Eckstine Singing Here Next Sunday

Billy Eckstine, alumnus of Armstrong High and now rated by Metronome magazine as "The Greatest Popular Singer of All Time," will give a performance next Sunday at Uline Arena.

ECKSTINE

With the Washington-born Billy will be George Shearing and his quintet, a free-wheeling favorite of the record and jazz worlds. Working as a double feature unit, Eckstine and Shearing have been playing concert dates across the country and will appear at Uline's with Willis Conover as emcee.

Seats for the concert are at the Super Music Stores, 1350 F st., 1110 7th st., and 1327 H st. ne.

TWO MADWOMEN: Cay Knockey, as the dog-loving Constance, and Pat Atkinson, as the law-loving Josephine, in "The Madwoman of Chaillot," opening its final week tomorrow night at the Catholic University campus theater with Dr. Josephine McGarry Callan in the title role

Variety Club Election

The Variety Club will hold its annual election of officers tomorrow at a luncheon at the Willard. C. Glen Norris, property master of Tent No. 11, points out that two delegates and two alternates to the 1951 international convention also will be chosen.

The Music Box

Bach Fiesta Continues Run Today

WASHINGTON CATHEDRAL'S first Bach Festival comes to a choral close today and tomorrow.

Three singing groups conducted by Paul Callaway will wind things up. The Chamber Choral Group and the regular Cathedral Choir sing this afternoon at 4. Tomorrow night the B Minor Mass brings out the Washington and Cathedral Choral Societies for their first work this fall.

Soloists for the Mass will be new in the upper voices: Phyllis Curtin, soprano, and Leslie Chabay, tenor. Familiar names and faces will sing the lower music: Eunice Alberts, contralto, and Paul Matthen, bass. Ralph Kirkpatrick, harpsichordist, having played three recitals during the festival, will play in the orchestra Monday night with Richard Dirksen, associate at the Cathedral, playing both Sunday and Monday.

Norman Lamb, first viola of the National Symphony, plays a fine group of three sonatas in the National Gallery tonight.

Monday night New York's Metropolitan Opera opens, with Verdi's "Don Carlo." The big show, staged by Margaret Webster, will be televised Monday night, and broadcast again Saturday afternoon as the first of the annual matinee series. WMAL and WMAL-TV is the local outlet.

A NEW choral group, the Temple Choral Group, is being launched Tuesday evenings in Washington Hebrew Congregation, 822 8th st. nw. For information, call District 8946.

Richard Dyer-Bennet, folk singer, announced for Lisner Auditorium Thursday, will appear there instead in January. Tickets will be honored on the later date, naturally.

Leonard Warren, Metropolitan baritone, making his first Washington recital appearance, has come up with an unusually fine program. He comes a week from Tuesday.

A REPEAT performance of Dett's Ordering of Moses is scheduled for Monday, November 20, at Shiloh Baptist Church. The production will be similar to that given in Griffith Stadium in July. Tickets at Stabler's and from the National Negro Opera Company.

The National Symphony opens its children's concerts Thursday afternoon a 2 p. m., with Florence Fraser Ludgate, narrator, from Philadelphia, and with Diana Steiner, violinist, as youthful soloist.

And if Musicians' Union troubles are ironed out, the Arlington Civic Symphony bows in for the year on Thursday night, with Bernard Rosenthal as conductor. P. H.

Local artists are eager to know which 12 among them had entries chosen by the regional jury in Richmond for the Metropolitan Museum's all-American show to be held in December in New York. Paintings still have to pass a national jury and the final results will not be disclosed until late in November.

Composers Commissioned

The Louisville Symphony, which more than most orchestras favors live musicians, has commissioned Honegger, Martinu, Nordoff, Perle and Persichetti to write compositions for its 1950-51 programs; that will mean a world premiere at each of five pairs of concerts.

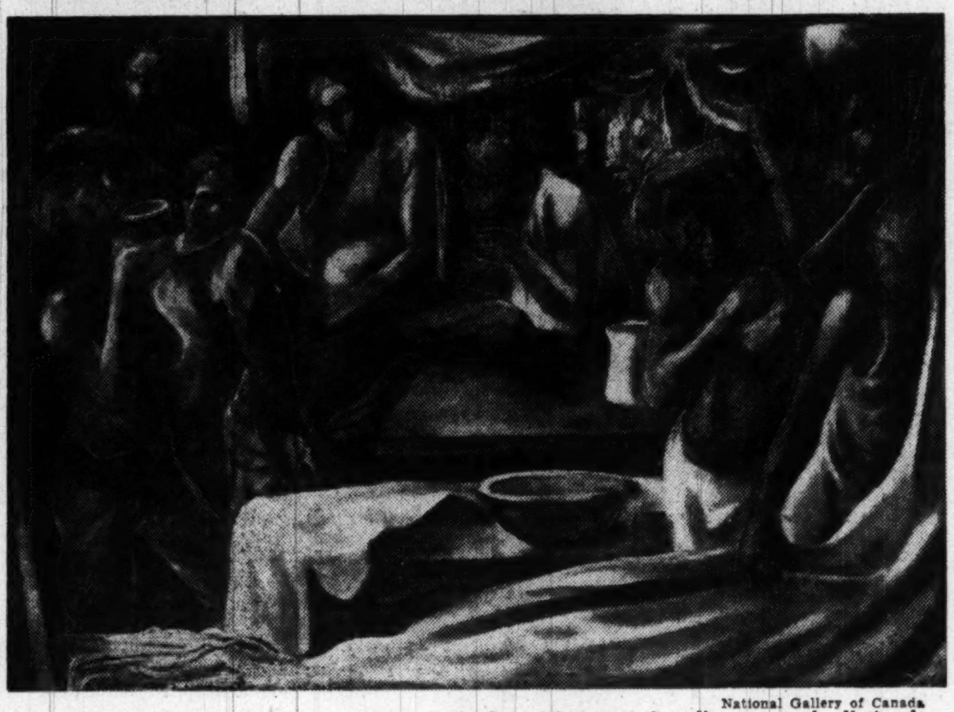
Canadian Art Goes It Alone



National Gallery of Canada

"Mess Deck" by Jack Nichols on display with the exhibition of Canadian art at the National Gallery

By Jane Watson Crane

CANADIAN PAINTING is forthright, clearly defined and predominantly out-door. It reflects a sharp division between the British and French elements in its background. There are distinguishable groups, such as the Seven who formed the first consciously national movement before World War I. There are also individuals as hard to pigeonhole as some of our own painters. There are dull passages in Academism and Impressionism, particularly in the work of the past. And there is strong evidence that the consistent encouragement given the contemporary artist is paying dividends. The most recent work may lack some of the trumpeting conviction of a quarter century ago, but it reflects infinitely more imagination and sense of what is going on in the world.

It was to be expected that the exhibition of Canadian art which opened here in the National Gallery of Art last Sunday would represent the present as well as the past. It was arranged by the National Gallery of Canada, an institution that has consistently been operated in the belief that support of the living artist was as essential a function as collecting old masters and illustrating art history.

Purchase is the finest kind of support an artist can have, and the National Gallery of Canada has pursued a purchase policy whereby sums to buy one expensive old master have been matched by a proportionate amount to obtain work (sometimes several works) by contemporaries. Canada's National Gallery has also been active in organizing exhibitions of Canadian art for circulation at home and abroad, and has generally served as a clearing house for art activity in the country.

THE SHOW opens with a few historic examples—in character not unlike our own. The items speak volumes for the background from which they sprang—a portrait of a Negro slave by a self-taught French soldier who became a painter; a family group by a German-born land company agent, who was versatile enough to be able to turn out portraits, design buildings and paint religious subjects. These are eighteenth-century examples.

A little later, in the early nineteenth century, came artists such as Paul Kane and Cornelius Krieghoff, who were beginners of the tradition of painting Canada's great outdoors. There is one of Kane's paintings of Indian life shown and a Krieghoff winter landscape.

We have great fondness for the school which followed—landscapes painted without fear or favor by men who were content to proclaim the austere wonders of Canada's lakes, forests and mountains without so much as a nod to fashion or a wink to those who would accuse them of narrow-minded provincialism. Here, as before, it seems to us that the work of Tom Thomson is still outstanding. Thomson was drowned in Canoe Lake in 1917 and it was after his death that the Group of Seven was formed by some of his associates. One can see how this type of landscape painting has been reduced to something of a formula and its limitations as painting are obvious. But at its best, which it is here in the National Gallery show, it is magnificent.

BEYOND THIS group the road stretches out in many directions. In the contemporary section are realistic paintings of the type done here in the 'thirties (Comfort's "Young Canadian" and Fitzgerald's "Doc Snider's House," the latter akin to Hooper and Burchfield), abstractions and semiabstractions (able, at times brilliant works, such as Fritz Brandtner's "City From a Night Train" and Carl Schaeffer's "Bull's Eye"), expressionist works ("Ruins of Brest" by Michael Forster) and fantasy (paintings by David Milne, who studied at the Art Students League in New York). Perhaps one of the most gifted and imaginative of the older men was James Wilson Morrice, who lived and worked in Paris a good part of his life and was associated with Matisse, Marquet, the English painter Conder and the Canadian-born American Maurice Prendergast.

Of the young, one of the most sensitive is Jack Nichols, still under 30 (note his "Mess Deck" which seems to us one of the finest things in the show). Nichols is largely self-taught, was an official war artist from 1944-46, painted in the United States on a Guggenheim Fellowship the following two years and is now living in Toronto.

Quite a bit of the nonconservative painting is contributed by artists of French extraction. We took particular pleasure in the work of Paul-Emile Bordues ("Les Carquois Fleuris") and Alfred Pellan, which is frankly decorative and up-to-the-minute, and of Simone Beaulieu, whose "Femme Assise Dans Un Paysage" made us think of the American painter Bernice Cross. Work by Lillian Freiman, who now lives in New York, resembles that of some of our own artists, and there are in fact many parallels. If one can pin down anything so elusive as a trend, it would seem that the Canadian show confirms an impression gained elsewhere—that painters are tending to move away from "national" art toward greater cosmopolitanism (or is it internationalism?).

Says Musical Experts Use Too Big Words

A music editor says the Nation has a musical inferiority complex.

George R. Marek told the National Association of Music Merchants in convention here that too many people are afraid of "'that long-hair stuff.'

He told the merchants that if they could overcome the complex they could sell more instruments, sheet music and records.

Marek blamed the inferiority feeling on the fact that there is little early natural contact with music in the schools, and that musical experts use too many big words.

'Samson and Delilah'

Columbia has issued on three LPs its Paris recording of Saint-Saens' "Samson and Delilah," originally issued in two heavy volumes of 78s.—(AP).

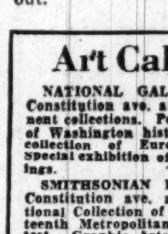
John Martin Next Soloist

JOHN MARTIN will be surrounded with a brilliant program Wednesday when he plays the solo role in Bloch's Rhapsody, Schelomo.



MARTIN

The cello in this tone poem represents the voice of King Solomon, heard in the midst of Oriental splendor.

Preceding the Bloch, Howard Mitchell will play the "Clock" Symphony of Haydn, and Wagner's Rhine Journey and Siegfried Idyll.

To close the program is a novelty by Hindemith, a Metamorphosis on Themes from Weber. Here is one of the brightest, jazziest bits of symphonic music current. Marches, waltzes, and virtuoso orchestration make it a pleasure throughout.

Eddie (WTOP) Gallaher ON RECORDS

YOU'RE JUST IN LOVE—Perry Como, RCA Victor: By now I'm sure you're familiar with "Play a Simple Melody," as recorded by Bing and Gary Crosby (Decca). The record begins with Bing singing the chorus; then son Gary has a go at the verse; and then Bing and Gary do verse and chorus simultaneously, thereby giving the record its novel twist. It seems unbelievable, but Irving Berlin wrote "Simple Melody" 36 years ago. And not only has the song had quite a revival in this year of 1950, but it has had other repercussions reaching all the way to the Broadway stage.

Irving Berlin's most recent assignment was the score for "Call Me, Madam." While the Ethel Merman musical was having its out-of-town tryout, mail orders for tickets were pouring into the box office in New York, nearly a million dollars' worth, the largest advance sale in the history of the theater. When the musical opened on the road, the producers were aghast. Despite the tremendous ticket sale and unprecedented interest in the forthcoming New York premiere, they took a look at the show and found that it wasn't so hot. It needed some doctoring, and quick.

BERLIN, the dean of American song writers, plus the authors of the book, the theater veterans who had previously written "Life With Father," were equal to the task. They sat down in a Boston hotel, a few blocks away from the theater where the show was already playing, and completely rewrote the second act. At one point his colleagues turned to Berlin and suggested that an additional song would be in order. Faced with the necessity of turning out a new composition on the spur of the moment, he suddenly recalled the device which was making his "Simple Melody" the current national rage. Moments later "You're Just in Love" was born.

The first chorus, as performed in "Call Me, Madam," was given to a young fellow with a heretofore subsidiary role in the show, Russell Nype. Then Ethel Merman sang a separate melody and lyric. Finally, they sang the two simultaneously. At the New York opening the new second act, as indeed the entire production, was a resounding success. And the song "You're Just in Love" not only stopped the show, but also produced a new star. Because the next day the critics were hailing Russell Nype, an unknown with no major Broadway experience, as the find of the year.

SINCE it had been placed in "Call Me, Madam" at the last minute, the record companies were caught flatfooted with no records of "You're Just in Love." RCA Victor thereupon rushed Perry Como and the Fontane Sisters into a studio, and managed to hit the market with what is, at the moment, the only record of the song. Not only is this quite a scoop for Perry, but you will find it to be a lovely, lilting version of as enchanting a bit of music as Irving Berlin has written.

Many a playgoer will return from a visit to "Call Me, Madam" enthusing over the clever new song idea in which two different sets of words and music are sung simultaneously. But those in the know, the faithful Sundial-Moondial listeners and readers of this column, can inform them that this idea, far from being new, is one which Irving Berlin stole from himself 36 years ago.

Eddie Gallaher is heard on WTOP every day except Sunday on the Sundial, 7:45 to 9 a. m.; Moondial, 11:30 p. m. to 12:30 a. m.

Pairing of Modern Works Proves a Happy Thought

BERG: Excerpts from Wozzeck, with Gertrude Ribla, soprano, and Philadelphia Orchestra under Ormandy. Also: Schoenberg: Guerre-Lieder: Song of the Wood-Dove. Martha Lipton, mezzo-soprano, with New York Philharmonic under Stokowski. Columbia ML. $4.85.

Here's a wonderful pairing. The moving music from Wozzeck was recorded a couple of years ago by Charlotte Boerner and the Jannsen Symphony of Los Angeles, but it did not have the kind of engineering Columbia gives the Philadelphia.

Nor can either the West Coast orchestra or the soloist be compared with Ribla and the Philly-Ormandy combine.

Having heard Gertrude Rible sing Italian opera for years it is a thrilling surprise to hear her superb voice in German, where she exhibits equal mastery of the language.

Her sense of the rhymic values of words is keen and her ability to leap to the precise pitch intended makes Berg's vocal problems seem easy.

This record will serve you well as an introduction to the opera which Mitropoulos is doing complete this season with the Philharmonic. It is not difficult music to assimilate. Columbia should have reprinted the entire text on the envelope but there is enough to give you the meaning of the thing.

Ormandy makes the orchestral panorama as beautiful as can be imagined. He is brilliant in this kind of music. We know lots more we would like him to do.

The Gurre-Lieder is so gorgeous in sound that we are sorry it disappoints us musically. Here is the Stokowski who did the entire work so feelingly 20 years ago. Comparing this recording with the one made at that time, we find the music moving at a slower pace, with more time given to lingering over details that obscure the whole.

Lipton's voice is a rich, luscious affair, suited to the music by tone and temperament. But she does not yet have the underlying mood of urgency that goes with this plaintive threnody. But you would not go wrong to buy this disc just for the beauty of tone, and to compare Schoenberg in his early days, and Berg, his pupil, in Berg's later mood.

How Could Show With Babes And Pups Miss on Television?

First in the hearts of his countrymen, and first "man in the kitchen" on the "At Home With Elinor Lee" show, was George Washington. Lawrence Ryle, actor who played the father of his country in the Sesquicentennial Pageant, founded the "man in kitchen" gimmick on the WTOP-TV show. Elinor and her co-operator, Lloyd Dennis, watch G. Washington wield the silverware

Actor Jose Ferrer also clattered a dish or two in Elinor's kitchen and Elinor is planning to ask women's clubs in the area to "submit men" to the show who excel in the kitchen. There's a prize for the man who best justifies the faith the ladies have shown in him.

Another gimmick which will have its last appearance on the show this Wednesday is a pet show. The pets can be of any description — snakes, fleas, fish, mice, jumping beans and giraffes —but all must conform to the cardinal rule. They must be accompanied by their owner, and the owner must be small fry who attends Sunday school.

ELINOR WANTS to turn this segment of the show into a show all it's own and was actually showcasing it on the "At Home With Elinor Lee" series. Since it's a "natural," involving the sterling ingredients, babies and puppies, it will probably find its niche. How an extra show can be fitted into the schedule bothers Elinor not at all. "You simply get less sleep, that's all," she says. "I love children and animals; I've got to do that show," Elinor announced. The preparation of the show is done by Peyton Hawes Dunn, who gathers the children through their Sunday schools. Since no child qualifies for the TV show unless he attends Sunday school, there may be a great stampede to religion by the younger set—the most violent activity since the Children's Crusades in the Middle Ages.

The youngsters make wonderful guests, Elinor has discovered, since they are so absorbed in presenting their particular Fido or Pussy in the best light, they are completely unselfconscious.

VOTE FOR the most poised of the lot goes to a little girl whose goldfish was dispossessed with a crash from his handsome bowl by somebody's big foot during a show. While Producer Lloyd Dennis went creeping around the floor off-stage after the slithering goldfish, the little girl kept up an unconcerned conversation with Elinor on set. When the fish was safely housed in a Pyrex baking dish, she showed him off as proudly as if he'd been still in his crystal palace.

Elinor has met her share of obstacles on the set. The trick for making jellied salads come out of the mold easily, which just didn't work on cue, is typical.

The sink drainage system has overflowed on the floor, leaving the actors standing soggily on the set and a fair share of expected guests have been unavoidably detained. But, like most radio people who have taken on a TV assignment, Elinor refers to radio as "sane" but to TV as "stimulating." Back-breaking and heart-breaking as television can be, it's still ground-breaking area, and those like Elinor who went into radio as pioneers have just the spirit for pioneering the new field. Yep, they've got the spirit. Heaven give 'em the strength.

CBS 'Danger' Runs Afoul Of the Censor given to the scene as it apparently was in complete good taste.

But a number of viewers, accustomed to the movie code, wrote in objecting to the scene. So scripts now are double checked to make sure there's nothing that might seem out of line to movie-trained lookers.

The "Danger" play for Tuesday night will have Sarah Churchill, daughter of Winston Churchill, in the lead role in what is described as her first full length dramatic performance on American television.

THE TREMENDOUS audience of radio is emphasized by a survey indicating that 65 million persons heard one or more of the World Series broadcasts over Mutual.

The survey was made by Crossley, Inc., for Mutual and the Gillette Safety Razor Co., which paid $175,000 for radio rights and $800,000 for television rights to the series.

The firm estimated that 18 million persons saw the series on television. This is a relatively large figure in view of the limited area in which series telecasts were available and the smaller number of television sets compared with radio. But it is considerably smaller than some of the more optimistic forecasts of the television audience for the series.

THE HOTEL PIERRE here has decided television has become a necessary adjunct to modern living. It has installed RCA video sets in all guest rooms as part of the regular service, without added charge.

The suites have 16-inch console sets in the living rooms. The individual sleeping rooms have 12½-inch sets.

A number of hotels across the country have made television available to guests at extra cost, but Frank Paget, president, says the Pierre is the first to make video a part of regular service.

New 'Big Show' Has All This And Tallu, Too

NBC let out all stops and booked EVERYBODY that CBS doesn't own lock, stock and tonsil, to be on the "Big Show" which starts tonight at 6 on WRC with the spectacular Tallulah Bankhead as mistress of ceremonies.

The regular company of the big 90-minute package will include Tallulah, the only thistle-voice that ever grew in the magnolia patch below the Mason-Dixon line, and Singers Mindy Carson and Frankie Laine. Meredith Willson will direct the orchestra.

The opening night will involve such stellar names as Fred Allen and Portland Hoffa, Jimmy Durante, Danny Thomas, Ethel Merman, Paul Lukas, Russell Nype and Jose Ferrer. Miss Merman, Lukas and Nype will offer a substantial sample of the new Broadway show, "Call Me Madam," in which they star, and Ferrer will perform in an excerpt from the new motion picture, "Cyrano de Bergerac," in which he stars.

Already scheduled for the second show which will come from Hollywood next Sunday (without the program regulars) are Groucho Marx, Fannie Brice, Ed Gardner, Jane Powell, Ezio Pinza and others. The November 19 show, back in New York again, will include Eddie Cantor, Ed Wynn, Durante and actors who will perform bits from current stage and screen productions in which they are appearing.

Tallulah Bankhead . . . starts NBC's new 90-minute radio show tonight at 6 on WRC

Myron Is Albert

Myron McCormick, whose dance as the brash Seabee is a highlight of "South Pacific," is playing Albert Chapman, a conservative family man, on CBS "Hilltop House." It's the only regular radio commitment his Broadway schedule allows.

Sir Laurence Olivier and his wife, Vivien Leigh, will perform for the first time together on American radio in "Rebecca" tomorrow at 9 p.m. on CBS-WTOP

Mrs. R. For Mary Margaret

Mary Margaret McBride is transferring her daily commentary from WNBC of NBC to WJZ of ABC. WNBC is putting on Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt in her stead.

NBC postponed its new 90-minute Sunday evening variety bill until tonight in order to allow more time for preparations, and a possible sponsor deal.

Back Taking Over On 'Congress Today'

Gunnar Back is taking over as reporter and commentator on WMAL's "Congress Today," heard at 7 nightly, Monday through Friday. Back replaced Albert Warner on the 15-minute newscast.

School TV Whets Yen for Knowledge

PHILADELPHIA (AP).—Philadelphia school children are learning everything from the science of splitting atoms to good table manners through classroom television viewing.

Now in its third year, Philadelphia's pioneering school room television program reaches some 200,000 students who watch school-planned shows carried on each of the city's three commercial television stations.

The programs are unsponsored. The time is given to the schools by the stations.

Students see the programs on 16 inch or larger receivers provided by parents through the home school council. There are now 40 TV sets in various Philadelphia elementary and high schools and 60 more in schools in suburban areas.

IN ADDITION to seeing the shows which take up four hours of the school week in daily 30-minute to one hour periods, children get to take part in some of the broadcasts.

Last year about 1500 students took part in TV shows.

Head of the TV-education venture is energetic Martha A. Gable, native Philadelphian and University of Indiana graduate.

This year's video programs, carried by WCAU-TV, WFIL-TV and WPTZ, offer a variety of subjects dove-tailed with classroom work.

"We are demonstrating that education can be entertaining and entertainment can be educational," Miss Gable said.

Proof of her statement is that many of the programs beamed for school use are popular with the home audience.

AMONG THE BILLINGS on the TV school program this year are a half-hour show on the history of world music, movies provided by the Encyclopedia Brittannica, an arts and crafts program, a 15-minute broadcast to demonstrate that "science is fun," and others dealing with city government, and national and world affairs.

One program, "How's Your Social IQ?" sets out to demonstrate socially graceful conduct for every occasion.

Programs are planned and packaged by Miss Gable and her staff of five assistants. Less than an hour and a half of rehearsal is needed for each 15-minute telecast.

Miss Gable believes that television in the school room whets the student's appetite for new knowledge.

After the miracles of chemistry, physics and nature have been shown in simple form for elementary school children, there is, she said, a sharp increase in library book borrowing on those subjects.

SINCE there are still not enough receivers to serve all the Philadelphia schools, many parents with sets invite groups of children to their homes for the school shows. Such an invitation is an acceptable reason for a pupil's absence from classrooms.

The number of TV receivers will be increased greatly this year, thanks to the work of students at the Dobbins Vocational Technical School, where some 12 receivers already have been constructed. Cabinets for the sets have been turned out in school woodwork classes. If a classroom TV receiver gets out of order, students from the Dobbins school often are called in to make the repairs.

Though Philadelphia has been the first to bring television to the classroom, other cities are making beginnings, Miss Gable said.

Met Will Be Seen From 12 Angles

AN UNPRECEDENTED number of cameras will be used to televise tonight's opening of the Metropolitan Opera's 1950-51 season (7:45 p. m.) when ABC-TV brings 12 cameras to bear on Verdi's "Don Carlo" and the activity in the lounge, the Opera Guild Room and backstage. Last year the network used eight cameras, which was an innovation itself at the time.

Margaret Webster, famous director of Shakespearean plays, who is staging "Don Carlo" as her first opera venture, will interview the stars during the first intermission. Appearing in the production, which is being presented for the first time since 1923, are Jussi Bjoerling, Robert Merrill and Jerome Hines, and three European singers who are making their American debuts: Cesare Siepi, Delia Rigal and Fedora Barbieri.

TV Week

The Washington Post

The Metropolitan Opera's opening presentation of the season, Verdi's "Don Carlo," will be televised on WMAL-TV Monday night at 7:45 with Delia Rigal (left) and Jussi Bjoerling (right) among the singers. Twelve cameras will be used to pick up the vast production and lobby activity.

Mindy Carson proved such a hit as guest on the Perry Como show (Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays, WTOP-TV 7:45 p.m.) that she'll be seen regularly Wednesdays

Is There Gold in ThemTharTubes?

WITH SO MANY tired vaudeville acts appearing again and again on TV, it's inevitable that viewers with one ounce of talent begin to wonder why they can't get into the act, and how much it would yield them if they did.

The story seems to be that guest appearances now bring more than twice what they did last year, the demand is so great.

In the dramatic field, the pay sounds high enough for the leading roles. On a very high budget show like "Philco Television Playhouse" (WNBW, Sundays at 9 p. m.), the leading actors get from $300 to $750 per show. But this includes more than 40 hours of rehearsal spread over 10 days, and the flat fee may have to be spread thin over the weeks between shows.

Well-known writers who adapt scripts for Philco get $500 to $1000 per script, depending on the difficulties.

Friday Dawns On Herson Now

SINCE WNBW CAMERAMEN and engineers have to be on deck early Fridays for color TV experiments in connection with an RCA demonstration to be held December 5, the early morning Bill Herson radio show can be simulcast on Fridays. Otherwise economics would make it impossible.

The station tried the Herson show as a simulcast October 27 and was left breathless by the response. Herson, doubting he'd get any TViewers at the early bird hours of 6 to 9:30, asked for phone calls. The normal station complement of phone operators is two; that Friday the emergency call went out and there were 10 girls frantic by 9.

ZACHARY SCOTT will play the lead in "The Raven," Marquis James' 1930 Pulitzer Prize-winning biography of Sam Houston, tonight at 9 on WMAL-TV.

Marcia Van Dyke, actress and violinist, is guest of Morton Downey tonight (WTOP-TV, 10).

Who's Gonna Keep Her on the Farm?

WENDY BARRIE, sophisticated and citified, as far as the eye can see, says she wants to settle down on a farm. The star of "Through Wendy's Window," (WNBW, 5:45 p. m. Saturdays) which originates in New York, Miss Barrie spends part of every week on a farm in Virginia. "I wear blue jeans and pitch hay. I drive a tractor and weed the vegetable patch. I even shoo flies away when the blacksmith is at work. I get five cents for every bushel of rocks I clear out of the garden," she explains.

Miss Barrie says she's looking for a good man to marry, wants to exchange the Broadway glitter and tinsel for oats and alfalfa. "I don't want to become like so many girls in Hollywood who get so rich and famous that men think they eat diamonds for breakfast," she pointed out. "That kind scares nice guys away."

The gal with a yen to settle on the Virginia soil was born in Hongkong, the daughter of a crown colony barrister. Shipped to boarding schools in England and Switzerland, she'd been around the world six times before she was 16.

Seen "Through Wendy's Window" Saturdays at 5:45 p.m. on WNBW Wendy Barrie doesn't look like a farmer but says she is one

Anything Goes (And Comes Back)

IT SEEMS it's not safe anymore for a magician to make a rabbit disappear. At least not if it doesn't return to this world in short order. Magician Harry Baker, who baffles the eye Thursdays at 6:45 on WMAL-TV, sent a fluffy white rabbit into limbo one night and forgot to make him return. The station was besieged with calls from tearful tots and indignant infants. The rabbit was recalled from the nowhere and into the here on the next program.

BAKER

CLARK

Baker has quite a bag of tricks—some of them borrowed from Houdini, Thurston, Blackstone and the wizards of the Far East, and some of them his own invention.

DANE CLARK will star in the mystery thriller, "I Won't Take a Minute" by Cornell Woolrich, tonight at 10:30 on WTOP-TV. A one-time minor league baseball player and later a middleweight boxer, Clark got into acting through scriptwriting for radio. He was able to name his terms for his scripts and usually specified that he be given a part in the production.

William Gaxton, emcee of the "Airflyte Theater" on which Clark will appear, got into acting as an undertow, representing a lashing wave in "The Count of Monte Cristo." Nine years old at the time, Gaxton was hired to roll back and forth under the canvas for 25 cents a performance.

Shaw's Big Hatred Was Poverty

The prefaces to the plays are keys to the man. They're printed in all editions and tackle a mass of information which sometimes the play in question only refers to with one word. By all means, get after those prefaces.

The easiest of his political works it seems to me are "The Intelligent Woman's Guide to Socialism and Capitalism" (1928) and "Everybody's Political What's What?" (1944).

The most fascinating of his letters is his correspondence with Ellen Terry, published in 1931. Romantic and witty, they were the record of an intense association, though the two met only once away from the theater, where separated by the footlights, she was acting and he the red-bearded critic.

HIS GREATEST hatred was poverty, basis of many of his plays, essays and books. He observed only last year, as he had all his life:

"Money represents health, strength, honor, generosity, beauty as undeniably as the lack of it represents illness, weakness, disgrace, meanness and ugliness. Not the least of its virtues is that it destroys base people as certainly as it fortifies and dignifies noble people."

Just what will become of his money (a fortune which his successful preaching of socialism reduced considerably in his final years) has prompted many a query. For some years he was forever revising his will, then he let it get helplessly outdated, but in his last years he gave a great deal of time to drawing-up his will.

"It's the only fun permitted nowadays," he observed. "There must be many expectant benefactors who think I've kept them waiting too long . . . I shall not leave my money to individuals if I can help it. I am leaving it to such institutions as I am interested in and I haven't yet made up my mind which."

HE BENEFITTED enormously from his wife's fortune, but what a successful marriage it was. Charlotte Payne-Townshend of County Cork was a wealthy Irish woman who shared his interests. She nursed him to health after a breakdown in '98, serving as his secretary.

When Ellen Terry suggested he bring his "billionairess" backstage to meet her, he answered: "The difficulty is that you won't see Miss T. unless she shews herself to you. She is, normally, a ladylike person at whom nobody would ever look twice, so perfectly does she fit into her place. Perfectly placid and proper and pleasant. Does not condescend to anything more. And takes it all off like a mask when she selects you for intimacy. She is not cheap enough to be brought round to your room and shewn to you . . . I can respect other people's humanity as well as love their individuality."

The Shaws were married in '98, he used her character in many of his plays ("You Never Can Tell," "The Apple Cart," "The Simpleton of the Unexpected Isles") and she it was who pushed him into writing "St. Joan."

At her death seven years ago, Charlotte left a jaunty will, demanding a cheerful cremation and willing her fortune toward "bringing good manners and great works of art to the Irish people." For months after her death, Shaw couldn't bear to have her name mentioned.

LAST WEEK, just before Shaw's death was topped in the news by an attempted presidential assassination, a new organization was founded, "The Shaw Society of America," sparked by its secretary, William D. Chase, literary editor of the Flint (Mich.) Journal. It came out that on his graduation from Michigan, Chase had the idea of opening a book shop selling only Shaw's works, an idea he wrote to his hero.

On the penny postals which Shaw did so much to popularize, G. B. S. had answered: "You're evidently not a born bookseller. Why don't you try selling hot dogs?"

Later, notifying Shaw of the American society's formation, Chase received a letter, the 94-year-old's estimation of that place in history which so beguiles his biographers: "The utmost I can claim for myself in my best days is that I was one of the hundred best playwrights in the world, hardly a supreme distinction."

And while as a playwright he was a lifesaver to many a management, he was that figuratively and literally to our own Theater Guild, which for years was his first American producer.

One summer day in 1927 when the guild's co-founder, Lawrence Langner, was a stripling of 37, G. B. S. saved him from drowning by pulling him out of Lake Maggiore's icy waters. The lifesaving playwright that summer was 71.

Some More Observations About Shaw, By Winchell

magazines and newspapers. His crushing replies have been printed and reprinted, told and retold.

For the sake of novelty we would like to recall several rare instances when Shaw was on the receiving end of well-honed flippancies . . . He once appealed to Mrs. Shaw for support of his contention that male judgment was superior to female. "Of course, dear," Mrs. Shaw cooed. "After all, you married me and I you."

H. G. WELLS snapped: "Shaw is not an atheist. He believes in himself". . . Actress Mrs. Patrick Campbell taunted vegetarian Shaw: "Some day, Georgie, you'll eat a lambchop—and then no woman will be safe."

His caustic comments about Americans during a visit here caused one gazette to retaliate by publishing a lengthy report of the arrival of Mrs. Shaw . . . It noted Mrs. Shaw said this and Mrs. Shaw did that—then concluded casually:

Mrs. Shaw was accompanied by her husband, George Bernard Shaw, a writer.

HIS strange romance with lovely Ellen Terry offers one of the most fascinating chapters in Shaw's fabulous biography . . . He had the unique idea that sex was a hopeless basis for permanent relations. "The ideal love," he once insisted, "is conducted by mail". . . Shaw added that his passionate correspondence with Miss Terry was a wholly satisfactory love affair . . . "I could have had her," he said, "at any time, but I did not wish to complicate such a delicate intercourse. She tired of five husbands, but never of me!"

When Ellen Terry requested permission to publish some of his correspondence, Shaw rejected the idea and thundered: "I will not play the horse to your Lady Godiva!"

His outstanding characteristics were artistic integrity and the pioneering spirit. He contributed numerous innovations to the art of dramatics. But more important—he realized that the pioneering era did not end with geographic exploration. There were still great discoveries to be made. And he used his eloquent pen to blaze a trail through economic frontiers, social jungles and the political wilderness. He provided the stage with all the courage and vision of explorers who sailed the seas.

IT IS not mere poetic fancy to say that the life that went out of Shaw went into his deathless literature. The constant revivals of his plays attest to that fact . . . He made the theater a temple of art as well as a university of higher learning. Communicating stimulating thoughts to the mind with the language of the heart was the core of Shaw's genius. His talent to entertain was on a par with his ability to enlighten. Which explains why he was not only one of the theater's finest dramatists—but also the world's richest playwright.

Shaw turned from drama criticism to playwrighting—but the stage merely offered an opportunity to extend the horizons of his criticism. There was not a social institution or moral convention which did not feel the sting of Shaw's whip-like satire. Yet he was admired and acclaimed because he was able to make people laugh while exposing their frailties. His pen was mightier than a sword—because it was sharper.

IF George Bernard Shaw is in heaven, it is a safe wager that he will criticize it.

Annapolis Group To Launch New Season Thursday

The Colonial Players of Annapolis will open their season Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights with a production of "The Pursuit of Happiness" in the Community Service Building of the Maryland capital.

A unique aspect of the production will be the use of colonial furnishings, articles once used by General Washington during a stay at Newport, R. I. These antiques have been loaned by Mrs. Don Pardee Moon of Weems Creek.

The cast will include Hilyer Gearing, Alden Hefler, Zanne Kramer, John R. Garland, Peter Hall, Charles G. Gessner, Herbert Heustadt, Patricia Holman and Paul Whitmore.

Tax Institute Starting New Class Tomorrow

The Tax Practice Institute's fall course in Federal income tax law and procedure will get under way tomorrow at 6 p.m. in Classroom N, third floor, National Press building, 14th and F nw. This year qualified veterans of World War II have their last opportunity to enroll in the institute under the G.I. bill.

E. Edward Stephens, local tax attorney and director of the institute, will deliver the series of 30 two-hour lectures on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 6 to 8 p.m. The course, open to attorneys and accountants, will cover the taxation of individuals, partners, estates, trusts and corporations. Tax-saving ideas and changes made by the Revenue Act of 1950 will be emphasized.

D. C. Film Council Meets This Week

With football lingo in the air, the Washington Film Council's monthly meeting this week will be titled "Blocking the Blunders of Film Making."

The regular luncheon meeting will be held at the YMCA, 17th and K sts., on Wednesday at 12:30, with Alfred Chaudet, Rodney B. Radford, Sidney J. Abel and Oeveste Granducci as the experts on a panel representing the jobs of producer, director, writer and sponsor.

Stamp Investors Ruin Hobby

By William M. Stuart

THE ARGUMENT whether stamps as an investment is a sound proposition again finds its way into the philatelic press.

STUART

Offhand the stamp collector is chiefly interested in collecting stamps because of the pleasure he derives from the hobby. This answers the question of investment and those who collect stamps simply as a means of making money should not be called philatelists or even collectors. No one can possibly object to collectors laying aside a few sheets of certain issues, but to purchase hundreds of sheets of United States stamps later to place them on the market for profit proves a great detriment to the hobby.

During the past year more than a billion stamps were printed at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing for current use. These stemps were issued mostly in lots of 125 million and collectors should realize that such quantities remove from investors every vestige of profit.

The best advice to philatelists is to continue collecting stamps instead of acting as bankers or brokers. It would be well for would-be investors, to bear in mind that a small issue seldom appears. Printings of 125 million 3-cent commemorative stamps are collectors' items and are not issued for investment.

Communist China has issued a very large stamp to commemorate the first anniversary of the "People's Republic." The design shows the Red China flag on a white background. There are several inscriptions in green. The denomination is $800.

The first two values of a new issue of air post stamps was issued on October 17 by Austria and become valid for postage on October 21. The design shows various domestic birds in flight. The 60-groschen, violet blue, shows two crows, and the 2-schilling, blue grey, shows five gulls. The stamps were designed by Hans Strohofer. Hubert Woyty was the engraver and the Austrian State Printing Works executed the printing by the recess process.

The 1-cent, 2-cent and 3-cent envelopes to be released November 16, 17 and 18 at the American Stamp Dealers Association's national postage stamp show, New York City, will be on sale at the Philatelic Agency on and after November 20.

On November 11 airmail service will be inaugurated at Hana, Maui, Hawaii, on Route A-M-33. Special cachets will be applied and covers must reach postmaster at Hana not later than November 8.

THE COLLECTORS Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., met in Pythian Temple on Tuesday evening. Activity in the Bourse was very lively, foreign issues being the leaders. Alexander Halperson exhibited several frames of religious stamps from European countries, those of Vatican City being the most outstanding. At the meeting Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., an auction will be held.

Israel has issued a stamp in honor of the Maccabiah, which was held recently. The stamp, olive and black, was designed by A. Games of London, and portrays a sprinter. The stamps were issued in sheets of 50. The Maccabiah is the international Jewish competitive sports event similar to the Olympics. Some 700 Jewish athletes from 30 countries participated, including 35 from the United States.

The Woodridge Stamp Club will meet tomorrow evening in the Woodridge Public Library, 2206 Rhode Island ave. ne. The newly elected officers, President Fred Johnson, Vice President Wes M. Tryon, and Secretary Wirt R. Douglas, will be present.

Ballet Film to Be Shown Twice More

"The Little Ballerina," the British film made especially for youthful audiences, will be shown for two more Saturday morning performances at the Plaza Theater, next Saturday and on the following, the 18th, at 9:30 and 11 o'clock.

With Margot Fonteyn, in the leading role of an inspiring dancer, the picture is being shown shrough the cooperation of the Childrens Theater of Washington, sponsored by the D. C. Recreation Department and Sam Roth, president of the Plaza.

Critics Agree Our Symphony Is Off to a Great Season

Orchestra to come here regularly and play for us. We like to hear them.

But a city making any pretensions of culture should support its own orchestra—WHEN THAT ORCHESTRA IS THE EQUAL OF THOSE THAT VISIT.

The weight of critical opinion now seems to indicate very clearly that a concert by the National Symphony Orchestra is on a par with those of our distinguished visitors. There are factors weighing pro and con in every situation. But you will never know what they are if you stay at home on Wednesday nights, not even if you read The Washington Post daily and Sunday.

Next Wednesday night John Martin, brilliant young cellist, solos in Schelomo by Bloch. The following Wednesday, Claudio Arrau plays Mozart and Liszt on one program. Where will you be?

G & S Due in Baltimore

WITH Darrell Fancourt and Martyn Green heading the non-starring cast, the D'Oyly Carte Gilbert and Sullivan company will open a two-week stay at Ford's Theater, Baltimore, a week from tomorrow night.

Great interest has been manifest in the event locally, since the group will not be coming to Washington on this tour, which will wind up in New York in March. The company closed a packed three-week season in Boston last night and this week splits its time between Springfield, Mass., and Providence, R. I.

"The Mikado" will be the opening night opera, playing Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Wednesday matinee. "Patience" is billed for Thursday with "Trial by Jury" and "Pinafore" scheduled for Friday and Saturday nights and Satday afternoon. "The Gondoliers" will open the second week, November 20, with "Iolanthe" playing both performances Wednesday, "The Mikado" Thursday night and the concluding three performances "Cox and Box" and "The Pirates of Penzance."

Fairfax Safety Benefit Today

A benefit for the Fairfax County Safety Patrol will be held today from noon till 10 o'clock at the hangars of the Hybla Valley Airport, 3 miles south of Alexandria on Route 1.

The Grand Ole Opry's Texas Troubador, Ernest Tubb, Connie B. Gay, Billy Byrd, Don Patton and the swing boys are on the continuous program, which will be interrupted from time to time for a Western chicken fry and barbecue.

The patrol, which needs funds, takes pride in the fact that during the eight years boys and girls have been on traffic duty there has not been one traffic fatality to a school child in the county.

'Edward, My Son' Starts Thursday

The Falls Church Community Theater will open its Fall season with "Edward, My Son," to be played Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at the Madison School Auditorium.

Angelo Eagon, director of the play, promises a novel, stylized modern setting for the Robert Morley-Noel Langley drama.

In the cast are: Richard O'Neill, Irma Phelps, Bryce Rea, David Thomas, Anne Paull, Isabel Rea, Peggy Schreiner, Lawrence Smith, Michael O'Brien and Warren Felkel.

'The Silver Whistle' At U. of Maryland

The Maryland University Theater will present "The Silver Whistle" tomorrow night in its campus theater for a week's run.

Baby Sailfish Run Starts Off Miami Beach

Fall brings the annual run of the highly-prized baby sailfish to the waters off Miami Beach. Although young "sails" may weigh only 5 or 6 pounds, they will run up to 4 feet in length, ideal for mounting as trophies.

Jitney Service

In addition to buses reaching all sections of the city, Miami Beach has three jitney sedan services which link the northern and southern city limits with the Florida mainland.

Winter Resort Boys Whistle A Cheery Tune This Season

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK, (AP).—Winter resort owners are whistling a cheerier tune this year than last. In Florida and Arizona and California they report more enquiries and earlier reservations than usual. Travel agents and cruise ship owners are saying the same.

In the garment district, makers of women's togs for resort and cruise wear predict better sales this year, although prices are likely to be from 10 to 20 percent.

Many merchants, however, aren't convinced and report they bought sparingly. But they are watching sales closely, as they always regard winter sales of sportswear as indicators of style trends for next summer, and re-order accordingly.

Dress manufacturers are always inclined to wishful thinking in their estimates of the amount of clothes retailers can move from the racks onto Milady's back. But this year they have some new arguments.

More people have more money for vacations. More people split vacations now. Hence there are more people traispsing around in winter.

DEFENSE WORK will mean more overtime pay, and more women working. Women buy more clothes when they work than when they have to get all their clothes money from their husbands.

Women have been going slow on buying clothes because of family payments on autos, refrigerators and television sets. In the cold months ahead, priorities on raw materials and curbs on instalment credit may turn customers from durables to clothing, the dress makers figure.

Storekeepers in the swankier shops on upper Fifth ave. doubt if their higher income customers will feel the new and higher taxes enough to change their winter plans. In the middle and lower income brackets higher taxes dry up extra money quickly. But storekeepers are hoping, anyway, that growing business activity and overtime pay will make up for the loss of money withheld from pay envelopes for higher taxes.

TRAVEL AGENTS have other reasons as to why this winter will be a good one. Special air coach rates will be in effect for Bermuda, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, as well as to the resorts within the United States. Air facilities to South America are more plentiful. Transatlantic flights have been stepped up.

More surface liners are turning to the cruise trade this winter. New Hotels have gone up in the West Indies and South America. Agents say Mediterranean and around-the-world cruises are being booked at a faster rate.

T. Harry Gowman, president of the American Hotel Association, says hotels within the United States spent 50 million dollars the first half of this year on improvements. He thinks the winter tourist will get better accommodations.

MIAMI, Fla., reports airlines are planning more flights this year. Hotel men in St. Petersburg think business this year will top last by 15 to 20 percent in dollar volume.

Phoenix, Ariz., reports enquiries coming in much earlier this year than last, although the big rush isn't expected before Christmas.

Tucson, Ariz., hotel and guest ranch men, who last year had one of their worst seasons, predict this will be one of their best. They say many hotels and ranches are already booked for January and February.

Both the winter resort men in the sun country and those in the North know, however, that the success of a season depends to a great extent on the weather.

Nasty winter weather in the East and North can push people into following the sun. At the same time, a lot of snow will be welcome to the ski resort industry in the North. The last two winters their cash registers have been as bare as their ski runs.

Races, Sailing, Fishing Top St. Pete List

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Nov. 4.—Five hundred spectator events, almost all of them outdoors, are listed on St. Petersburg's winter entertainment calendar. These include greyhound races, major league baseball games, sailing and powerboat regattas, fishing tournaments, exhibitions, sports contests in scores of popular tourist games, band concerts and cultural events of all kinds. Greyhound racing starts December 21 at the St. Petersburg Kennel Club for the 90-day period allowed by law.

Twenty-one major league baseball exhibition games are on the St. Louis Cardinals-New York Giants training schedule. The Giants are replacing the Yankees here next spring in accordance with a contract clause which permits the Bombers to switch camps, though St. Petersburg will continue as their headquarters, as it has been for 25 years.

In December the major and minor leagues will hold their annual conventions here, further establishing the Sunshine City as the winter headquarters of organized baseball.

The national mid-winter Lightning class sailing races will attract entries from all over the United States and Canada in February. The Southland Sweepstakes Powerboat regatta is scheduled for February, and the annual St. Petersburg-Havana sailing race for March.

Fifty free band concerts in Williams Park will be supplemented by concert programs by the Civic Music Association, the Carreno Club and other groups for a winter of fine music.

Off-Street Parking

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—One of the first cities in the Nation to introduce metered off-street parking areas, Miami Beach now provides four such off-street areas with space for some 1500 automobiles.

New Carolina Park Outlined

HATTERAS, N. C.—Boundaries of the proposed Cape Hatteras national seashore recreation area on North Carolina's Outer Banks have been agreed upon. The area, which would be the first Federal seashore park, covers rugged country which offers excellent fishing and waterfowl hunting.

The boundaries extend on the north from Whalebone, 3 miles south of Nags Head, to the southern tip of Ocracoke Island. Areas around the Banks villages are exempted to permit expansion to provide facilities for tourists and sportsmen. The boundaries were recommended by the National Park Service and accepted by the North Carolina Cape Hatteras Seashore Commission.

The Park Service specified that the area must include a minimum of 33,000 acres. Already the North Carolina and Federal governments own 12,000 to 15,000 acres within the boundaries. Surveys will determine what land must be acquired and what the actual acreage of the recreational area will be. The Cape Hatteras Seashore Commission appointed a committee of three to appraise the property to be acquired.

Big Game Hunting

Bears, antelope, elk and mountain lions are among the big game animals taken in New Mexico each year.

Carlsbad Caverns

Many visitors make annual pilgrimages to New Mexico's Carlsbad Caverns, largest explored caves in the world.

Model Railroad Show Is Available Today

By Orval Hopkins

I'M NOT at all certain this is a travel item, but things are bleak in here and I'm all wore out from that Washington-California game yesterday.

Anyway, the Model Railroad Show of the Metropolitan Society of Model Engineers has opened in Room 457, Union Station, and will be running for several days this month. It is open today from 2 to 9:30 p. m., next Friday and November 17 from 7:30 p. m. to 9:30, next Saturday and November 18, 2 to 9:30, and next Sunday and November 19, 2 to 9:30. It's free (contributions welcome).

HOLLAND-AMERICA Line is planning to enter the New York to England, France and Holland service next year and in 1952 with twin ships, the Ryndam (pictured on page 8) and the Maasdam. The vessels will be of approximately 15,000 gross tons each and will make the crossing to England in about eight days. G. Lloyd Roberts is district manager here.

CUNARD White Star announces that the Britannic will make three special calls at Greenock, Scotland, next summer in support of Scotland's part in the 1951 Festival of Britain. She will sail from New York for Greenock on May 17, July 12 and August 9.

FREE. A booklet "Travel Suggestions" has been reissued by the Ask Mr. Foster Travel Service. It gives prospective travelers a picture of cruise and vacation possibilities for the current season, including a listing of special Christmas and winter cruises on transatlantic liners to the West Indies and South America, as well as year 'round cruises, Mediterranean and around the world. Copies are available free at all Ask Mr. Foster offices (the Washington outlet is in the Mayflower Hotel).

PANAGRA (Pan American-Grace Airways) reports that American tourists no longer will be required to obtain visas for Argentine. All that will be required, for a visit not to exceed three months, is a valid passport and a landing card, which will be issued by transportation companies. Other South American countries which have eliminated visas for American tourists are Bolivia, Ecuador, Venezuela, Chile and Uruguay.

AMERICAN EXPORT Lines reports that its Conte Biancamano is rejoining the Italy-to-South American service until next May, when she will reenter the New York-Italy service for six voyages. She sailed Tuesday on her last New York run until next year.

NEARLY 30 million people visited regions under jurisdiction of the National Park Service in the 1950 travel year, the AAA says. Yucca House in Colorado doubled its attendance with a thumping figure of 41 visitors.

AAA also advises that if you're planning to drive West for the Rose Bowl game, you'd better heed the following:

"The possibility of getting tickets for this year's game are exceedingly remote. Seating capacity has been increased to 99,000, but even another 50,000 would fall far short of satisfying the demand for seats. For the past few years there has been a limited public sale at the Rose Bowl ticket office. This means standing in line all night to be sure of getting in."

SIR ALEXANDER Maxwell, chairman of the British Travel and Holidays Association, who has been in town for the ASTA convention, says the top tourist preference in Britain today is "meeting the people." Maxwell reports that scenery, architecture, museums, and even night life play a secondary role to the actual desire of Americans to meet the people. Sir Alexander calls the trend "purposeful travel."

Tip for Lass Just Learning To Drive Car

By Carol Lane

IF YOUR teen-age daughter is just learning to handle the family car you ought to tell her about the glove compartment trick used by Hollywood starlets and actresses who drive themselves to work every day.

Like most good ideas, it's a simple one involving a 20-cent pair of white cotton gloves, a small bottle of spot remover and a yard or so of cheesecloth.

Tucked away in the glove compartment, the gloves are always handy protection for lifting the hood, wiping dust off the windshield, removing a suitcase or package from the luggage compartment, or other minor chores.

The cheesecloth comes in handy, too, for dusting off the front seat and, with a few drops of the spot remover, for giving the steering wheel a quick "around the horn" swipe to protect white driving gloves or dainty hands. The steering column, hand brake lever and gear shift knob should have an occasional swipe, too.

Gloves, cheesecloth, spot remover — simple insurance for spotless driving.

Apothecary Shop Open in Williamsburg

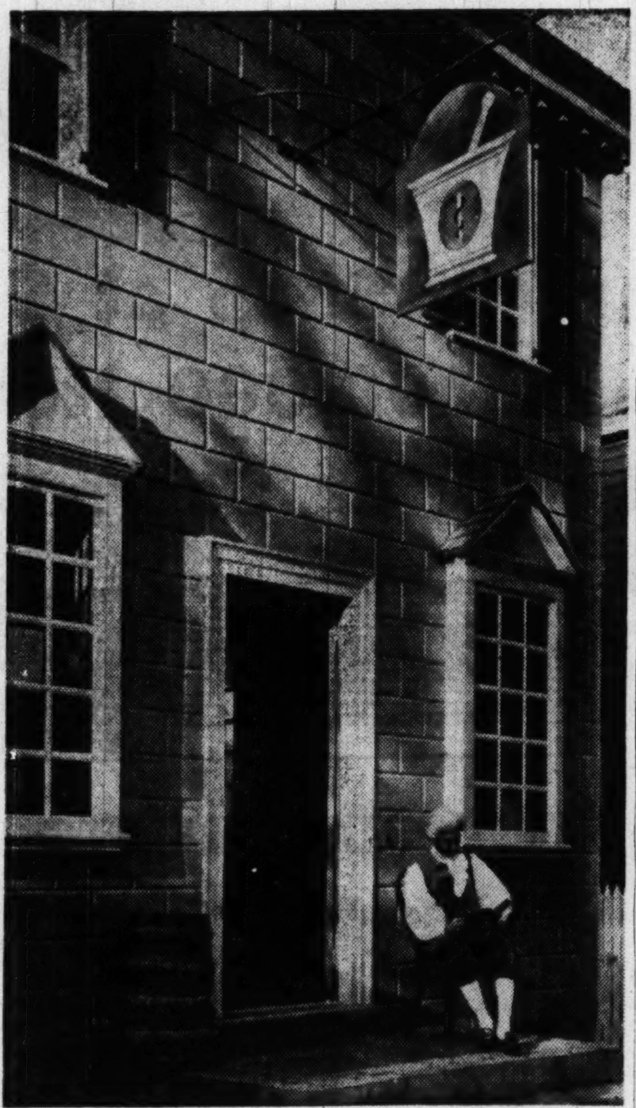
WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — An eighteenth century apothecary shop was opened here recently amid reminders that the increased life span has made man susceptible to new diseases.

Dr. C. J. Van Slyke, in the principal address at the colorful ceremonies opening the reconstructed Pasteur-Galt Apothecary Shop, stated that the increased life span of the average man, nearly double what it was two centuries ago, is the real measure of the progress made since colonial times.

Commending the American Pharmaceutical Association for dedicating this year's National Pharmacy Week to heart disease, Dr. Van Slyke emphasized that it was perhaps the most challenging of the public health problems we now face and "it is our leading cause of death."

"Increasing and justifiable" hope for better control of heart diseases in the near future was given by Dr. Charles A. R. Connor, medical director of the American Heart Association, who also spoke at the luncheon. He said: "This hope is faith in the physicians and scientists engaged in research investigations," and added that "progress in the control of heart disease will be dependent on a continuous and unhampered program of studious inquiry supported by the people as well as the Federal Government."

The authentically reestablished Colonial Apothecary Shop was officially opened when Mrs. V. Lee Kirby, a resident of Williamsburg and direct descendant of Dr. John Minson Galt, who operated the shop in the 1700's, hung Galt's original doctor's certificate on the wall. The valuable certificate hung in the original shop on the site. The assembled luncheon guests, including approximately 100 students of the school of pharmacy of the Medical College of Virginia and practicing pharmacists from Virginia, inspected the new free exhibit of Colonial Williamsburg following the simple ceremonies.



Opening of the old Pasteur-Galt Apothecary Shop in Williamsburg, Va., was held coincident with observance of National Pharmacy Week. The old shop was operated between 1775 and 1778 by two of colonial Virginia's most eminent medical men— Dr. William Pasteur and Dr. John Minson Galt

Austria Schedules '51 Ski Events

During the winter season a full schedule of international ski events is promised in Austria, according to the Vienna office of Thos. Cook & Son. January shows up as the busiest month, with nine events scheduled; seven are planned for February; and three in each of the months of March, April, and May.

The international season begins on January 6 and 7 with the Westenpokal which takes place at Lech-am-Arlberg. The Hannes Schneider Pokal is scheduled at St. Anton-am-Arlberg for January 13-14; and the Giant Slalom and Jumping Races at Zell am See will last three days beginning January 17.

Other January events are the Three Kings Jump at Bad Hofgastein and the Berg Isel Jump at Villach.

Goose and Duck Hunting Dates Set

RALEIGH, N. C.—The 1950-51 goose and duck hunting season in North Carolina will open November 27 and run through January 5. Currituck, Hatteras, Ocracoke and Lake Mattamuskeet are famed hunting places along the Atlantic Flyway. The daily bag limit for geese will be two, and the possession limit two. The duck bag limits will be four a day and eight in possession.

Ancient Church Restored in Edenton, N. C.

Edenton, N. C.—St. Paul's Episcopal Church, dating from 1736 and damaged by fire last year, has been restored and is visited by numerous tourists on U. S. 17. Original bricks were used in restoration and much of ivy clinging to walls was saved. Lords Proprietors and Colonial Governors are buried in the historic graveyard.

A BIG WHITE BRICK COLONIAL
In a Setting of Stately Dogwoods and Towering Oaks
7 Rooms, 3 Bedrooms, 3 Baths
NEARBY ARLINGTON
This beautiful 7-room, white brick Colonial, in a setting of dogwood and towering oaks, is situated well back from the road on a half-acre lot. With title to this property goes a 1/5 interest in "Beechwood Circle," a natural park reserved for the pleasure and privacy of residents in this more desirable Arlington County community. This home, while only 15 minutes from downtown Washington, enjoys the tranquillity and comfort of living that you would be willing to drive hours to find.
The house was custom built before the war and has on the first floor a spacious entrance hall with a graceful staircase across the rear, a beautifully trimmed living room (14x22) with wood-burning fireplace, large dining room (12½x15), entrance onto screened living porch (12x22), a paneled library with half-bath, large, well-equipped kitchen and breakfast area. Second floor is comprised of master bedroom with private bath and two additional large bedrooms and a second bath. Sleeping quarters have access to a large, private sun deck. There is a large recreation room (12x30) with corner fireplace in the basement, also a light, airy, servant's room and bath (above grade) and excellent laundry and workshop facilities. Closet and storage space in this house is exceptional. Attached garage, copper gutters, down spouts and flashing; oil heat.

$123,305,000 Debt Repaid In Full by Kaiser Steel

WITH INTEREST—Henry J. Kaiser (left) is congratulated by RFC Vice Chairman C. Edward Rowe after the West Coast industrialist handed over a check for $91,476,988.92 as the last payment of a $123,305,000 loan on the Kaiser Steel Corp. plant at Fontana, Calif. About 23 million dollars in interest was included

The Reconstruction Finance Corp. last week closed its books on the last of a $123,305,000 loan to the Kaiser Steel Corp. The borrowing was to build a steel plant at Fontana, Calif., during World War II.

Henry J. Kaiser handed to C. Edward Rowe, vice chairman of the RFC, a check for $91,476,-989.92.

Previously, Kaiser Steel had repaid $32,119,009 on the principal of the RFC loan. A total of $22,-944,604 in interest had also been paid. Kaiser said that this meant the Government had received about $1.23 for each dollar of loan.

RFC made its first loan to Kaiser Steel on March 4, 1942 in the amount of $48,700,000 to enable Kaiser to obtain a plant site and begin construction of a steel plant in California. The plant, which supplied steel for Kaiser's shipbuilding division, produced more than a million tons of steel during the war period.

RFC's last loan to Kaiser Steel was made on August 8, 1945, to assist in converting the plant from war to peacetime production.

The repayment was part of the formal completion of a 125-million-dollar financing arrangement, described as the largest single industrial financing by private funds in the history of the western States.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Nov. 4 (AP).—Corn found the going a little rough on the Board of Trade today, but the rest of the grain market continued right along with its upward march. But it was a much more restrained march than in some other sessions this week.

It was strictly a technical market with no news from the outside to influence prices. The comparative easiness of corn was viewed by brokers as a natural development after yesterday's forward surge. However, the selling was not particularly heavy.

Wheat closed ⅛-¾ higher, corn ⅜ to 1 cent lower, oats ½ to 1¾ lower, rye 1⅞-2⅜ higher, soybeans 1½ to 3 cents higher and lard 2 to 7 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Everything but lard ended higher for the week. Lard had a mixed close, 8 cents lower to 22 cents higher. The weakness developed in the November contract and largely reflected rather substantial deliveries of cash lard on these contracts. A slump in live hog prices didn't help.

New York Cotton

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (AP).—Cotton futures closed irregular today with prices 70 cents a bale higher to 40 cents lower. During most of the session a firm undertone prevailed. Selling came into the market in closing minutes of dealings.

The lower trend was attributed to week-end profit taking. Nearby contracts, however, were the only ones depressed into lower ground. Tracers stated that there was also a moderate amount of hedging which contributed to the decline.

Earlier firmness was due to unfavorable weather in the northern portions of the cotton belt. Conditions have been unsettled and it was feared that this would hold up pickings of the cotton crop.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

High Earnings Spell Trouble

How attitudes change. Twenty years ago a chairman of the board of United States Steel Corp. would have popped his buttons making the report Irving S. Olds just released to shareholders. In the nine months ended September 30, U. S. Steel earnings reached the highest level since 1917—$6.12 a share, as against $4.38 in the corresponding period of 1949. That's equivalent to more than $18 a share on the old stock—before the three-for-one splitup.

Livingston

But Olds, in his meeting with newspapermen, was not overcome with joy. In these days of powerful labor unions, such earnings spell trouble. They provide Philip Murray, president of the United Steelworkers, with a talking point in the current negotiations for a wage increase. At the same time, they're going to put Olds in line for another congressional inquiry when and if he raises steel prices, as he says he must. Whenever the Government decides to crack down, Big Steel usually is "It."

A 10 percent wage boost would lop off about 48 million dollars after taxes from Steel's nine-months earnings, bringing it down to 130 million dollars net, or slightly below the 133 million dollars earned last year. Thus, U. S. Steel could absorb a wage rise, assuming other costs didn't boom. However, during an inflation corporate officials look with horror on earnings declines. To them, that's a sign that they're not keeping up with the inflation—especially when the company is embarked on a construction program, the cost of which is rising.

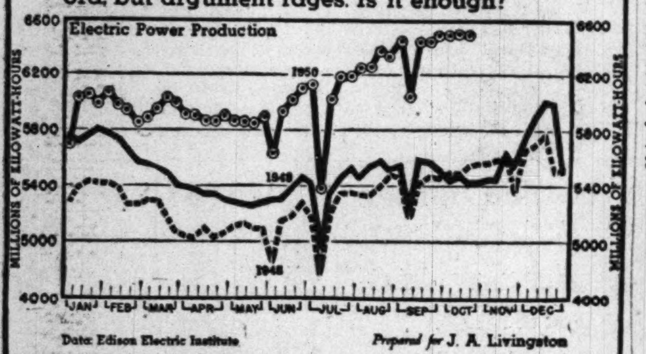
'No Escape'

Olds is on an economic treadmill and can't get off all by himself. In this, he's typical of all business men. He believes a wage increase in steel is bad economics. It will give inflation another turn. He argues that steel workers don't need a wage boost. The cost of living has not increased materially since their last wage boost in July, 1948. In addition, last year the union won its fight for pensions. But this year, auto workers and electrical workers got wage increases. So, as a practical matter, says Olds, "I don't see how we can escape."

Nor is that the end of Olds' inflation problem: He must find the money to build an Eastern seaboard mill near Trenton, N. J. But Wall Street isn't exactly "wild" about steel. The common stock sells for around $40 a share. Yet earnings amount to about $8 a share a year, which easily covers the $3 dividend rate plus extras. The yield is better than 7½ percent.

LIVE WIRES

Electric output, up 20% over '49, breaks record, but argument rages: Is it enough?



Data: Edison Electric Institute — Prepared for J. A. Livingston

Steel common is "cheap" by standards which prevailed in the depression year of 1930 when J. P. Morgan was chairman of the board. Then the common sold between 134⅜ and 198¾, the dividend was $4.25 a share, and after preferred dividends the company registered a deficit on the common. That explains why Olds feels the times are not favorable for new financing. He has to give away too much earning power to raise common-stock money.

Including All Contingencies

That also explains why most big corporations today feel they have to finance expansion out of their own earnings. So, in effect, they price the cost of new plant into their products. The consumer pays for capital expansion rather than the investor. That's a basic change in the last 30 years.

This pay-as-you-go finance policy of corporations is part of the inflation pattern. When wages go up, corporations in turn raise prices, which in turn pump up profits, which in turn spur workers to demand still higher wages.

Both management and labor have responded, have yielded to the economic pressure of the boom, which is exemplified by electric power output. It's running 20 percent ahead of a year ago (see chart)—at an all-time high. Demand has expanded so rapidly that the utility companies are now engaged in a fight with Government officials over whether there's enough power to meet defense requirements.

The industrial upsurge has reduced unemployment close to the irreducible minimum—around two million. Labor is in great demand everywhere. Most companies would rather raise wages than risk strikes or lose workers to higher-paying plants. Nobody wants to miss the market for goods at ever higher prices.

However, higher taxes next year are likely to put a crimp in the upward climb of profits—and in corporation willingness to increase wages. The rumblings—and the stiffer controls—now coming out of Washington point the way.

Lumber Shipments

Lumber shipments of 416 mills reporting to the National Lumber Trade Barometer were 1.0 percent below production for the week ending October 28. In the same week new orders of these mills were 10.9 percent below production. Unfilled orders of the reporting mills amounted to 46 percent of stocks.

New Car Sales Hop 54% Here In September

By S. Oliver Goodman

New car registrations here in September reached 4043, the second best total on record and an upsurge of 54 percent over the same 1949 month.

Cumulative sales for the first nine months amounted to 28,202, highest for that period in history and .. gain of 11.6 percent over the 25,245 in the corresponding period last year. The figures are reported by the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

Tighter credit controls, recently put into effect, have the dealers worried about the sales outlook for the remainder of the year. Some dealers see what they call a double squeeze in the credit restrictions. They say that besides making sales more difficult, the limitations probably will make it necessary for them to increase trade-in allowances.

With used car prices generally on the skids, that could mean reduced profits or possibly a loss on new-car sales involving a trade-in.

Although October sales figures are not available, they are expected to show a substantial decrease here. In addition to the credit restrictions which now require installment payments to be completed in 15 months, dealers have to contend with the fact that new 1951 models soon will be brought out by makers of most low-priced cars. That long-awaited buyers' market appears here.

Following is a monthly comparison of new car registrations in Washington:

	1950	1949
January	2134	2268
February	2207	1829
March	2844	2497
April	3320	3010
May	2544	2826
June	3477	3288
July	3730	4465
August	3903	2442
September	4043	2620

ODD LOTS: The American dollar closed at $1.04 3/32 in Montreal yesterday. . . Inland Steel Co. announced a production record for October when it shipped 300,264 tons of steel, the previous monthly record being 298,162 tons in May 1950. . . . Stocks Waver Despite Flood Of Good News

NEW YORK, Nov. 4 (AP).—For the second week in a row the big bull market of 1949-50 acted mighty tired.

Twice during the week short selling jabs caught the market off guard. There were rallies but they were notable more for their timidity than for the amount of ground they covered.

Business news during the week was rich enough for the market to grow fat and sassy. There was no outstanding unfavorable development to account for the obvious reluctance of buyers to step into the market on any scale.

Probably never in history had Wall Street been favored with so many record high profits reports, so many increased and extra dividends. And to add a touch of spice was a generous helping of proposals to split outstanding stock issues.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Sat.	Fri.
Advances	187	466
Declines	410	399
Unchanged	225	268
Total issues	822	1133

Market response, though, was niggardly—it may have been a case of too much of a good thing.

Traders were more concerned with what the Administration planned to do in the field of taxes and controls and most felt that the bad news wouldn't be laid on the line until after the elections on November 7.

An unfavorable turn to the war news from Korea also dampened the enthusiasm of some traders.

Today's two-hour session was characterized principally by apathy. Prices slowly receded, not because of heavy selling orders but because buyers were either timid or away for the weekend.

Steels were noticeably soggy and Chrysler lost $1 a share.

WHY SMALL BUSINESS MEN FAIL
A Word from The Wall Street Journal

Unexpected changes in business conditions often wreck a small business because the small businessman does not have sufficient resources to weather a severe economic storm.

To offset this handicap, the small businessman must be fast on his feet. He must know how to adapt himself quickly to changing conditions. That is why thousands of small businessmen are turning to The Wall Street Journal. The reports in The Journal come to you DAILY. You get the fastest possible warning of any new trend that may affect your business and personal income. You get the facts in time to take whatever steps are needed to protect your interests, or to seize quickly a new profit-making opportunity. You are promptly and reliably informed on every major new development relating to: Prices, Taxes, Government Controls, Consumer Buying, Inventories, Financing, Industries, Production Trends, Commodities, Securities and New Legislation.

The Wall Street Journal is the complete business DAILY. Has largest staff of writers on business and finance. The only business paper served by all four big press associations. It costs $20 a year, but you can get a Trial Subscription for 3 months for $6—77 issues (in U. S. and Possessions). Just tear out this ad and attach check for $6 and mail. Or tell us to bill you. REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

BASEBALL'S first lady, Laraine Day, is rabid follower of mate Leo Durocher's N. Y. Giants.

JAKE LAMOTTA'S proudest possession isn't middleweight crown. It's his blonde bathing beauty wife who once won title "Mrs. Bronx."

FOOTBALL'S most famous wife is Jane Russell, with spouse Bob Waterfield.

Those Athletes' Wives!

What kind of helpmates do 'muscle men' pick?

JOCKEY Eddie Arcaro and wife usually pose sitting down. She's taller than he is.

TWO SPORTS merged when ballplayer Jackie Jensen, diver Zoe Ann Olsen, wed.

AMERICAN athletes are known the world over for their sportsmanship, their high salaries, their love of packaged breakfast food–and their beautiful wives.

And when it comes to the latter (see photographs), they stand alone.

The wives shown here include two movie stars, an Olympic diving champion, a former debutante and two ex-models. All of them are beautiful.

Just why is it that athletes always seem to get the good-looking girls?

Here Are The Reasons

Well, in the first place, they're celebrities. They are also frequently rich. And sometimes they're even handsome. But mostly, it's because the athlete is used to the company of beautiful girls.

In high school he was the idol of the bobby-soxers. In college he was king among co-eds. By the time he turns professional, he has usually married the cream of the crop!

KISS from his wife was Bobby Riggs' reward when he won pro tennis title. Like many other athletes, Riggs apparently is partial to blondes.

SOME DO! SOME DON'T!

WITH—OR WITHOUT RINSING—

Tide does a better washing job than any soap on earth!

Whichever way you wash — Tide gives you

WHITE, BRIGHT, DAZZLING CLEAN CLOTHES!

Lady, it just doesn't matter which method you choose—or what soaps you may have tried—Tide will do a better job for your family wash than any soap! Tide, unlike soap, forms no soap film EVER. That one fact alone revolutionized washing results. What's more, Tide actually dissolves dirt out of clothes . . . holds it suspended in the sudsy water. Wring out the clothes—dirt goes, too! And your wash comes so wonderfully fresh and clean it's a joy to hang it out! Get Procter & Gamble's Tide today—there's nothing like it!

"My Tide wash simply sparkles— it's so dazzling white, so sweet, so clean!"

SAYS MRS. BERTHA BRADLEY, MILTON, MASS.

"I just can't rave enough about the way Tide gets dirty clothes clean! Tide really seems different—it leaves my wash so dazzling white, so sweet and clean! And clothes dry so beautifully soft . . . and have such a wonderful fresh, 'outdoorsy' smell. Believe me, there's nothing like Tide!"

Never before TIDE could you wash your heaviest, dirtiest clothes SO CLEAN!

- Leaves no soap film ever!
- Miracle clean clothes—with or without rinsing!
- Dazzling white clothes—with no bleach or bluing!
- Soap-dulled colors actually come brighter!
- Clothes dry soft—iron beautifully!
- And Tide does all this safely—rinse or no rinse!

HERMAN HICKMAN: he grew weary of headlocks...

The Turning Point

Herman Hickman made a split-second decision

AMONG football coaches, Yale's Herman Hickman holds two distinctions. At 37 he's the youngest coach in the Ivy League. And at 303 pounds he's the fattest man in his business.

In addition, Hickman is without a doubt the only former pro wrestler ever to hold a job at Yale. And—most remarkable of all—in a field where coaches are haggard and hollow-eyed, Hickman is as refreshing as a daisy in a slag heap. He's a happy coach.

That he should coach football at all is due to a split-second decision made in 1934 when he was wrestling a suety fellow named Omar the Turk at Winston Salem, N.C.

Hickman, whose intelligence quotient was undoubtedly one of the highest ever exhibited in the wrestling business, had graduated from the University of Tennessee. An All-American guard whose tastes ran to philosophy and the classics, he was eventually forced by the needs of the flesh into pro football, then into wrestling. But his heart wasn't in it.

Fed Up With Wrestling

Such was his situation the night he faced Omar the Turk. And when Omar for the tenth time tried to tie a bow knot with his left leg, Hickman reached a decision. This, he suddenly realized, was a strange way for a scholar to make a living.

If he were going to be in a rough business, he decided, it might at least be in more uplifting surroundings!

"I left the ring," he recalls, "without further formality."

The next day he applied for a job as line coach at North Carolina State. In 1942 he joined the staff at West Point and six years later he succeeded coach Howie Odell at Yale.

"Here I'm happy," he says, "they even let me use the library!"

Add a glamorous "foreign" touch to your meals, now and then . . . but do it the easy American way, with time-saving canned chicken and turkey.

Mighty good for "middag," as the main meal of the day is called in Sweden. Take it from the oven and serve this Swedish Chicken Ring piping hot with a dash of pickle relish.

Swedish Chicken Ring

Made this easy way, with biscuit mix, this tempting, flaky Swedish Chicken Ring takes only about 18 minutes baking time and makes 4 big-hearted servings.

- 2 cups Bisquick
- ½ to ⅔ cup milk
- 6 oz. can Swanson Chicken Spread
- 2 tablespoons diced pimiento
- ⅓ cup frozen peas, cooked
- ½ cup pickle relish

Combine Bisquick and milk following directions on package for rolled biscuit dough. Roll the dough ½" thick into a rectangle 6" by 14". Cover evenly with Chicken Spread, pimiento and peas. Make one long roll, pressing loose edge to the roll. Place on baking sheet and bring ends together to form ring. Make slits in ring about 2" apart. Bake in hot oven (450°) for about 18 minutes.

And that's just one of the many good things you can do with Swanson Chicken Spread. This delicately seasoned minced chicken is best known as a top notch sandwich maker. Wonderful just as it comes from the can for making 5 big man-sized sandwiches. Try it soon.

Tastes Like the Work of a Chinese Chef

TURKEY CHOW MEIN

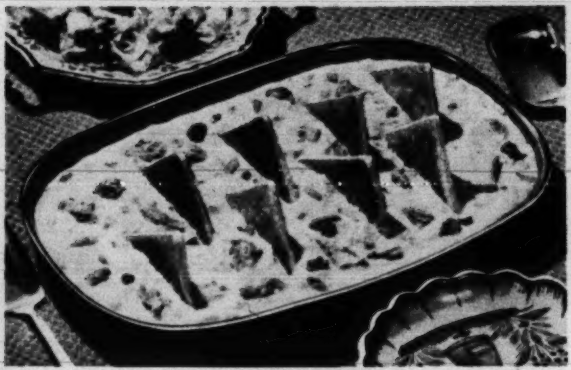
(Makes 6 servings)

The wise Chinese give poultry an important place on their menus. You'll find it a wise choice, too, for poultry is one of the thriftiest foods you can serve. Canned boned turkey (as processed by Swanson) is all juicy luscious meat without a bit of waste. Rich in needed protein, too!

If you prefer, you can make this savory oriental dish with boned chicken. It costs only slightly more than the thrifty boned turkey we've suggested here.

- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- ½ cup raw celery strips
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 1½ cups water
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon corn starch
- 1 6-oz. can Swanson Boned Turkey, diced
- 1 cup canned bean sprouts
- Salt and pepper

Melt butter or margarine in a skillet. Add celery and onion, and cook slowly until partially tender. Add water and continue cooking until tender. Blend soy sauce and corn starch and stir into mixture. Add turkey and bean sprouts. Bring to boil and cook 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Season to taste. Serve over cooked rice, chow mein noodles or—for something new, serve French-fried noodles made by frying narrow packaged noodles in deep hot fat (360°) until golden, about 2 minutes, then drain on absorbent paper.



"Sailboats" a la King

Platter with a French Flair

(Makes 4 servings)

See how something as simple as setting perky triangles of toast sail-boat fashion into a platter of creamy chicken a la king makes this favorite dish look new and gives it a gay French flair.

Long, slow cooking is another culinary secret of the French. But for us, with foods like Swanson canned chicken products, the time-taking, careful simmering and cooking has already been done by latest pressure-cooking methods. Get Swanson Chicken a la King at your grocer's. It's rich in chunks of juicy chicken, spicy pimiento, and tender young mushrooms, then here's all you have to do—

Heat 2 cans of Swanson a la King. Toast, until golden, 4 slices of bread. Cut each slice diagonally. Make little "sails" by placing toast—tips up—in the steaming platter of a la king.

Borrowed from Old Mexico

CHICKEN ENCHILADAS

Here is a dish that would take many hours, fixed the true Mexican way. Yet, with canned Chicken Fricassee that's ready to heat and serve, and a trusty pancake mix, you can have it in a matter of minutes. Makes 3 hearty servings.

Make pancakes by beating together 1 cup Bisquick, ½ to ¾ cup milk, and 1 egg. Heat griddle so a few drops of water sprinkled on the surface dance around before disappearing. Make 6 pancakes, pouring ¼ cup batter on griddle for each. Turn when bubbles appear.

While making pancakes, have Chicken Fricassee heating in a saucepan. Take ⅔ cup grated American cheddar cheese and sprinkle over 3 of the pancakes. Then cover each with another pancake and pour hot, tender Swanson Chicken Fricassee, butter gravy and all, over the top. Garnish with tomato wedges and ripe olives. And there you have it. Mexican Enchiladas, American style.

Afraid to go back home and "face the music," Mr. A (seated) tells his story to Judge Libby E. Sachar (right) at a private hearing. Standing beside .

A net to catch Runaway

A tough new law makes them support their families, but gives them a break, too . . . !

BY KARL KOHRS

THE LAW is catching up with runaway husbands. Until last year, any man fed up with supporting his wife and kids could shrug off the whole business.

All he had to do was pack a suitcase and move to another state.

So long as he stayed there, only a criminal indictment and extradition could bring him home. That is slow, clumsy, and expensive. It is also largely impractical, because it seldom produces any money for the upkeep of mother and children.

But here's good news. An important new law is giving some of our civil courts power to force runaway dads to support the families they've deserted in other states.

That law is called the USDL. The letters stand for "Uniform Support of Dependents Law." This neat bit of legislation should eventually end a situation which American courts have branded a national disgrace.

Literally thousands of husbands have fled to other states. Many of them were outright deserters. But others have fled from unbearable family situations. (Some husbands have become fugitives and common criminals in the eyes of the law because they refused to remain home and support unfaithful wives.)

USDL is supposed (1) to compel deserters to pay through civil courts, and (2) to remove the criminal stigma. So far, it has been adopted by Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Oklahoma, Virginia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

To see how the USDL works, I recently sat in on several desertion hearings, through the joint cooperation of the husbands and wives involved and of two judges: Dudley F. Sicher of the Domestic Relations Court in New York City, and Libby E. Sachar (in picture above), of the Domestic Relations Court in Elizabeth, N. J.

Always Held in Private

USDL HEARINGS are always held in "chambers," rather than in open court. Judges have found that husbands and wives relax and will talk more frankly in private. That helps the court solve their problems.

One case involved a certain Mr. A, a husky man in his thirties, with a pleasant, honest face. He answered questions simply and directly. He was a mechanic, he said. He'd left his wife and two children several years ago. The reason? Mr. A shrugged his shoulders.

"One of those things," he said.

When Mr. A walked out of his home, Mrs. A retaliated by swearing out a criminal warrant on charges of abandonment.

"But I'm not a criminal," Mr. A protested when a friend told him about the warrant. "I haven't killed anybody nor stolen anything. I work hard. But I'm almost broke now. I can't see my way clear."

"Play it smart," Mr. A's friend said. "Get out of the state. They can't touch you."

So Mr. A went to New Jersey, where he thought himself immune from an order of support. He got a job, and things started to clear up a bit.

But meanwhile, Mrs. A was struggling with the problem of supporting her children. Desperate for help, she finally went to the Domestic Relations Court in New York City and told her story to Judge Sicher.

What the Judge Did

A FEW MONTHS AGO," the judge told her, "this civil court would have been helpless. But now we can help you, because New York and New Jersey have the Uniform Support of Dependents Law. This gives civil courts like this the power to compel your husband to support you."

Then Judge Sicher asked Mrs. A a lot of questions. "When did you last hear from your husband? . . . Do you know where he is? . . ."

"How much," the judge asked, "do you need to support yourself and your children?"

"About $25 a week," Mrs. A answered.

The judge then called a probation officer and a welfare worker, who gave him a full report. After which Judge Sicher certified $25 a week as the amount the family needed. Next, he sent the testimony to Judge Sachar's court, with a notation that available evidence indicated Mr. A was in New Jersey.

The New Jersey court served Mr. A with a summons, then determined where he worked and how much money he earned.

At the private hearing, Mr. A explained his problem to Judge Sachar as best he could. His fear of being arrested as a common criminal, he said, kept him from going back to his home state.

"Let me make one thing clear to you," said Judge Sachar at this point. "The charge of non-support against you is civil, not criminal. If you agree to pay your family the amount set by the court, you have nothing to fear from the law."

"You mean," said Mr. A, "that I can go back to see my family without being arrested?"

Judge Sachar nodded.

"That makes things altogether different," Mr. A said. "Now I feel like a free man again. And of course I'll pay!"

That is how USDL gave the deserting husband a break—and came to the rescue of his abandoned wife and children!

The new law gets results. In one instance, a father fled across state lines, but USDL finally caught up with him. Investigation showed he was not working but was perfectly able to do so. What's more, he was capable of making $150 a week as an accountant. The court gave him one month to get a job and start paying up.

An amusing misconception of the law came to light at another USDL hearing.

Served with a summons, a runaway father said: "You can't make me pay. There's a new law that says I don't have to."

"What law is that," he was asked.

"Something called the USDL!"

In most instances, courts have found that civil action is enough to make the deserting husband come across. If he refuses to pay, he can be made to furnish cash security.

Jailing an errant husband is regarded as futile. It not only keeps him from earning money, but it puts the burden of supporting him on the state. And, more than likely, the state has to support his family.

Jacob Zukerman, director of the National Desertion Bureau, estimates that in America today there are more than 250,000 wives, and 750,000 children under the age of 16, who are hapless victims of desertion. All forms of relief for these unfortunates run to about $205,000,000 a year.

Zukerman gives free legal advice on desertion and domestic relations problems—and goes after fugitive husbands. When he finds them, he first tries to effect a reconciliation. If that fails, he tries to get them to support their abandoned families. USDL, Zukerman says, gives him a new weapon of great effectiveness.

A million wives and children suffer today because of runaway husbands...and cost taxpayers $205,000,000 a year.

Discussing the law after the hearing which I attended, Judge Sachar told me:

- "Most women don't want to bring criminal action. They simply want help.
- "Relief is degrading. When a wife knows that her husband is contributing money to keep her off relief rolls, she can regain her self-respect.
- "Likewise, children feel that if their father makes an effort to help, he is not a complete failure as a parent.
- "USDL is a good thing. But at present, too few lawyers know it exists."

Still Gaps in the Law

BUT LEGAL AUTHORITIES dealing with USDL warn that the new law isn't a cure-all. It has gaps, and it will take time and careful thought to plug them.

Many states still haven't adopted USDL. And some that have lack the administrative staffs needed to make it work effectively.

But in some states the legal machinery is well set up—and working. Said one judge recently: "When all 48 states have USDL, we'll have a real remedy at last for the family disaster which desertion always causes."

World's Safest Driver?

He hasn't had a crackup in 47 years.

One way to avoid accidents: Jackson avoids driving fatigue by roadside relaxing with Mrs. Jackson.

1910 Maxwell was considered too fast.

BY ERNEST LA FRANCE & SID ROSS

At the present rate, says the National Safety Council, HALF the people born this year are doomed to be injured or killed in an automobile accident! Keep this shocking fact in mind as you read the following article!—ED.

BACK IN 1903, at the age of 14, a boy named Earl E. Jackson, of Providence, R. I., hoisted himself into the seat of a bright, new Locomobile.

As behooved a boy allowed to drive a behemoth belonging to his father's boss, he drove carefully.

In 1950, now 61, and living in the accident-happy borough of Brooklyn, N. Y., Earl Jackson is still driving carefully. During the intervening years, while 910,000 Americans were being killed in or by automobiles, he has hurt neither himself, nor anyone else, nor any of his cars. Among the latter have been a White Steamer, a Maxwell, a Packard Six, several Providence taxicabs, an Oldsmobile, a Hupmobile, and his present neat old Studebaker.

And so Jackson, a utility company executive, has been recognized by the American Automobile Association as one of America's safest drivers. What does a safe driver like Jackson think about? What are his driving principles?

ANSWER to speeders: Jackson gets off the road, lets them by. His limit is 45 mph.

"Pedestrians are always right," says Earl Jackson. He stops even when he's right.

For one thing, Jackson refuses to go over 45 miles an hour.

"Some hotshot drivers shout at me and ask if I think I'm back in the horse-and-buggy days," he says. "I just keep over in that right hand lane and cruise along." He never goes over his 45-mile limit.

Ever since roads have been crowded, he says, he has always kept his eye on "four other guys–the one ahead of me, the one behind me and one guy on each side." And it's because he always extends to them the full courtesies of the road, Jackson believes, that he has set his record.

"Let the other guy have the right of way he's fighting for," he says. "Let him be the guy to rush to an accident. Nine out of ten times I'll be right behind him at the next traffic light."

He Meets Them Later

Jackson keeps at least 100 feet from the car in front. Even then he's cautious about what the "other guy might do." He keeps checking his rear vision mirror and if he sees a line of cars trailing him he pulls up to the side of the road and lets them pass!

"A couple of hours later I'm smoking a cigarette with them on the ferry," he chuckles.

He has lost his temper on several occasions, at "screwy drivers" but has always cooled off fast. But his pet peeve is the driver who rides his rear bumper. Jackson very carefully puts his foot on the brake to light up his 'stop' lights. If this doesn't make the man behind drop back, Jackson gradually slows down to 10 MPH and then waves the other car onward.

Jackson has only contempt, however, for the "slow driver" who holds up traffic on winding, crowded roads where passing is difficult.

"He is one of the greatest dangers on the road today," he says.

This, then, is how a man drives safely for 47 years! Are Earl Jackson's ideas funny? Is it silly never to drive over 45 MPH? Ridiculous to slow down to 25 MPH to light a cigarette? Laughable to think that any driver should ALWAYS keep BOTH hands on the wheel? Perhaps it is. But the fact remains: after 47 years of driving, Earl Jackson is alive – and 910,000 other motorists have been killed!

Here's how Jackson drives:

These are ten iron-clad rules that have enabled him to run up a record of almost a half-century of driving without accidents.

1. ALWAYS keep ALL windows clean (above).
2. ALWAYS keep car and equipment, including brakes, in perfect condition.
3. ALWAYS keep your mind on driving.
4. ALWAYS observe ALL speed laws.
5. ALWAYS be wide-awake at the wheel.
6. ALWAYS stay at least 100 feet from the car in front, especially in rain.
7. ALWAYS give the car in back clear signals, in plenty of time.
8. ALWAYS give pedestrians right-of-way.
9. ALWAYS anticipate what other drivers are liable to do BEFORE they do it.
10. ALWAYS be courteous on the road.

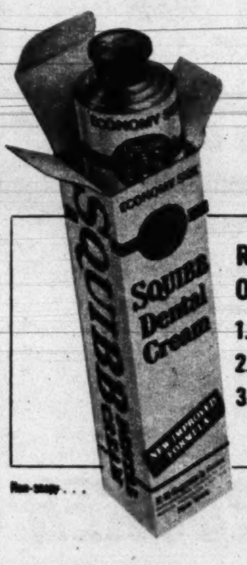
Can a dentifrice stop this?

Squibb gives you facts!

1. There's No Such Thing as a Miracle Dentifrice. You see, many things cause tooth decay . . . eating wrong foods especially during childhood, illness, infections, metabolic defects, and acids that form in your mouth after you eat. That last cause is the only cause that any non-prescription dentifrice can help combat.

2. Brushing After Every Meal Helps. Bacteria in your mouth turn food particles into dangerous acid. Squibb Dental Cream helps neutralize acids with magnesium hydrate . . . helps make them harmless.

3. The Best Way to Fight Decay. Use a reliable dentifrice after every meal when acid formation is at its peak. See your dentist twice a year for a thorough cleaning and check-up. Take his advice for between-visit tooth care. He's still your best protection against needless worry, pain, expense.

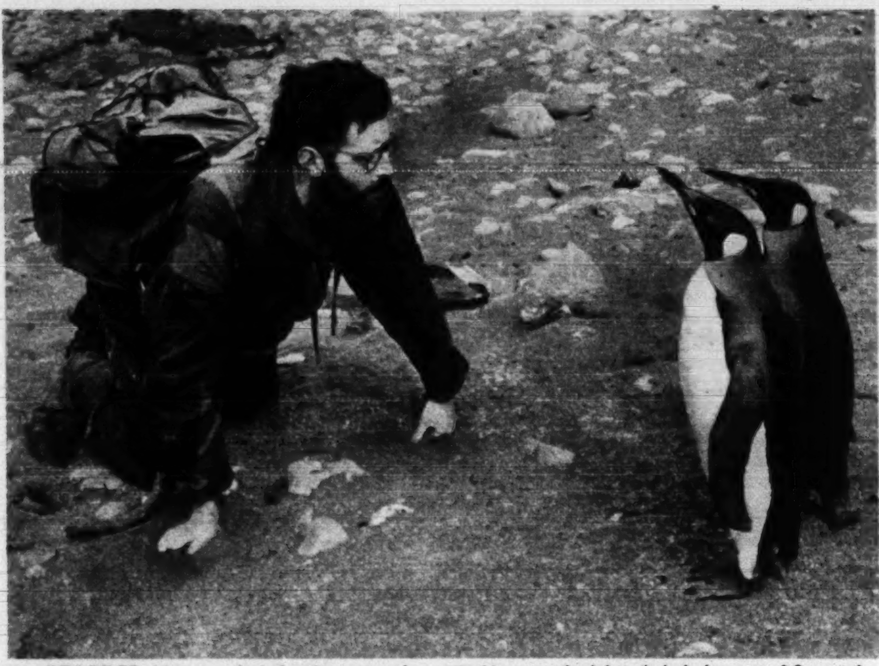


REMEMBER THESE FACTS; NO OTHER DENTIFRICE CAN HELP:

1. neutralize acid more effectively
2. clean the teeth with safety more thoroughly
3. give you a cleaner, fresher mouth and breath

. . . than reliable Squibb Dental Cream.

Non-soapy . . . moderate foaming action . . . harmless if swallowed . . . zestful taste of fresh mint



BEARDED Norman Laird, photographer, introduces self to two king penguins on Macquarie Island. Laird spent 10 months there with meteorological expedition.

Happy people of Macquarie Island

Away from troublesome humans, they find peace on desolate isle in South Pacific

If there is a Promised Land for birds and animals, Macquarie Island is it. Macquarie, in case you don't know, lies in a lonely part of the world – 1,000 miles south of Australia. There's no noise except the cry of birds, no rushing motorcars, no smoke, no wars – and no humans!

It wasn't always thus. In 1810, this bleak, gale-swept crag, far off the ship lanes, was discovered by seal hunters. They stormed ashore and clubbed millions of seals out of existence. Then they turned on the penguins. By 1920, there was hardly a seal or penguin left. But in 1935, just in time, a wise government in Australia made Macquarie a wildlife sanctuary. And today, as you can see, the seals and penguins – and other wild things – are coming back.

The penguins you see on the opposite page are part of the estimated million that now live on Macquarie.

Raisin Festival Buns

Beth Merriman, PARADE'S FOOD EDITOR

THIS WEEK, we'd like to share with you a brand new raisin recipe—sugary, delectable Raisin Buns. They're good served any time of day, with coffee or tea. (You might even call them Raisin Festival Buns, because this week America observes the Festival of Raisins.)

Try Raisin Buns during the holiday season, when you plan a special breakfast. You can make filling and topping mixtures the day before. In the morning, whisk the buns together and bake..

Raisin Festival Buns

FILLING:
1 cup seedless raisins
¾ cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ cup melted butter or margarine

DOUGH:
3 cups biscuit mix
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 cup milk

TOPPING:
2 tablespoons melted butter
2 tablespoons cream
6 tablespoons granulated sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon

FILLING: Rinse raisins, drain and grind or chop fine. Combine with sugar, spice and butter, or margarine; stir to blend.

DOUGH: Combine biscuit mix and sugar. Stir in milk. Turn out onto lightly-floured board and knead lightly. Roll dough into a thin rectangle (about 12 x 10 inches). Spread filling evenly over dough and roll as for jelly roll. Pat and pull roll until about 16 inches in length, being careful not to break dough. Cut crosswise into 16 slices. Place slices, cut side down, in well-greased baking pan (about 9 inches square). Bake in hot oven, 425°F., about 20 minutes. Remove from oven, spread top with blended topping ingredients. Place under broiler and broil 4 to 5 minutes or until topping is bubbly and lightly browned. Serve hot. Yield: 16 buns.

How to Be a Totem Pole

By HY GARDNER

JERRY LESTER has never been nearer an Indian reservation than the time he entertained in a Las Vegas casino. But the elfin little TV clown is the only one-man totem pole in the U.S.

Like Harvey the rabbit, Lester's totem pole doesn't exist. But, like the mythical bunny, the pole seems to exist.

Actually, Lester becomes the pole himself in a series of elaborate moves. Starting on the floor and slowly raising himself to his toes, he flails his arms to build the pole (in the audience's mind) higher and higher.

On television and in night clubs, Lester is a spontaneous performer, who has mastered the trick of making an audience feel it plays an important part of the act.

He's the new star of "Broadway Open House" on NBC-TV.

Like his totem pole act, his bean bag club has become a Lester trademark. The club has no dues, no rules, no regulations, no clubrooms. The one thing it has is members, hundreds of thousands of televiewers to whom a bean bag is a nostalgic reminder of carefree childhood days.

He's King of Bean Bags

The bean bag gimmick wasn't planned, Jerry says. It just happened one night when he came across a bean bag backstage, tossed it to the audience, shouting "Happy bean bag to you." A fan tossed it back and for a few minutes a game of catch took place between actor and audience.

Though he's still a night-worker, Lester is really a family man who finds his diversion back home in Old Greenwich, Connecticut. Here he likes to tinker with tools, give barbecue parties and toy with his collection of old U.S. coins and new U.S. thousand-dollar bills. His ambition is some day to grow enough beans on his property to fill the demands of all his fans for bean bags.

which is crowned by Lester disguised as radiator cap . . . Lester began his career as ballet dancer.

OVER 2000 WILL WIN IN THIS WESTINGHOUSE $28,000 LIGHT BULB CONTEST

3rd PRIZE—$500

NEXT 30 PRIZES $100 EACH

Next 1000 Prizes—$10 Each

Next 1000 Prizes—Westinghouse RS Sun Lamp Bulbs (Retail Value—$8.50)

HURRY! HURRY! contest closes December 4th

Here's a wonderful way to brighten up your house in more ways than one! You buy three Westinghouse light bulbs to enter the contest. They'll do wonders for any room in the house—give you long, efficient service, and better light to see, work, and play by. And... you'll have a chance to win as much as $5,000, or one of 2032 other attractive prizes. Just complete this sentence in 25 additional words or less: "I like a brightly lighted home because . . ." It's fun for everyone . . . and anybody can win. It may be you! So don't wait! Get started now—today!

FOLLOW THESE EASY RULES

1 Buy three Westinghouse light bulbs and get entry blank from your dealer. Finish this sentence in 25 additional words or less: "I like a brightly lighted home because . . ."

2 Mail your entry to Westinghouse Light Bulb contest, Box 86, New York 46, N. Y. Contest closes Dec. 4, 1950. Enter as often as you like, but for each entry you must certify that you have bought three Westinghouse light bulbs, giving dealer's name and address.

3 If your dealer has no entry blanks, it is entirely permissible to write your entry on plain paper. You must then buy three Westinghouse bulbs and have dealer sign, stamp or attach sales slip to the paper on which you write your entry. Be sure to print your name and address and dealer's name and address.

4 Prizes for best sentences will be awarded on basis of sincerity, originality and aptness of thought. Judges' decisions are final. Duplicate prizes will be awarded in case of ties.

5 All winners will be notified by mail. Complete prize-winner lists will be mailed to all contestants approximately six weeks after close of contest. Contest limited to United States and Hawaii.

Enter Early, Enter Often

For each entry you simply buy 3 Westinghouse 25, 40, or 60 watt Light Bulbs . . . or buy any Westinghouse bulbs with total cost of 36¢ or more, such as three-lite bulb, silvered bowl bulb, or Westinghouse heat lamp.

PENNSYLVANIA farmers take a closer look at model's flower-bedecked velvet gown. Model stands on runway set up from door in truck. In 3 days, show played to 10 factories and farms.

AT LEHIGH Structural Steel plant, the show was staged in shadow of overhead highway.

WORKERS at Universal-Atlas Cement Co. in Northampton climbed out on tanks to watch.

Fashion Caravan

Styles invade factories, farms

ALLENTOWN, Pa.

THE MAN WHO RUNS a busy department store here has the fixed idea that since men pay for their wives' clothes, they should know more about them!

Accordingly, Max Hess, Jr., of Hess Bros., a booming institution, loaded up a fleet of trucks with pretty models and drove forth to factories and farms.

At such masculine kingdoms as the Bethlehem Steel plant, the Hazleton coal mine and the Mack Truck plant, the shocking pink vans stopped long enough for a 10-minute fashion show, a cheerful talk on what men should expect their wives to be wearing this winter. There were (1) a good deal of applause and (2) not a few wolf calls. No orders were taken on the spot but the men reported at home. Pennsylvania wives since have been coming in to buy "caravan dresses."

AT FARMS, wives and children edged in near runway. They liked the evening gowns best.

NEW fall fashions leave one iron worker (left) dubious while companions clap and whistle.

INSIDE crowded van, models set a record: in 10 minutes, they made some 15 changes.

GOLD LAME frock brought appreciative response from boiler workers who liked models, too.

How to make every bath a picnic: a Finnish

Steam Party

GETTING BORED with that same old Saturday night bath? Take a tip from Farmer Kusti Nuppula, of Owls Head, Me. Go in for saunas, or steam baths.

Like America's other 115,000 Finns, he regards a sauna as part bath, part neighborhood social and endurance contest.

AT DUSK, menfolk march out to sauna carrying bucket of water to throw on rocks.

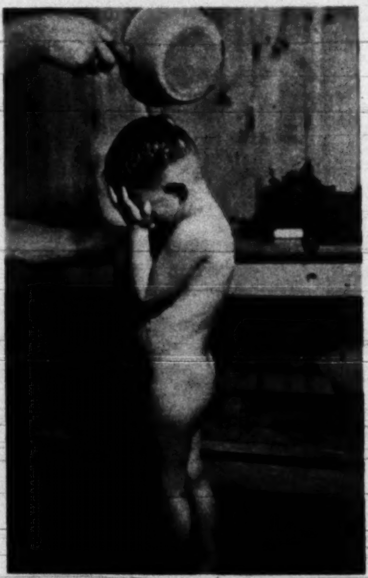
It begins on Saturday morning when Farmer Nuppula tells his wife to light the birch logs under the barrel of stones in the steam house.

Saturday afternoon, while the stones are getting red-hot, the Nuppulas phone their friends to come right over.

Carrying coffee cups, beer, towels and bundles of birch twigs, the menfolk all march into the sauna. Taking off their clothes, they throw ladles of water on the hot stones and sit down on benches. As the steam pushes the temperature up to 140°, they switch themselves with the birch leaves. Last man out is a hero.

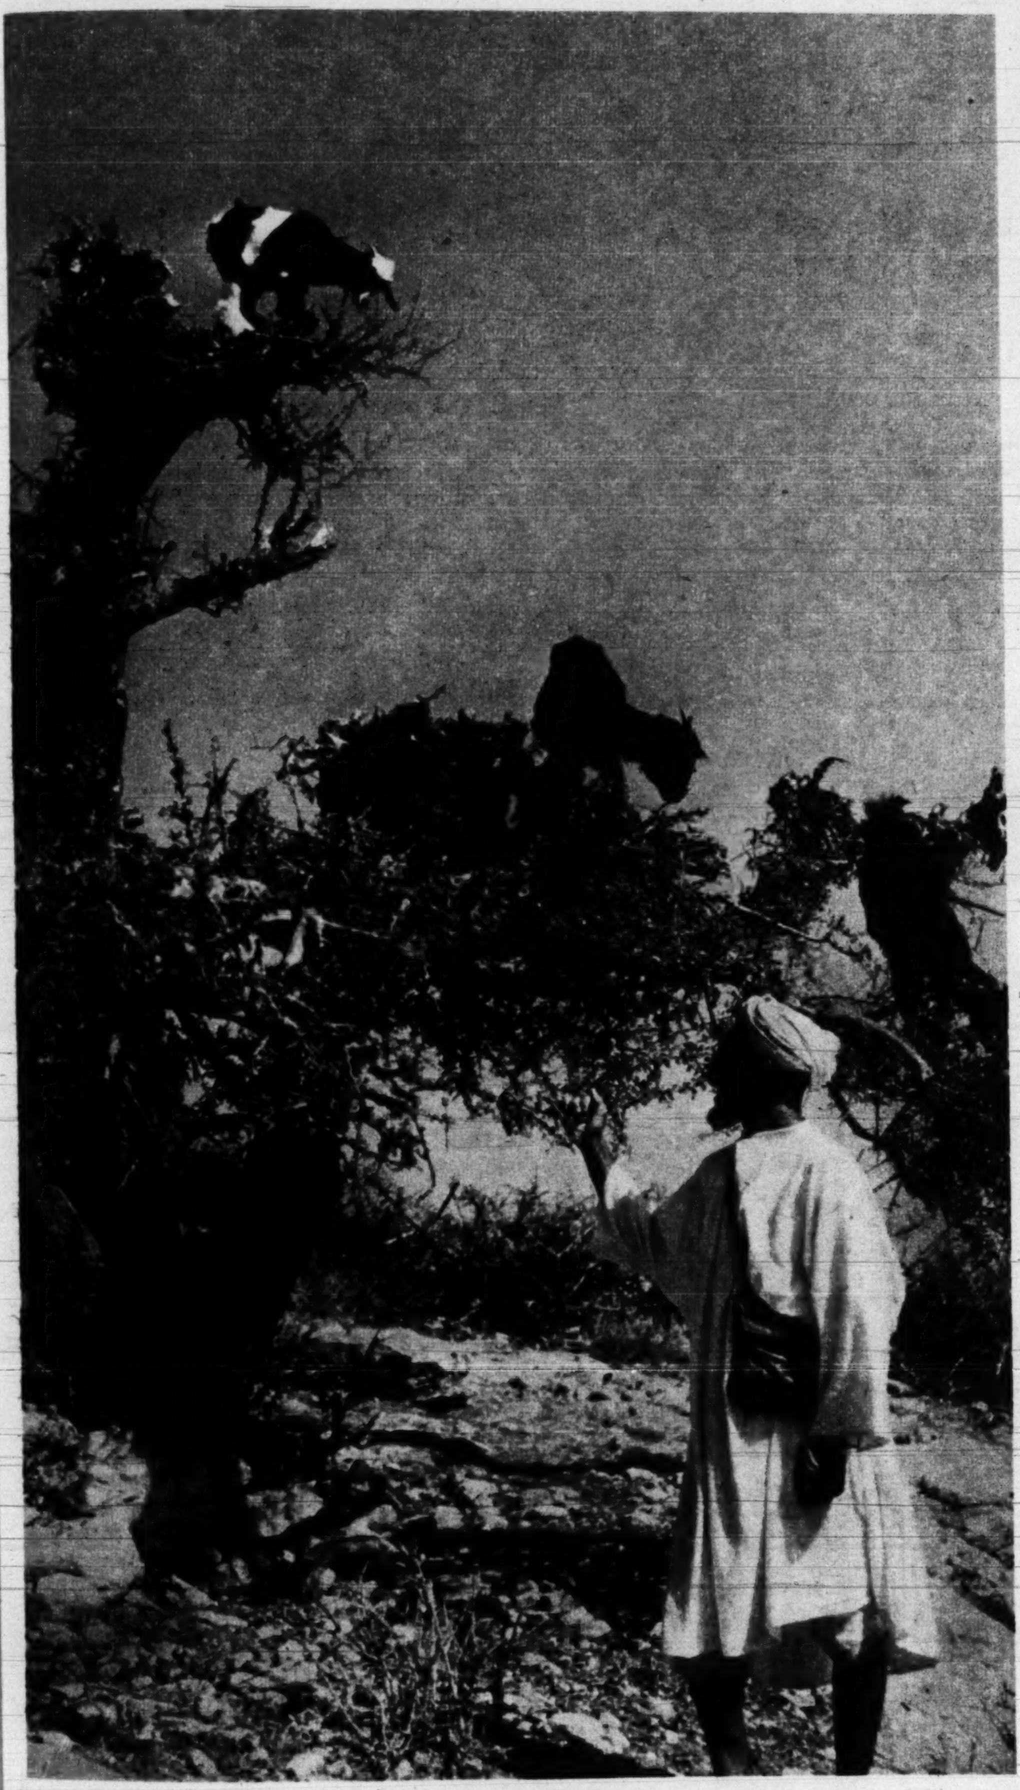
Wearing the towels, they sit around the stove in the dressing-room talking and drinking the beer and coffee.

When the men are finished, Mrs. Nuppula and her friends go in. By Saturday night, Owls Head is clean, and talked out!



FARMBOY Gerald Nuppula likes steam part, shies under water rinse.

AFTER women have had turn in sauna, Mrs. Nuppula serves more coffee, cakes.



Goats in Trees?

No trick photography, these goats really do climb trees. They're natives of Mogador, a seaport on the east coast of French Morocco, and during the summer, when Mogador's ground is too dry to grow grass, they scramble up olive trees for their supper! ★

AT 20, beautiful Silvana Mangano holds international screen laurels. She has made three movies, already has won acclaim as Italy's most talented newcomer.

Italy's Rita Hayworth

By Kay Sullivan

Italy's latest gift to the American screen is a lithe, sensuous 20-year-old named Silvana Mangano.

Italians have tagged her their "Rita Hayworth," and some think she'll outshine even Anna Magnani, long queen of Italian movies.

Americans will soon see la Mangano in "Bitter Rice," a stormy, occasionally ugly, melodrama about migrant rice pickers in Italy's Po Valley. They'll find her tough, gaminlike, but with some of the subtle warmth and shyness that has given America's Rita her fame.

The Guests Were Outranked

It was the kind of party gobs always dream of. The officers did the work! For the story, be sure to read PARADE next week.

AS glamor-mad field hand in "Bitter Rice," Silvana spends hours listening to jazz, reading lurid magazines. Pin-up picture caption over bed says: "Hello, handsome."

... She's Silvana Mangano: you'll be seeing her soon

The story of "Bitter Rice" is hardly novel. Silvana Mangano is a migrant rice-picker who, eager for "glamour," falls in with a hoodlum, plots with him to steal the rice she picks.

"Bitter Rice's" plot is lurid; its locale—the rarely photographed rice fields of the Po—bleakly beautiful. But Silvana dominates the film. Dancing a reckless boogie-woogie or crawling, gun in hand, toward her lover, she manages to keep her fiery emotions credible.

Tried Out for a Movie

Like many movie "finds," Mangano never expected to become an actress. But in 1946 she was chosen "Miss Rome," and thereafter got a model's job. A friend suggested she try out for a movie that the Italian director, Guiseppe de Santis, was making. De Santis chose her ahead of 100 or more experienced actresses.

On location for four months, Silvana lived the brutish life of the women rice pickers. From sunrise to sunset, she joined them, standing knee-deep in water under a blazing sun. She ate her meals out of a thin mess kit, dressed in burlap, and went barefoot with them. With her in the cast—and the rice fields—was American actress Doris Dowling. The two became fast friends.

While she was making "Bitter Rice," Silvana met producer Dino de Laurentis, whom she later married. They live among the tombs of ancient Romans on the Via Appia. They have a six-months-old daughter.

So far—perhaps because she's still far from Hollywood—young Signorina Mangano hasn't been bitten by the "show-off" bug. She uses little make-up, lets her light brown hair blow free.

"She's like a child," one friend remarked recently. "When you sit there and talk with her, she's as likely as not to keep turning her diamond in the sun just to watch it sparkle. To her, it's simply part of a new and very wonderful world."

Child or not, Silvana Mangano performs well in "Bitter Rice." Italy's Hayworth is a star to watch.

BRIGHT-EYED daughter fills actress Mangano's life when she's away from cameras.

COLGATE DENTAL CREAM STOPS TOOTH DECAY BEST

Better Than Any Other Way of Preventing Tooth Decay According to Published Reports!

READER'S DIGEST RECENTLY REPORTED on one of the most extensive experiments in dentifrice history! And here are additional facts: The one and only toothpaste used in this research was Colgate Dental Cream. Yes, and two years' research showed that brushing teeth with Colgate's right after eating stopped tooth decay best! Better than any other home method of oral hygiene!

YES, THE COLGATE WAY STOPPED MORE DECAY for more people than ever reported in dentifrice history! There were no new cavities for more than 1 out of 3 who used Colgate's as directed. No dentifrice can stop all decay, or help cavities already started. But brushing teeth right after eating with Colgate Dental Cream is the most effective way yet known to help your dentist prevent decay!

YOU SHOULD KNOW! Colgate's, while not mentioned by name, was the one and only toothpaste used in the research reported in July Reader's Digest.

SOITINLY, BUT PERHAPS YOUSE WOULD RADDER DISCUSS DE GREEK PHILOSOPHERS, PLATO OR ARISTOTLE OR---
WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT ARISTOTLE?
HE WUZ PLATO'S PUPIL-AN' HE WUZ DE FADDER OF NATURAL SCIENCE, LOGICIAN, METAPHYSICS NICHOMACHEAN ETHICS, POETICS AN' POLITICS---
BUT--BUT---
OR SHOULD I DISCUSS PHYSICS?.....BOHR'S THEORY OF ELECTRONS-DETOIMINED BY DE QUANTUM THEORY---
NO! NO!!
OR HIST'RY--MAYBE DE PUNIC WARS STARTIN' IN 264 B.C. BETWEEN ROME AN' CARTHAGE-OR--- DENNY! STOP!
I'M AFRAID YOU'RE WAY AHEAD OF THIS CLASS! I THINK YOU'D BETTER GO HOME NOW!!
AIN'T YOUSE GONNA GIMME HOMEWOIK TO DO?
NO! I'M GOING TO HAVE TO DO THE HOMEWORK TO KEEP UP WITH YOU!!
TEX, DIDN'T YOU PROMISE TO MARRY MISS DE MEANOR WHEN SHE WAS STAYING AT YOUR DUDE RANCH??
NO, SIR-I NEVER WENT THAT FAR!
BUT ON THE EVENING OF JULY 16th, SHE DID SUFFER YOU TO KISS HER, DIDN'T SHE?
WELL, NOW-I RECKON SHE DID LET ME KISS HER ONCE OR TWICE--
BUT THERE WARN'T MUCH SUFFERIN' ABOUT IT, FAR AS I COULD SEE!!

Right Around HOME with MYRTLE
by Dudley Fisher
WELL, ALICE, YOU'VE BEEN WANTING TO GO SOUTH FOR THE LAST TEN YEARS. SHALL WE JOIN UP AND GO ALONG?
IN THIS OLD HAT?
JUST PUT ON A HAIR NET, ALICE!
NOBODY WEARS HATS WHERE WE'RE GOING!
MAKE UP YOUR MIND, ALICE.
WE WANT TO KEEP AHEAD OF THE NEXT COLD FRONT.
I WAS SUPPOSED TO HAVE THE CANASTA CLUB NEXT TUESDAY.
BUT IF YOU'RE NOT HERE ~~~
I THINK IT'S RUTH'S TURN, ANYHOW!
OH, FREDDIE! WOULDN'T IT BE WONDERFUL IF WE WERE GOING ALONG?
WE COULD GO LOTS OF PLACES IF YOU DIDN'T HAVE TO BUY SIX DRESSES BEFORE WE GOT STARTED!
HOW ABOUT GIVING ME A HAND WITH THIS STORM DOOR?
I SUPPOSE YOU KNOW WHAT YOU'RE DOING, BUT YOU'LL MISS A LOT OF FUN THROWING SNOWBALLS
GEE, SLUG! I DON'T SEE WHY WE COULDN'T DRIVE SOUTH.
WE CAN, IF YOU AND THE TWINS WILL SWITCH FROM TENDERLOIN STEAKS TO CATERPILLARS.
ANTI-FREEZE
NONE OF THIS SOUTHERN STUFF FOR ME! I'M GOING NORTH WHERE A MAN'S A MAN AND A DOG IS A MALEMUTE.
I'LL STAY HERE AND BE A MARSH-MALEMUTE!
IF SUSIE HAD MARRIED THE MAN I HAD ALL PICKED OUT FOR HER, I'D BE TAKING TRIPS AROUND THE WORLD... BUT SHE COULDN'T SEE ANYBODY BUT FREDDIE.
I KNOW— ARNOLD JUST SWEPT ME OFF MY FEET.
I THOUGHT YOU FOLKS STARTED SOUTH!
WE DID.. BUT POOR ALICE'S PORTSIDE MOTOR CONKED OUT, AND WE WERE LOSING ALTITUDE SO FAST WE THOUGHT WE'D BETTER TURN BACK FOR A CHECKUP.
RELAX AND STAY HERE! WE'LL HAVE MORE FUN RIGHT AROUND HOME.

Prince Valiant
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAROLD R FOSTER
Synopsis: PRINCE VALIANT AND HIS FRIENDS LEAVE THE RUINED CASTLE OF SIEUR DU LUC RATHER HURRIEDLY, THEIR NERVES BADLY SHATTERED BY HIS EXPERIMENTS WITH A GENIE WHO ROARS AND HURLS FLAMING ROCKS INTO THE SKY.
JUST AS THEY ARE SAFELY AWAY FROM THE CASTLE THEY GET ANOTHER SHOCK. "AS A PARTING GIFT," ANNOUNCES VAL, "SIEUR PRESENTED ME WITH SOME OF HIS MAGIC POWDER."
AS A PUPIL OF THE GREAT WIZARD, MERLIN," BEGINS VAL LEARNEDLY, "I BELIEVE THE VIRTUE LIES IN THIS POWDER AND THE SYMBOLS AND INCANTATIONS ARE UNNECESSARY......"
"...WE WILL SPILL A LITTLE INTO THE FIRE..."
HOW WAS VAL TO KNOW THAT THE SIEUR DU LUC HAD ACCIDENTALLY DISCOVERED GUNPOWDER?
FOR MANY MINUTES THERE IS AN OMINOUS SILENCE. AS THE SMOKE CLEARS AWAY EACH ONE CAN TELL, BY LOOKING AT HIS COMPANIONS, JUST HOW MUCH GOOD LOOKS HE HAS LEFT!

THEY LOVE AND RESPECT THEIR LEADER, BUT THIS IS TOO MUCH!
